Dear Mr and Mrs. Donald and family—

We your friends and neighbours have gathered together to spend another hour or two in a social way with you before you take your departure from our midst.

Time coming three years ago we have found you to be real neighbours, hard working and honest, willing to offer your home at any time, or to lend a helping hand to any one in need, and when misfortunes' have come you have carried on in spite of disasters.

Our best wishes go with you and you had this fall, we felt we must in some small way return some of the kindness which you have given to others.

Besides we also wish to express in some tangible way a feeling of regret that you are soon to leave our community.

Kindly accept token of our expression we ask you to accept this address and hope that it will help to replace part of your loss.

With it please accept the very best wishes for your future prosperity for good luck and prosperity in your new home.

'ALL-BRAN Relieves Common Constipation*

Meals that are low in "bulk" are a common failing of the average American diet. Frequently, these meals result in irregular habits.

Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" is often a consequence. This condition is dangerous because it may lead to headaches and loss of appetite. Even serious disease may develop.

Banish the danger of a diet low in "bulk" by eating ALL-BRAN regularly. This delicious cereal is an abundant source of gentle "bulk".

Within the body, it absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass, which exercises and strengthens intestinal muscles, and cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily, with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

How much pleasanter to enjoy this natural food in place of pills and drugs. Serve ALL-BRAN either as a cereal, or cooked into muffins, breads, etc. Eat it regularly for regular habits.

ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Stephanie Goes South

By Marian P. Johnson

"Oh, what!" snapped Stephanie Chadwick.

The window was the desk of a ship; the models, bronzed men and dashingly tanned girls made a charming group. Stephanie, herself, was one of them—the lady in white, perhaps!

"No—not the white," she decided, surveying the model with a critical eye. "How that blue and pink ever there, in the cotton mesh...."

"Of course," conceded Stephanie a little uncertainly, "I could pretend!"

And so she slipped from the monotonous gray mist of the February afternoon into the humming treasure house that was Clayton's department store.

"I'm going South," she carried to the saleswoman "Let me see something appropriate, please!"

She began trying them on—the yellow sun dress with the bands of orange and no back at all. And the great cape hat to match. The blue and pink cotton mesh, suggestive of delicate rose that billowed about her dark loveliness. He soft cloud.

With the evening things Stephanie came to earth again. She glanced desperately at her wrist watch, exclaimed, "Heavens! I'm late!" and began getting into her own things with feverish haste.

Stephanie paused, unnoticing, into the February slush. The South had lain the warm fingers of its golden sunshine upon her.

And so she clung to the mad game she had begun. She went to the steamship office, and stood, with hands filled with multi-colored folders, her heart racing.

"Steve Chadwick! cried a familiar voice.

"Helen Blaine!" echoed Stephanie.

"This disgustingly good-looking creature is my cousin, John Roger Thorne," chattered Helen. "Stephanie Chadwick, John. I've hardly seen her since we were in school!"

Mr. Thorne's gray eyes looked from Stephanie's face to the hands with the folders.

"So you're going to Bermuda," he remarked.

"I'll tell you," suggested Mr. Thorne, "let's all have dinner somewhere, and then dance.

"Oh, I couldn't," said Stephanie quickly. "I—I'm not dressed for it."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Helen. "We'll go to the theatre, then I'll call Ted King!"

Helen and Ted went off somewhere after dinner so Stephanie and John Roger explored alone—and talked about Bermuda. John Roger described it to her.

It wouldn't do any harm just to listen, Stephanie told herself. She wouldn't have to see him again. She'd pretend it was all true just for tonight.

That John Roger Thorne seemed filled with a strong determination to see more of Stephanie. He wanted to call to take her places; to get to be real friends before they started to Bermuda!

Standing out day before Clayton's window Stephanie looked at the young man seated, and suddenly a cold little chill of realization caught at her heart. Helen and Ted their last evening together — hers and John Roger's. "He's going to Bermuda," she thought wretchedly, "but I'm staying at home." And then the young man model began to blur and Stephanie had to wink very fast before she could see him clearly again.

"I'll make some sort of excuse," she decided. "I'll have to!"

"Tomorrow," murmured John Roger, softly, "Tomorrow, Steve!"

There was a lump in Stephanie's throat.

"I'm not going to Bermuda," she said. And suddenly he began to blur, like the young man model in Clayton's window.

"Why, Steve? demanded John Roger.

Winking very fast, Stephanie told him. Not the excuse she had planned. Only the truth!

"It was a game," she confessed. "I was pretending—because I was to so much to go! I never dreamed I'd see you again," she added hurriedly. "How ever could I know you'd be going there? And would keep coming to see me? And asking me questions? Well," she concluded, with a perfectly good laugh that was only a little shaky, "Good-by, John Roger. See Bermuda for me!"

"Now then here, young lady," said John Roger Thorne, holding her close, "don't think you're going to get away from me at this late date! You are going to Bermuda! Do you understand?"

Stephanie understood. They were not in the tub at all. They were in the silver beach. She was wearing the rose-colored organdie cloud. She was in John Roger's arms and there was soft, skringed music playing. She could even catch the fragrance of orange blossoms—warm, and pungent and sweet!

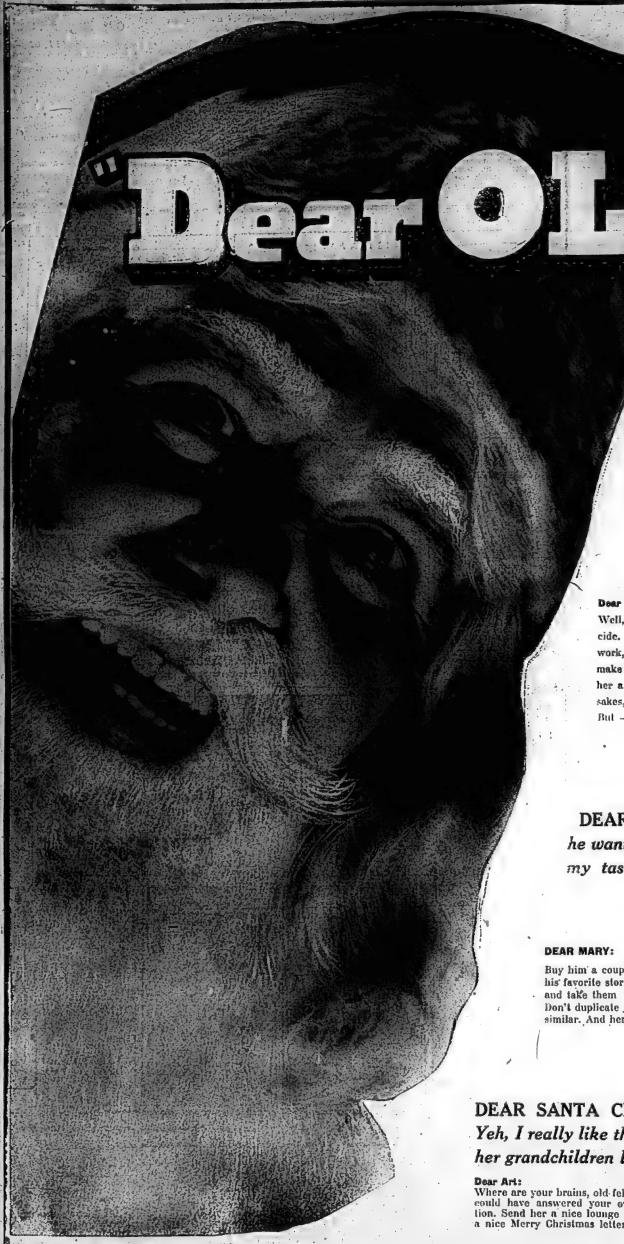
TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)



When Tarzan recovered consciousness, he found his body overrun by pygmies who were just completing the act of trussing him up. Not knowing how well they had done the job, he strained against his bonds and the mighty surge sent the pygmies flying in all directions.

The cords held fast, and the little men began to argue whether he should be slain now or later. It was decided to wait, for there was no time for a feast. The recent mysterious events had made them nervous. Tonight every warrior must be on guard against attack.

High in a tree, Mbima hugged himself in grief and terror. His primal, principally terror, for the little monkey dragged their prisoner to a hut, where two remained as guards. The Jungle ord was the helpless captive of a people who, despite their miniature bodies, were as cruel and merciless as any tribe of giant cannibals.

Now a score of the pygmies half carried, half dragged their prisoner to a hut, where two remained as guards. The Jungle ord was the helpless captive of a people who, despite their miniature bodies, were as cruel and merciless as any tribe of giant cannibals.

"Dear OLD Santa"

—here we've been married half a year and now it's Christmas and for the life of me I don't know what to get the little girl! I think she'd like a lamp for the living room—but then again she might prefer an electric cleaner. Golly, Santa, as one old married man to another can't you help me out?

Anxiously,
JOE

Dear Joe:
Well, young fellow, it shouldn't be hard to decide. Does this young lady do her own housework, or has she a maid? With someone in to make the beds and wash the dishes, I'd say buy her a lamp . . . . but otherwise, well, for gosh sakes, help her out with the vacuum cleaner! But — whichever it is — buy her something personal, too! A compact, a bag, lingerie, stockings. What it is doesn't matter just so long as it's all for her and you bought it!

Sincerely,
SANTA

DEAR SANTA: My husband has a million ties and the worst of it is he wants more. He's crazy on the subject of neckwear but doesn't trust my taste. What will I do?

Frantically yours,
MARY

DEAR MARY:
Buy him a couple of ties, of course! But before you visit his favorite store, wrap up half a dozen of his pet cravats and take them along. Show them to the sales person. Don't duplicate just what he's wearing, but get something similar. And here's a big word of caution: Don't try to set a new style for him! Buy him the kind of pattern he's been wearing. Remember—you can change his brand of coffe on him, but his neckties—never!

Love from

DEAR SANTA CLAUS: Don't faint—I want to buy a present for my mother-in-law. Yeh, I really like the old girl 'cause she lives out-of-town— though she does insist that her grandchildren look like her. What will I give her, Santy, huh?

Dear Art:
Where are your brains, old fellow? You could have answered your own question. Send her a nice lounge chair and a nice Merry Christmas letter to boot! After she's tried the chair, she may even admit she likes you better than you think.

Sincerely,
SANTA CLAUS

My Irrevocable Decision

it was widespread, and the effect it would have in this country. That was first.

"I reminded him of what I have often told him—that I have been in the years passed and that's this:

"The Crown in this country through centuries has been largely arrived at many of the prerogatives but today, while that is true, stands for far more than it ever had done in its history.

"The imputation of its integrity is beyond all question far greater than it has ever been, and that is not only the last link of Empire that is left but a guarantee in this democracy so long as it exists in that integrity, against many evils that have attacked and injured other countries.

"There is no man or woman in this country to whatever party they may belong who would not subscribe to that, but while this feeling vastly depends on the respect that has grown up in the last three generations for the Monarchy, it might not take so long in the face of the kind of criticism to which it was being subjected to lose that power far more rapidly than it was built up, and once lost it is doubtful if anything could restore it.

Prime Minister's View Explained

"Now that was the basis of my talk on that second and I expressed my anxiety and then my desire that such criticism should cease, have said to do so.

"He said that in my view my position in this country would be weakened against the effect of such criticism.

"I told His Majesty that I had looked forward to his return as a new page in a new age. He has so many of the qualities which are necessary to a King.

"I told him I had come naturally and wanted to talk to him not as with him as a friend. Perhaps I am saying what I should not say, whether it did not ask His Majesty whether I might say this—but I will say it because I do not think it would mind and I think it illustrates the basis on which our talks had been held.

"He said to me, not once, but many times during these many, many hours we have had together, especially towards the end, he said to me: 'You and I must settle this matter together. I will not have anyone interfering.'

Dangers Seen

"Well, I then pointed out the danger of the divorce proceedings: That if a weekly paper was to be issued which left the matter in suspense for some time, that period of suspense I said would be worse than even everyone would be talking and when once the story began it would go on some time in this country, a most difficult position for myself and for him, and here might well be the danger which both he and I have seen through all this, and one of the

"It was on that aspect of the question that I spoke for the last hour and I went away, glad that the ice had been broken.

"My conversation at that moment was clear and for some little time I had no further opportunity.

"I begged His Majesty to consider what I had said. I said I had pressed him for no kind of an answer but would he consider everything that I had said. The first time I saw him was November 16.

Meeting at Buckingham Palace

"That was at Buckingham Palace. By that date the Decree Nisi was pronounced in the divorce case and I felt it my duty on that occasion, His Majesty had send for me—I felt it my duty to begin the conversation and I spoke to him for a long time, I suppose, on the question of marriage.

"I saw him Monday, the 16th, and I began by giving him my view on a possible marriage.

View on Particular Marriage

"I told him I did not think that a particular marriage was one that would receive the approbation of the country.

"That marriage would have involved a lady becoming Queen and I did tell His Majesty more that I might be a merchant of the old Victorian days, but I certainly could not say this of me—that I did not know what the reaction of the British people would be to any particular course of action.

"I told him that so far as they went I was certain that that would be impossible.

"He cannot go further into the details but that was the substance that I pointed out to him that the position of the King's wife was different from the position of the wife of any citizen of the country.

"It was part of the duties of the King that he pays. His wife becomes the Queen. The Queen becomes the Queen of the country and therefore in the choice of the Queen the views of the people must be heard.

"It is the truth expressed in those lines which came home to the people as the many of you!

"His will is not his own for he himself is subject to his duties. He may not as no valued persons do, choose for himself. He may not choose the people's happiness and the health of the whole state."

Kept Others Informed by King

"And then His Majesty said to me, and I had his permission to tell you this, that he wanted to tell me something that he would not like to tell me.

He said: 'I am going to marry Mrs. Simpson and I am prepared to go.'

I said 'Sir, that is most grievous news and it is impossible for me to make any response to you today.'

He told the Queen that night. He told the Duke of York and the Duke of Gloucester the next day and the Duke of Kent the next. He then out of London, either on Wednesday or Thursday, and for the rest of that week so far as I know he was considering that point.

He met me again on Wednesday, the 25th of November.

"Meantime the announcement had been made to me that a possible compromise might be arranged to avoid those two possibilities that had been seen, first in the distance and then approaching very nearer and nearer.

"This compromise was that the King should marry and that Parliament should be asked to pass legislation giving the lady to be the King's wife without the position of Queen.

"I saw him on the Wednesday-Monday. Nov. 25. He asked me if that proposition had been put to me and I said 'yes' and he asked me what I thought about it.

"I told him that I had given it no considered opinion but if he asked me my personal view I should not ask parliament would never pass it.

Cabinet Has Considered Question

"I said that if he desired I would examine it formally. He said he did so before.

"Then I said it will mean my putting it in formal shape before the cabinet and communicating with all the prime ministers of the dominions and asked if that was his wish.

"He told me that it was and I said I would do it.

"On Dec. 2, he asked me to see him, and then I said I would send a long for an audience later that week because some inquiries I had thought proper to make had not been completed.

"But they had gone far enough to show me that neither in the dominions nor here would be passed the prospect of such legislation being accepted.

"His Majesty asked me if I could answer his question. I gave him the reply that I was afraid it was impracticable for those reasons, and I do not think His Majesty was hurt.

"His Majesty said he was not surprised at that answer. He took my answer without demur or protest and never referred to it again.

Interview on Monday.

"I want you to put yourselves in His Majesty's position. He would be in his feelings are and to know how glad he would have been had this been possible.

"There was no formal decision of any kind until I come to the history of yesterday but when we finished that conversation I polished out that possible alternatives had been mulled and it had really brought him into the position that it would be placed in a grievous situation between two conflicting causes in his own heart, either complete abandonment of the people on which his heart was and remaining as the king, or doing as he informed me he has prepared to do in the talk which I have reported, and of going and later contracting this marriage if possible.

King Man of Great Experience

"We had many talks discussing the aspect of this from every point of view most realm—and it is difficult to realize—that His Majesty is not a boy.

"He looks so young that we all think of him as a boy but he is not a boy. He is a mature man with a wide and great experience of life and the world.

Three Months Before King

"He stated had before the three months which he requested in the course of which he was to see me and again and again: that if he was to be married his wife legally, that he would not allow a ceremony to arise in which he could not do that and that because of the church as well as His deliverance is the Church of England he keeps as to be able.

"He wished to go in such circumstances that the succession of his brother would be made with as little delay as possible. He said he may say that any idea to be in his mind that he could abdicate and go to live abroad was absurd.

"He left at Belvedere because he said he was not going to London while these things were in a possible marriage because crowds. I honor and respect him for the manner in which he behaved at that time.

Message From Stanley Baldwin

"I have something which I shall wit touch the House. I have here a message which was sent to me by His Majesty this morning and I have his authority to read it.

"It is just simply in pencil and it says:

"The Duke of York and the King have always been on the most affectionate terms and the King is confident that the Duke will desire nothing more than to see the whole Empire."

"Now, I would say a word or two on the King's position.

King's Fractious of Ultimate

The King comes to speak for himself. "The King has told us that he cannot bear the thought of any other way to carry these almost intolerable burdens of the Crown than the woman at his side, and we think that this crisis, if I may use the word, has arisen rather than later from that very frankness of His Majesty's character which is one of his many attractions.

"It would have been perfectly possible for His Majesty not to tell me this at the date when I saw him and to have left me for some months to come, but he realized the damage that would be done by the interval by gossip and rumors that talk and the fact that declaration to me when he did on purpose to avoid that. His might be done not only here but throughout the Empire, to that His Majesty felt it his duty which we are all determined to sustain.

King Has Never Wavered.

"He has told his ministers and he has never wavered from it. I went to the house to understand that. He has given me his duty to the very serious consideration all representatives that his advisers might give him and not until he had fully considered them did he make public his decision.

"There has been no sign of confusion in this matter. The last few days of meeting these last days have been difficult, and he has spoken to me most closely around him, in trying to help him make the choice which he has now made and I have talked and the king has made his decision to take this moment to send his gracious message because of his confidence and hope that he will preserve the unity of this country and the whole empire and avoid those fatefully differences that might so easily have arisen.

"These last days have been days of great strain, but I am sure that for the last and I hope it will be in the house when I was assured, before I left the house, that I might say that intimate circle that was with the King that the evening that I had left nothing undone that I could have done to show him from the bottom of my heart how sad evident.

"While there is not a soul among us who will not regret this from the bottom of his heart there is not a soul among us who will not wish to judge.

"We are not the judges. His Majesty has announced his decision.

Duke of York Will Succeed

"He has told us what he wants us to do and we are going to obey our wishes.

"At a later stage this evening a shall ask leave to bring in the necessary bill so it may be read for the first time. I shall then ask leave to move the second reading and for the remaining stages of the Bill. It is very important that it should be passed into law tomorrow and I shall then ask for the House tomorrow a motion to take the private members' time and suspend the four o'clock rule.

"Now I have only two other things to say. My colleagues will forgive me for saying now what I have said to them a few minutes ago: I have told the House that yesterday morning when the Cabinet met, Mr. Duff Cooper, the Secretary announcement, officially they passed a resolution that Parliament will it, I sent a message to His Majesty that they had been good enough to allow me to read.

"Baldwin then read the message sent to the King from the Cabinet and the King's reply, both of which had already been read in the House of Lords.)

Bennett With Dignity

"My last words on that subject are that I am convinced that where I failed no one could have succeeded. Those who know His Majesty best would know what I mean.

"This House today is a theatre that is being watched by those whole world and let us conduct ourselves with that dignity that His Majesty himself has shown in this hour of his trial. And, whatever be our regret at the outcome of the message, let us fulfill his wishes to do what he asks and do it with speed and let no word be spoken today that [illegible] speaker or colleague which may cause us days as come.

"Let no word be spoken that causes pain to any heart and let us not forget today the reverend, beloved figure, Queen Mary. Think what all this time has meant to her and think of her when we speak or write and let no word be spoken during this debate.

"We have after all, as guardians of democracy in this little island, to take that we do our work to maintain the integrity of monarchy, that monarchy which, as I said in the beginning of my speech, is now the sole link of the whole Empire and guardian of our freedom.

"Let us look forward and remember our country and the trust reposed by our country in this, the House of Commons, and let us rally behind the throne. Let us rally behind him and help him.

"Whatever the country may have suffered by what we are passing through may soon be repaired and we may take a hand again in trying to make this country a better country for all the people in it."

HOUSE MEETS

these anxious days he has had the sympathy of us all in the difficulties with which he has been faced.

"This is due not only to the nation as a whole, but personally to a strongest human emotions but to the personal affection that has inspired in his people.

Many Will Kneel

"No British monarch has been so well known to his subjects. People not only in the United Kingdom but throughout the Commonwealth and the Empire have seen him during a remote ruler—many of them have been personally acquainted with him—he has visited places where many of them live.

"He has all those of his personal charm, courage and ready sympathy with suffering. We are told that many (Labor) know how he felt for the miners in their time of trial and how he showed his practical human interest in the unemployed and the people of the distressed areas.

"Now purely personal and human considerations have to be reconciled with the obligations and responsibility of his high calling. I am sure that all are tried to see if a solution can be seen way in which this conflict could be resolved.

Heard Against Decision

"We hoped it would not come to abdication but the King has made his decision. He is resolved to abide by his duty. We can do no more than accept it. The wish of all his people will be that he may have a long happy life.

"We can all appreciate the strain these events have placed on the Prime Minister. He is entitled to our sympathy. I am sure that he has received a severe shock. He will take time to recover from it.

"The position of anyone who in these days of present proportions has to decide on any account to the throne is obviously one of great difficulty.

"It will be the endeavour of all of us to do what we can to relieve on that burden. On behalf of my colleagues I would like to express our deepest sympathy to Queen Mary and the other members of the royal family."

MR. JOHN A. KERR FRACTURES HIS HIP

Mr. John A. Kerr while walking near his residence at 191 Charles Street on Wednesday slipped upon the ice and fell to the ground. He was conveyed to the hospital and upon examination it was found that he had sustained a fractured hip, which will necessitate his confinement to the house for some time. Mr. Kerr's friends will regret to learn of his misfortune.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 10.—(CP)—The mining department staged a strong rally this afternoon and volume expanded to show a turnover of about 1,200,000 shares for the day. Representative issue in all groups moved upward but interest centred in Dome, Mosaic, Buffalo Ankerite, Prancoeur, Read-Authier, Sladen, Red Lake and a few other golds along with Calder, Noranda, Orville Falconbridge of the base metals and these were well up for the day.

Reduce Varicose or Swollen Veins

This Safe Easy Way. Prove It At Small Cost

Swollen veins may become dangerous and sometimes break. Before resorting to operations or injections sufferers are advised to get an original bottle of Emerald Oil at Lamb's Drug Store or any pharmacist and start to reduce those veins and bunches at once with this healing oil. A small bottle will last a long time because it is very concentrated and a little goes very long way. Apply night and morning with a soft brush or finger tips as directed until the swelling is reduced. So effective is Emerald Oil that it is highly prized in reducing troublesome simple swelling due to strain and hastens their disappearance.

Will be Queen Some Day

H.R.H. Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the new King, who becomes heir to the British Crown.

Some day she will probably be known as Queen Elizabeth.

New Queen is Commoner First Since Days of Henry VIII

HISTORY OF QUEENS

(By The Associated Press)

Britain's new Queen is the first commoner to share the throne since the time of the bet-married Henry VIII.

Blue-eyed, dark-haired daughter of an aristocratic Scottish family, she had long been known to the world as the Duchess of York and the mother of Princess Elizabeth, the heir to the throne, and Princess Margaret Rose.

Yet, until her engagement to the Duke of York in January, 1923, she was virtually unknown to the British public.

She was Lady Elizabeth Angela Marguerite Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Strathmore and Kinghorne. The grim and stately seat of the Earl was Glamis Castle in the Thanedom once belonging to MacBeth.

Apart from two terms spent in a day school in London, she was educated entirely at home. She disdained music, learned to become a needlewoman, took a turn at acting and engaged in the outdoor life of a British gentlewoman.

Once, attired in housemaid's garb, she showed a group of American tourists over Glamis Castle.

While the new Queen comes from an old Scottish family, and her husband has often referred to her as "my Scottish wife", she was born August 4, 1900, at the family's English seat St. Paul Waldenbury.

Simple Romance

There, on a wintry Sunday morning, January 14, 1923, the second son of George V proposed and was accepted. It is traditional that Dukes of York "marry for love" and the romance was termed "a simple old-fashioned love match."

But it was not so simple for the Duke. The Earl of Strathmore later disclosed the Duke proposed three times to his daughter before she accepted.

There was no modern precedent for the marriage of a commoner with a royal prince soon to be on the throne in the succession though a number of English princesses were wed to commoners, including the Duke's sister who married Viscount Lascelles, later the Earl of Harewood, in 1922.

George IV Secretly Married

George IV, however, was secretly married to the widow Mary Fitzherbert, though they separated before he came to the throne, and before him James II married Anne Hyde, daughter of Lord Clarendon. She died before he became King.

The Duke of York and Lady Elizabeth were married with full pomp the April 26, 1923, in Westminster Abbey. George V had conferred on the bride the dignity of a Princess the day before and at the wedding breakfast he announced her desecration as a royal highness.

Not a 'Modern Girl'

Queen Mary, with whom she became increasingly popular, had said her new daughter-in-law was not one of those 'modern girls, thank heaven."

The Duchess avoided extremes. In her dress she has been uniformly conservative and there were no plucked eyebrows and no bobbed hair.

Coming from a large family, with her share of brothers whose influence had been enough to make a tom-boy out of her she was likewise popular with her royal brother-in-law.

Edward Called Her Queen

Edward, then Prince of Wales, looking forward to the day when his brother might succeed him to the throne, called her "Queen Elizabeth".

As a public personage she took her place by the side of her husband in fulfilling the ceaseless engagements of the ruling house, though she has never displayed the energy that typified Queen Mary.

Her first child, Princess Elizabeth, was born April 21, 1926. The Duchess early learned what it was to be a public personage for, before her daughter was a year old, she had to leave the infant with her grandparents and join the Duke in his Australian tour.

The second child, Princess Margaret Rose, was born August 21, 1930.

Glamis Castle, 'Not since Charles I was born in Dunfermline had a royal child been born in Scotland.'

While devoting herself to the education of her daughters, she continued to fulfill royal engagements and to carry on a reputation for friendliness that was particularly marked because of its contrast with the reserve of her husband.

CANADA ACCEPTS THE ABDICATION

Action Taken by Premier King Under Section of Westminster Statute

Ottawa, Dec. 10 (CP)—The Dominion Cabinet today passed an order-in-council which was approved by the Governor General authorizing the British government to include Canada in the Act of Acceptance of the king's abdication which the British parliament will pass.

The action has been taken under section four of the Statute of Westminster which makes a provision for such procedure and will avoid the necessity of immediately assembling the Canadian parliament. The action will be ratified when parliament meets in January.

"No act of parliament of the United Kingdom passed after the commencement of this act shall extend, or be deemed to extend, to a Dominion as part of the law of that Dominion, unless it is expressly declared in that Act that that Dominion has requested and consented to the enactment thereof."

The abdication will necessitate a new commission for the governor-general and immediately the Canadian parliament passes the bill confirming the abdication and King George becomes sovereign the cabinet will have to be renewed. King Edward remains on the throne until the abdication is ratified by the British parliament.

No immediate announcement will be made of the details of Canada's part in the negotiations which led up to the abdication.

The Canadian government has not decided when the details will be made public.

It is possible it will be done after a conference of the various members of nations of the British Commonwealth.

Final decision has not been reached whether the Canadian parliament will have to pass an act ratifying the abdication and appointment of George VI some hold a resolution passed by both Houses will be sufficient.

MRS. W. SIMPSON STAYS AT CANNES UNTIL CHRISTMAS

Does Not Expect to See Edward Until After That Time

NO STATEMENT

She asserted through another intermediary, Herman Rogers, that there is not "the remotest possibility" that Edward will join her at Lou Viel Villa here "now or later."

Lord Brownlow said Mrs. Simpson had been informed of his decision before reporters and photographers received word that the British monarch was leaving his throne.

Not Going to Riviera

"Not only is the King not coming to the villa," Rogers said for Mrs. Simpson, "but he is not coming to the Riviera.

"What his definite plans are we do not know but we do know that much.

"There are no changes so far as Mrs. Simpson's plans are concerned. She plans to stay here at least until after Christmas."

Mrs. Simpson earlier had talked at length on the London telephone.

Servants said she spoke to him when was "on the line" for some time, in communication with London. Her solicitor Theodore Goddard, reached London today. An airplane reporter, to carry his hand-brief cases, left Le Bourget this morning.

Eight French detectives stood guard outside the villa, inside were British plainclothesmen.

Grows Curious

Curious groups collected on the Boulevard Croisa. The detectives listened to amused glances from the old man, wearing Rust-Indian styled trousers, sitting below them who knee delivered an oration urging the British Crown prince be referred to the League of Nations.

Even as London burned with word of his imminent abdication, the twice divorced American woman remained her willingness to join him up "if it will solve the problem".

Tension grew as the hours wore of her hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, hummed with excitement, marked by swift, secret movements of visitors from London.

Rumors were everywhere. One went so far as to say that Mrs. Simpson already had departed, for there, no one seemed to know. Her hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers denied this emphatically. So did her spokesman, Lord Brownlow.

Rumors Denied

"On my word of honor," Lord Brownlow said, "she has not departed and has no plans to depart."

French agents de police remained on guard, at any rate; and the men from Scotland Yard, picked to protect Mrs. Simpson, were still here.

Her solicitor, Theodore Goddard, who flew from London yesterday—a journey regarded as so precarious for him that his personal physician, Dr. W. Douglas Kirkwood, accompanied him—would not discuss the purpose of his sudden visit.

The departure of the lawyer and doctor and the visit of Lord Brownlow did not, however, indicate whether their business may have been ill was completed. Lord Brownlow said Mrs. Simpson had "signed no documents".

CONTROLLING TUBERCULOSIS

Everyone knows about diseases that at one time caused great fear, but of which that have been brought under control by the discovery of the cause and control of germs. Typhoid fever is one illustration. Twenty-five or more years ago, it was not uncommon for cities to have death rates from typhoid reaching as high as 50 or 75 deaths out of every 100,000 living persons; today it is unusual for cities of that size to have a death rate of more than one or two per 100,000, and in many cities none for typhoid for the last two years or less than one.

Tuberculosis is another plague of a generation or two ago, which like other ones was surrounded because of it.

Diphtheria, the killer of children a few years ago, is to-day becoming a rare disease. Scarlet fever remains here, and had a death or even a case of diphtheria been known in a community, there was immediate isolation against this disease.

Smallpox, that scourge and terror of our forefathers, is now seldom heard of. And so it goes. Many diseases are now controllable by public measures, are now practically stamped out.

Tuberculosis has not yet been conquered, but it is encouraging to note that more progress has been made in conquering this enemy during the first 25 years of this century than during all the rest of the history of the world. The death rate in Ontario in 1900, shortly after the National Sanitarium Association was organized, was estimated at 192 per 100,000 living persons.

It is a splendid thought and help to the goal to right we hopefully enter the last day of the year, but let everyone know the last lap calls for the greatest effort and if we are to succeed in gaining the complete mastery over this plague as we have over others, everyone must cooperate as never before.

Given the necessary financial support, the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives will continue their work.

Please send cash, gift to National Sanitarium Association, 21 College St., Toronto.

EDWARD CEASES TO REIGN

NEW KING WILL BE PROCLAIMED SATURDAY

Parliament Approves Abdication of Edward In Three Swift Hours

York Officially Became King at 1.52 p.m. Greenwich Time—Ex-King Edward Likely to be Known as Prince Edward For Time Being

EDWARD SIGNS ACT BY COMMISSION

Ex-King May Leave Homeland Tonight on Warship For Unknown Destination After Delivering Broadcast of Farewell to Empire

London, Dec. 11—(AP)—The greatest empire on the earth gave up Edward VIII as King today and placed his oldest brother, Albert Frederick Arthur George, on its throne.

In three swift hours, the Houses of Commons and Lords approved the abdication of the sovereign who chose marriage to a twice-divorced American instead of his ancient crown.

Then, with quick-precision, a Royal Commission gave royal assent to the Act, At 1:52 p.m. (8:52 a.m. E.S.T) Edward ceased to reign. At that moment the quiet Duke of York became King.

May Cross Channel by Warship

Tonight, perhaps by British warship, Edward is expected to cross the channel to France, to be near Wallis Warfield Simpson, the woman he loves.

It was report he would sail at midnight, from Dover. His destination was not disclosed.

First, at 10 o'clock, (5 p.m. E.S.T.) he will talk by radio to the empire.

Prime Minister Baldwin paid his first official visit to the new King this afternoon. He received a tremendous cheer from a crowd gathered outside the sovereign's home in Piccadilly.

The final scene in the House of Lords was a swift and simple enactment of old world parliamentary ritual.

The three peers of the Royal Commission retired and quickly donned their scarlet and ermine robes and oddly shaped black hats.

Throne in Lords Empty

A short red bench was placed at the steps to the dais. There, in the presence of more than half a hundred peers, one bishop, three peeresses and packed press and victors' galleries, the three Lords of the Royal Commission took their seats.

Members of Commons were summoned, to be informed in the usual manner that the King, choosing to be not personally present, had appointed the commissioners to give assent to an act."

The reading clerk pronounced the King's declaration of abdication, then the act itself. The clerk of parliament, standing at a side table facing the Lord Chancellor, turned about toward the members of Commons, jammed together at the end of the chamber beneath the gallery.

Norman-French Used

In traditional Norman French he intoned:

The new King, who was receiving distinguished visitors at his Piccadilly house when the hands of Big Ben pointed to 1.52, the instant of his accession, will take the

Title of Duke of Inverness May be Borne by Edward VIII

New King Will Decide on Title For Abdicated Brother

SCOTTISH TITLE

London, Dec. 11 (CP) — It was suggested today in some quarters that Edward VIII will eventually assume the title of Duke of Inverness.

Peers created in the present era become Ipso Facto members of the House of Lords, even though they bear a Scottish title. Sixteen Scottish peers, representing the older peerages, are elected for the duration of parliament.

The new King will decide what title his abdicated brother will bear, the House of Commons was told.

Sir Donald Somervell, Attorney General, said the "new king would deal with that when the time comes."

The Attorney General's declaration was made in response to a question by Hastings Lees-Smith, Labor.

DEMISE OF CROWN BILL IS SPEEDED THRU PARLIAMENT

Issue Of King Edward is Barred From Succession

SCENES IN COMMONS

Bill For Republic is Turned Down by Overwhelming Majority 403 to 5

London, Dec. 11 (CP)—Parliament today speeded the way for the abdication of King Edward VIII and the accession to the throne of the Duke of York.

The House of Commons and the House of Lords both gave approval to the "demise of the crown bill" which makes Edward's abdication effective as soon as royal assent is given the bill. It also bars any issue of Edward VIII from succession to the throne, provides that the Royal Marriages Act of 1772 shall not apply to Edward or his descendants.

Commons, which had given the bill first reading last night, passed it without record vote today on second and third readings in the space of six minutes.

Motion For Republic Lost.

Previously, by a crushing majority of 403 votes to 5, the House defeated James Maxton's motion for a republic. The motion by Maxton, the leader of the Independent Labor party, was in the form of an amendment to the bill.

King Edward VIII Broadcasts to Empire 5 p.m. EST Today

London, Dec. 11—(AP) — Edward VIII probably will broadcast his farewell words to the empire tonight from a room at Windsor Castle which he occupied as Prince of Wales.

It was understood wiring facilities had been arranged there. He is due to speak at 10 o'clock tonight (5 p.m. E.S.T.)

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—More persons than ever before listened to a man adjusted wireless dials tonight as Edward VIII bade his 500,000,000 subjects of a few hours ago farewell.

Virtually every activity of the nation will come to a halt at 10 p.m. (5 p.m. E.S.T.) when he is to make his address to the empire.

The British Broadcasting Corporation, whose facilities were utilized to start the message around the world, announced most of the last speech would be kept perpetually with the recordings of King George V's Christmas talks.

After delivery of Edward's words, Sir John Reith, Director-General of the BBC, decided to make this terse announcement: "All stations of the BBC are closing down."

Wiring arrangements were conducted during the day at Windsor Castle. The last previous time a broadcasting room was used there it had carried the description of King George's funeral, in St. George's Chapel.

As for the former King, his broadcast was stressed as that of a private citizen; the words he chose were interpreted as an expression of individual opinion.

Early tonight it was announced definitely the broadcast had been set for Augusta Tower of Windsor Castle.

NOT GUILTY OF ARSON

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 11—(CP)—Henry Kavanagh of Norwood, was found not guilty shortly before midnight of a charge of arson in the December sessions of the Peace. The Crown alleged on August 31, last, Kavanagh set fire to his rented home in Norwood in four different places seeking benefit from the $700 insurance he had just placed on the contents.

Crisis Means Charge Says Hitler's Paper

Berlin, Dec. 11 (AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, front-paging the British crown crisis for the first time, censured the press of other nations today for depicting into "a boulevard sensation" Britain's historic dilemma.

The newspaper said heartfelt sympathy is the reaction of all Germans but added "no nation emerges unchanged from such a crisis."

WHEN SCOTTISH CAPITAL WELCOMED NEW KI NG AND QUEEN

Edinburgh, ancient capital of Scotland, gave the Duke and Duchess of York the freedom of the city a short time before they became the empire's new King and Queen. The new Queen was formerly Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, descendent of an ancient Scottish family and immensely popular in Scotland. CROWDS SEEK TO SEE NEW KING

London, Dec. 11—Prime Minister Baldwin, who only a few days ago was hooted when he left his official residence at No. 10 Downing Street today, was given a popular demonstration as he left for the House of Commons.

The centuries-old Legislative Chamber was well filled but was in no sense packed as it was for yesterday's dramatic announcement of the abdication of a King. There was only a small crowd outside as the members assembled.

It was to the residence of the new King and Queen in Piccadilly that the crowds rushed.

During the early morning hundreds of persons milled about the Duke of York's home in the damp, misty cold, hoping for a glimpse of the new sovereigns and their two infant daughters. Princess Elizabeth, who some day may be Queen Elizabeth II, and Princess Margaret Rose.

The Prime Minister looked rested and far less anxious than during the past critical days. He bowed to Capt. Edward Algernon Fitzroy, the Speaker and took his seat in front of the government benches.

Police also placed a guard about the King's private flying field near Belvedere from which the King was expected to fly into exile.

Dealers Try to Buy Whole Stamp Issue

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—Stamp dealers yesterday tried to buy up the only outstanding stamp issue bearing a portrait of either of the two principals in yesterday's empire-shaking change of monarchs. They were, however, balked by the Post Office Department policy of protecting the public against small collectors.

Soon after the abdication of Edward VIII was announced, a rush of orders started pouring in on the philatelic division for the two-cent stamp of last year's Jubilee issue—which bears a portrait of the then Duke of York.

The first and biggest order, for 50,000 of those stamps, was placed by a London stamp firm. Had the order been filled, the Department's supply of that particular stamp would have been completely exhausted. But their distribution was placed on a strict quota basis: five to a customer.

Edward V Reigned Month Reign Shortest in History

Tragic Story of 12-Year-Old Prince Who Never Ascended Throne

RICHARD II's TRAGEDY

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 11 (CP Cable)—Only by peering into the dim recesses of the history of this realm is it possible to discover a king shorter than that of Edward VIII.

Every British child has heard something of "the murder of the little Princes in the tow'r." One was the 12-year-old Edward V. The other was his younger brother, York. Edward nominally succeeded his father in 1483. He never really ascended the Throne, his so-called reign lasting only a month when Richard of Gloucester or Richard III as he goes down in history, seized the Crown. The little Princes remained prisoners in the tower of London.

Regret is Dominant Note Of Provincial Newspapers

'Stern Words of Brave Man' is Comment of Manchester Guardian

London, Dec. 11.—(CP Cable)—The Manchester Guardian today described Edward VIII's abdication message as "stern words from a brave man."

Regret was the note generally sounded in provincial newspapers concerning the abdication.

"No sadder or braver words can be uttered by any man, be he monarch or roadmender, than the abdication that there are times when the dead past will not bury its dead, and that all one's personal future must be colored and conditioned by an irrevocable legacy from days not

YORK WILL RULE AS KING GEORGE VI

The choice ended speculation as to the title of the tall young King who was Duke of York before the accession of abdication of his brother, Edward VIII, was approved in both Houses of Parliament today and given effect by a Royal Commission.

In some quarters it had been believed he might have taken the title Albert I.

LITTLE EMOTION AS CANADA ACCEPTS KING'S DECISION

Order-in-Council Quickly Passed by Cabinet in Ottawa

PLEA FOR UNITY

Archbishop of Church of England Asks Support For New King

(By The Canadian Press)

With scarcely any show of emotion, Canadians accepted the abdication of King Edward VIII yesterday to renounce his throne. Prepared for the development by news of the constitutional crisis this week, they were ready to hail the accession of a new king—The Duke of York.

Likewise prepared, the Dominion Government acted swiftly at Ottawa to accept the King's abdication. An Order-in-Council was passed by Cabinet Council and signed by the Governor General authorizing the British Government to include Canada in the act of acceptance, which the British Parliament will pass.

A few judges and magistrates adjourned court sessions because they were uncertain of their status, believing it necessary to take the oath of allegiance to the new King before proceeding. The oath, however, will not be taken until Edward's abdication has been formally accepted.

POPE PIUS XI HOLDING OWN

Assisted With Mass While Lying In Bed

Vatican City, Dec. 11 (AP)—Lying in bed, Pope Pius XI assisted at Mass today in a chapel adjoining his sick room, after what was described as his most tranquil night since he was stricken with paralysis a week ago.

Vatican officials said the Holy Father was holding his own against the paralysis which has confined him to bed for the past week.

His early Mass last night relieving his Rosary and expressing gratitude the British throne had not fallen and a divorce might have become queen.

Although he might be lifted into an armchair today to strengthen his blood circulation and to relieve his restless spirit, it was considered absolutely out of the question that the 79-year-old Pontiff would be allowed actually to get up.

MOTHER TELLS LITTLE PRINCESS

Elizabeth, Heir Presumptive, Loses But Single Hour From Studies

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—Edward VIII's abdication spelled just a one-hour recess from lessons for little, fair-haired Princess Elizabeth.

A person in close touch with the Royal Household disclosed today the Princesses' fair little head went over her books when her mother, Britain's new Queen, entered the schoolroom and gently told her the important things.

If she didn't understand the full significance of what her mother told her, she was shrewd enough to know something of exceeding importance had happened.

Much of the tenseness of the moment was communicated to Princess Elizabeth, said a friend of the family, for she's an astute, sharp-witted little girl.

"For days she has been asking questions with which she has frequently caught the eye of newspaper pictures bearing the King's name. She has filled her schoolmates with questions regarding what was happening to 'Uncle David'."

FIRMS COUNT UP THEIR LOSSES THROUGH CRISIS

Coronation Manufacturers And Lloyd's Consider Abdication Results

VARIOUS ESTIMATES

Coronation Likely to be Held Next May on Schedule

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—Coronation manufacturers and Lloyd's, the great insurance firm, counted up their losses from the abdication of Edward VIII. today—but nobody knew, how high they were.

Newspaper estimates of a £20,000,000 ($100,000,000) trade loss were called excessive in well-informed quarters, however. The Conservative estimate placed it at £100,000 ($500,000).

Where the coronation in all likelihood will be held next May on schedule, but with new principals, the big banners and bales of coronation mugs, plaques, silver spoons and the like with Edward's name on the picture on them.

Public Reaction.

Public reaction in London to the dramatic events of yesterday were manifold.

"Long live King Edward" cried hundreds across a surging crowd of 15,000 which gathered in the fog outside Buckingham Palace last night.

Hundreds of others gathered outside 145 Piccadilly, residence of the Duke of York, and welcomed him boisterously when he drove up to the house.

"The institution of monarchy has outlived its usefulness."

"If the king was one-tenth as good as you say he was, why does every one want him to be unleaded?" he added. "It is because you know he was a weak creature and you mean to get rid of him."

The Duke of York will take the oath of office Saturday morning, probably, and then the "accession council", assembly of the privy council and other officials.

20 WOMEN WORKERS ARE OVERCOME BY GAS

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 11 (AP)—Gas seeping into their second-floor quarters in a rooming house, 20 women engaged in a WPA sewing project today. Eighteen were taken to hospitals for oxygen treatment.

Fire Chief Ivan Bacon, called to give first aid at the scene, explained the blaze was in serious condition. Crowds gathered about the front of the buildings as the unconscious women were carried to ambulances by police and firemen.

CONSTABLE ST. LOUIS MOVED TO OTTAWA

Inspector J. P. A. Savoie, of Dominion Headquarters R.C.M.P., Ottawa, was in the city yesterday visiting the local detachment of the "Mounties". Accompanying Inspector Savoie was Constable St. Louis, formerly of Ottawa detachment. Constable St. Louis has been moved to the Belleville detachment to replace Constable J. E. St. Louis, who was returned to the R.C.M.P. headquarters at Ottawa upon information lodged.

DECIDE TO HOLD SEED FAIR HERE

Belleville will be the site of the 1937 Quinte Seed Fair, it was unanimously decided at a annual meeting of the Quinte District Seed Growers' Association held in this city yesterday afternoon. The Fair will be held during the three days of March 17th., 18th and 19th. At the annual election of officers which took place following the business session of the meeting, J. Kennedy Hillier, was named President of the Association for the ensuing year. Other officers elected were Gordon Hancock, Petrborough, First Vice President; Carmel Richard, Alnwick, Second Vice President; Ed. Sommers, Bowmanville, Secretary, and Jos. Wilkes, Stirling, Treasurer.

NORTHERN ROADS ARE AGAIN SAFE

Roads are again passable through the northern section of the province for motor traffic after a condition during the past few days of risky and dangerous driving on account of their ice-coated condition, but chains were needed for the muddy and slippery spots it was stated today by bus and truck drivers entering the city. Glare ice which almost halted traffic on the roads on Wednesday has now been discovered by the continued thaw.

Penny Bank Deposits Show Good Increase

Belleville pupils of the four public schools again show a decided increase in Penny Bank deposits for the month of October, over the same period one year ago, it is indicated by a report of the Ontario Department of Education. During the month total deposits were listed at $10,903.65, up to the end of October, 1938, total deposits were $9,899.31.

CAR LOADS CHRISTMAS TREES PASS THRU CITY

Car loads of Christmas trees from the forests of New Brunswick and the Maritime Provinces, packed in their hundreds on the flat cars of the Canadian National Railway, are now passing through the city bound for western United States points. Several loads of the trees were observed this morning, they provided a soft nest for several truncated wrecks who were observed nesting comfortably on top of the piles.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)—Synopsis: Pressure is high over the central portion of the continent, also over the Pacific States. Light to moderate precipitation has occurred in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes, while in the Western Provinces the weather has been generally fair. It has been cold over Manitoba and Northwestern Ontario and comparatively mild in other parts of Canada.

Lake Superior—Moderate winds, mostly fair and cold; probably snowflurries near the Soo. Saturday: Fresh winds, shifting to southerly, mostly fair and becoming milder.

Manitoba—Fair today and Saturday and becoming milder.

Saskatchewan, Alberta—Mostly fair and mild today and Saturday.

POLICE COURT

Frank Sedore, Tweed, pleaded guilty to the possession of liquor not purchased from a Government vendor store, when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Loyd in the city's local police court. A conventional fine of $100.00 and costs was assessed. Sedore being unable to raise the fine was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail in default.

John M. Forest, Toronto motorist failed to answer to his name, when it was called in court today on a charge of speeding in this city. His Worship took the evidence of P. C. Taylor, who stated he had appreciabled Forest's car at an excessive rate of speed across the lower bridge. The summons had been served with a notice of trial, Chief Kidd stated.

"I see no reason why the officer should not be telling the truth and if the motorist wishes to dispute it find him guilty and assess a fine of ten dollars and costs," commented His Worship.

A charge of the negligent operation of a motor car was dismissed against Georg Delnard Sr., of Milford, while a charge of intoxication laid as a sequel to the former charge and against George Delnard Jr., was withdrawn. Both charges were laid by the O. P. P. following a local traffic accident, that happened on the Madoc road on Nov. 14th. Mr. and Mrs. Delnard and men sustained severe injuries as their car crashed into the ditch. "There is not sufficient evidence to convict these men," stated His Worship. Charles A. Payne, K.C. appeared for the defendants.

Animals That Hibernate Still Roam the Woods

Winter has refused to come to the hibernating animals in Maitland so far this season—or the denizens of the north country are undergoing a postponement of their instinctive habits of age-old tradition. You can believe it or not, but according to Archie Hyatt, resident of the L'Amable district, a visitor to the county Friday on official business yesterday afternoon.

In spite of the fact that snow covers the north country to a considerable depth, bears are still roaming the hills, open streams for hibernate groundhogs have been reportedly seen up to this late date in some districts, and skunks have not yet shown an inclination to hunt cosy winter quarters for their winter sleep.

"It might be the changing weather," admits the north country resident, "that's changing the habits of the animals, I don't know or the fact that we've had a late and fairly clear fall, but we consider no use bears out so late in the year, but the presence of ground hogs and skunks is something else again.

Partridges are few in the wood lots, deer have been numerous but very thin season, and bears have shown such a lack of timidity and boldness this year and increase in numbers that it has been the subject of comment even by veteran residents, according to the North Hastings winter-time trapper.

EDWARD'S EFFIGY MAY GO ON COIN

Question Will be Decided Today by Ottawa Cabinet

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—Whether the effigy of King Edward VIII will ever appear on a Canadian coin or stamp is to be decided today by Cabinet.

While it is one of the minor problems arising out of the abdication of King Edward and the accession of King George VI, it is nevertheless an anxious one for the officials of the mint and the Postmaster General's Department.

It is an old tradition neither coins nor stamps bearing the head of the sovereign shall be issued beyond the day in which he has ceased to reign. Accordingly none bearing the effigy of King George VI may be issued after the end of 1936. Similarly, if precedent is followed, the head of Edward VIII could only be used this year.

So no coins or stamps bearing Edward's portrait have been issued, but elaborate preparations had been made and dies and plates were about ready.

CUSTODY CONTEST WAGED IN COURT

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)—Legal contest for custody of 5-year-old Chester, Bell Parkinson was today being waged in supreme court here between her aunt, Mrs. Margaret Douglas, plaintiff, and the child's father, Richard Parkinson. As co-defendants with him are named the Protestant Children's Home and Science and Grace Jackson.

Last January the girl figured in a "kidnapping" story when her father took her from school where she had been sent by Mrs. Douglas with whom she then lived. The father, having obtained possession of her, had placed her, through the home, in the care of the Jacksons.

The girl told Mr. Justice A. C. Kingstone she did not like living with the Jacksons and preferred her aunt to her father. The childs mother died Nov. 24, 1935.

Mrs. Douglas testified the mother, nearing death, had entrusted Chester to her care, and she had taken her to her home.

Obituary

MRS. ISABELLA E. VALLANCE

After being in failing health for some time Mrs. Isabella Edna Vallance, widow of William H. Vallance, passed away at her late residence, 13 Highland Avenue, Belleville, on Thursday, Dec. 10th.

The late Mrs. Vallance was born in Dorsetshire, England, 71 years ago, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. John Harris. For sixty three years she had been a resident of Belleville and by all who knew her she was highly esteemed. In religion she was a member of Bridge Street United Church.

Surviving her are one son, William Vallance of Belleville; six daughters, Mrs. Fred Burke, Belleville; Mrs. William Ross, Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs. N. J. Burns, Belleville; Mrs. Ernest Taylor, Detroit; Mrs. Fred G. Goodman, Buffalo, N.Y.; and Miss Evelyn Vallance, Rochester, N.Y.; two brothers, Mr. Jesse Harris, Belleville, and Mr. George Harris of Chilliwack.

MRS. FRANK TOWLE
(Bancroft)

The death occurred at Bancroft on Thursday, Dec. 10th of Mrs. Towle, wife of Mr. Frank Towle of that village. She had been in failing health for some time.

LATE MRS. EDWARD F. SHARPE

The funeral of Mrs. Edward F. Sharpe took place Thursday afternoon from the late residence, 60 Gordon Street, and many friends gathered to pay their last tribute of respect and to evince their sympathy with the family in their sad bereavement. The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number.

The service in the home and at the Mausoleum in Belleville cemetery, where entombment took place, was conducted by the Rev. T. R. Maguire, Pastor of Bridge Street United Church, and the Rev. D. Campbell, pastor of Bridge Street United Church.

At the close of the church service in the home, the Last Rites of the Order of the Eastern Star were conducted by Worthy Matron, Mrs. Thelma Liddle, and Worthy Patron Mr. Charles Brown assisted by other members of Belleville Chapter No. 39.

MRS. JOSEPH THOMPSON
(Consecon)

After an illness of four weeks' duration, Mrs. Joseph Thompson passed away at the family residence in Consecon, on Prince Edward County, on Tuesday, Dec. 6th.

The late Mrs. Thompson was a maiden name was Miss Sarah Ann Hall, and reached the age of 71 years. For the last fifty years she had resided in the Consecon district and by all who knew her she was highly esteemed. She was a member of the Methodist Church of Consecon where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Sanders.

Entombment was made at Wellington cemetery.

Man Paroled is Soon Back in Jail

Exactly four days after he had been paroled from the Hastings County Jail, Harry McDonald, local man, was committed on a charge of intoxication. McDonald appeared in today's local police court and pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and was sentenced to four months in the same institution he had only four days previously been liberated from.

"Sadie Brunch and myself signed papers to have this man paroled and he got out Saturday. This is his third offence under the L.C.A. since last June and there are others," stated Chief Kidd as McDonald pleaded guilty to a third offence. "Under the law this plea calls for a sentence anywhere from three to six months," commented His Worship, Magistrate J. L. Lloyd who presided.

"Don't give me three months in this jail up here. Make it four or five months if you have information," I'll get out sooner," interrupted McDonald.

"We like to accommodate people. You don't want a three months' sentence?" questioned His Worship.

"No, sir," replied McDonald.

"Well we'll make it four months then, but according to the L.C.A. laws it distinctly says jail terms for convictions registered under this law must be served in the common jail," explained His Worship as he referred to the Liquor Control Act manual for his authority.

POLICE BLOTTER

Two members of the Ottawa Police Department were in Belleville for last evening seeking information in connection with the possible identification of four men, following a $17,000.00 jewelry robbery which occurred in that city some time ago. It was learned that Toronto youths had been personally questioned in the matter and although they had established an alibi at the time of their detention, local persons are reported to have seen the quartette passing thru through this city recently. The Capital City authorities refused to comment upon the information they are obtaining in Belleville, except to state it was "of a favorable nature."

Two local young men were apprehended and subsequently spent the night in the police station following altercations that terminated in a fistic encounter on Front St. last night. The pair, who were brothers, pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication in today's local police court. The conventional fines were assessed in both cases.

When local police went into the Regal Cafe, 236 Front St. and requested from the management a license for a slot machine that was in operation on the premises, Mrs. Lem. Chisholm, proprietor, stated he had no licence. An information was laid by Chief Kidd in today's local police court. The matter will be presented Monday for trial.

COUNTY COUNCIL JOINS IN MOTION

Petition Government to Alter Farm Credit Act

Concurrence of a resolution submitted by the Prince County Council to the Dominion Government in which that body petitioned the Government to alter or repeal the Farm Credit Arrangement Bill featured the second day meeting of the December session of the Hastings County Council held in Shire Hall yesterday.

Introduction of the resolution by County Clerk Eric Denyes brought forth denunciation of the bill by various members of the Council. Individual hardship cases arising from the application of the Act, and the resulting dissatisfaction were cited by members. This resulted in a discussion to the individual and to the municipality, which finally found unanimous of opinion and the handships sustained by the municipalities should be remedied by a county body rather than an individual, was the opinion of the Council as they unanimously concurred with the Perth County Council.

Discuss Report

Animated discussion followed the reading of the Children's Aid Society report forwarded by Mr. Ruston, superintendent. The report was laid over and an invitation extended to Mr. Ruston to attend a subsequent meeting and give his report in fuller detail. The question of the auditing of the Children's Aid Society books brought forth the opinion that they should be audited by a chartered accountant.

"This is public money," declared D. A. Clarke, of Ameliasburg, "and this Council should withhold it until the books are audited by a chartered accountant."

The committee on the whole agreed and means went into session with Roscoe Robson, acting chairman.

Indigent hospitalization accounts were submitted with a possible $2 out of 50 being passed by the committee.

Appointees to the Mothers' Allowance Commission of Ontario were County Clerk Eric Denyes and Mr. Wesley Gray, while County Treasurer Jas. Haggerty was appointed county representative to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. Following the afternoon session, the and bridge committee met in the County Clerk's office.

EDWARD WAITS, IS READY TO SIGN AWAY HIS CROWN

Broadcasts at 5 p.m. E.S.T. Today Farewell to Empire

ROYAL BROTHERS DINE

Edward Will Leave Homeland Shortly After Broadcast

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Parliament met in a session without precedent today to mend the King of the Empire.

His final evening as King was spent at Fort Belvedere with his brother, the Duke of York, as his guest at dinner—the brother who, with acceptance of Edward's abdication, will become the new King. Probably he will reign as George VI.

Around the world tonight Edward will speak by radio to the 460,000,000 subjects of the British Empire.

Mrs. Simpson, love for whom cost him his throne, kept vigil at Cannes, France, where her final divorce decree next April 27.

Will Leave England

Soon after he broadcasts, Edward was expected to leave his homeland, going either to France, Italy, or possibly Switzerland, to await the time when he will be reunited with the American born divorcee.

The Government's Bill giving effect to Edward's abdication was due to be steamrolled through its second reading in Commons by early afternoon.

With no delay the historic document was expected to pass the House of Lords, leaving only final quick passage by Commons and Edward's last royal signature necessary to make the Duke of York King.

DAIRY SCHOOL AT KEMPTVILLE

Cheesemakers', Instructors', Buttermakers' Courses to Follow School

Kemptville, Dec. 11.—The plans for the reopening of the Dairy School which was formerly at Kingston and is now located at the Kemptville Agricultural College, have been completed for January 4th, when a General Course will commence, and run until March 26th.

A. L. Gilmer, M.S.A., N.D.A., N.D.D., who was superintendent at Kingston will hold the same position here and he has had a very wide experience in this work. It is hoped to have the former dairy staff of the Kingston school here also the winter creamery, all of whom are men of experience and efficient in the instruction work of the school. Plans were made for the creamery and factory conditions of the province.

At the present time alterations are being made to accommodate the school and when complete there will be a room for butter making and a room for cheese making as well as milk and cream receiving room. There will also be a butter and cheese storage room, a dairy laboratory for chemistry and bacteriology also the superintendent's office; all lectures will be given in the regular class rooms of the school. Part of the equipment from the Kingston school has been brought to Kemptville and some new equipment will be installed.

Whilst the policy of the Dairy School in its new location will be somewhat modified, its forty-two years of tradition in providing a sound education pertaining to the art of dairying will be maintained. It will not be conducted as a cheese factory or Creamery on a commercial basis as it was at Kingston.

As the accommodation at the Agricultural School is now taxed to the full with winter course students those who attend the Dairy School will be accommodated in private homes as close to the school as possible and residents of Kemptville who have suitable rooms should get in touch at once with the superintendent, J. S. Gilson at the K.A.S.

England Not Soon To Forget Edward

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—England will not forget former King Edward, Prime Minister Baldwin promised today.

"I feel before final action on the abdication law in the House of Commons, Baldwin said:

"Though we have this duty to perform and we perform it with unanimity, we shall always remember with regard and affection the wholehearted and loyal service that His Majesty has given to this country as Prince of Wales and during his short time as King.

"For all this work we are grateful and we shall not forget."

STARCH COMPANY SEEKS $150,000

Damage Action Between Rival Companies Being Heard

Toronto, Dec. 11—(CP)—Two rival brands of corn syrup—identified with the first feeding of the Dionne quintuplets—were responsible for a rush of spectators to Mr. Justice Neol Jeffrey's court here today as crowds hoped to see persons who had marched to fame with growth of the Dionne quintuplets.

Canada Starch Company, manufacturers of Crown Brand Corn Syrup, seeks $150,000 damages from the St. Lawrence Starch Company, two advertising firms and W. H. Corn Syrup first fed the quints and advertising of Syrup. McDonnell and Ferguson Limited and McConnell, Baxter and Easton Limited are the advertising firms concerned.

Five merchants testified in the case yesterday in a crowded courtroom. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the country doctor present at the babies' birth, and Oliva Dionne, their father, have yet to be heard.

The merchants testified they had been tempted to deal in Rex Hive Syrup after considerable demand was created by advertising linking it with the first feeding of the quintuplets.

NORMAN LAMBERT HEADS LIBERALS

Ottawa Man Becomes Chief Organizer For The Party

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—Canadian Liberals today have a new man at the head of their campaign organization. At the meeting of the National Liberal Federation here yesterday Norman Lambert of Ottawa was chosen President.

He succeeds Hon. Vincent Massey, now High Commissioner in London who headed the organization before and during the party's successful election campaign in 1935.

Mr. Lambert, formerly of Winnipeg, acted as organizer and General Secretary during Mr. Massey's term as President and recently has been Acting President. Although nothing was said about it at the meeting it is understood he will continue to act as organizer. Walter P. Herbert, publicity director for the past season, was made Secretary.

From Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, the meeting heard of the necessity of organizing a Provincial Federation in Quebec. He said the party was organized there only on a county basis and needed a central provincial office.

J. A. Godbout, Quebec leader said there probably would be the defeat of the party in the recent Quebec election to suspicions.

Reports on the organization in all provinces were presented.

FREE STATE MAY LOOSEN TIES

May Pass Legislation to Eliminate King's Name From Charter

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Dec. 11.—(AP)—A Bill to abolish the office of Governor General and the use of the King's name in conducting the Irish Free State's Domestic Affairs was introduced in the Dail Eireann today.

The measure was presented by President Eamon de Valera who earlier had summoned the Irish Parliament to consider King Edward's abdication.

The measure also provided for the recognition of Edward's abdication and the Duke of York's succession but would limit British control over any Free State activity to Foreign Affairs.

The Free State President had already indicated his intention of substituting a "ceremonial head of the State" for the Governor General. —The King's representative—when he announced recently he was drafting a new Constitution.

President Eamon de Valera called the Dail to consider "emergency legislation" with the statement that "insofar as the Free State is concerned, the abdication will not become effective until legislation for that purpose has been enacted by Parliament."

Indications were that the Irish government would accept King Edward's abdication, "as of Great Ireland" and recognize the Duke of York as Ireland's new King.

Action of King Edward Predicted 11 Years Ago

Hollywood, Dec. 11 (AP)—Friends of the late Count Louis Hamon, known as the "King" of palmist, clairvoyant, numerologist and writer of astrological works, recalled today he predicted 11 years ago he then Prince of Wales "will fall a victim of a devastating love affair."

"If he does, I predict that the Prince will give up everything, even the chance of being crowned rather than lose the object of his affection," Cheiro wrote in October, 1925.

His prophecy, published in his "world prediction" added:

"Queen Mary, and in a lesser degree King George, have interpreted themselves over the problem of the Prince.

Australia Assents To Royal Abdication

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 11.—(CP)—The Senate and House of Representatives approved today the resolution of assent to King Edward's abdication, completing the constitutional steps necessary for the accession of the Duke of York.

Mrs. Joseph Lyons, wife of the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, writing in the Melbourne Herald, described the new Queen, the Duchess of York, as "kind, good, charming, simple and friendly, yet possessing great natural dignity and a worthy successor to a great and noble Queen."

Victoria's State Government declared a public holiday on the new King's birthday, Monday.

Western Australia today issued a proclamation asking the people of South Australia to say special prayers for the royal family and declaring that the Australian people "regretted they had to lose" Edward.

EDWARD'S SPEECH READ

New Delhi, Dec. 11.—(CP-Havas)—The Executive Council was convened this emergency session early today to hear the Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow, read the Act of Abdication and the message from King Edward.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wonderful subborn to master, requiring treatment and care over a long period of time. It can seldom be cured at home. However, it is not a hopeless disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realized by the founders of the National Sanitarium Association, when forty years ago they opened the first hospital in Canada for the treatment of this disease.

Their ambition was not to be small, but even ridicule, for at that time it was firmly believed that tuberculosis was incurable. It was just one of those things which had to be let alone and borne about it.

However, it was not long before the success of the small hospital began to show results—people were actually being cured—and others were coming to about it.

Slowly was the small beginning of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Weston Mary Hospitals for Consumptives, which now provide for more than a thousand patients.

The progress made and the change in outlook is reflected by these and the other five sanatoria throughout the Dominion, and by the large number of public and private organizations which to-day are doing as much to overcome tuberculosis.

The results have been that thousands upon thousands have been given a chance to get well, who but for hospital treatment would have been left without hope, and the mortality from the disease has been reduced by half.

In tuberculosis, Canada occupies the premier position in seventh place as the cause of death, but there is good congratulation, but there is also the danger of the feeling of self-satisfaction paralyzing the activities of effort. With the growing realization that the cure and prevention for tuberculosis will not fail to be attained unless it is forced to do so. This can only be accomplished with the continuous co-operation of the public at large.

Retail Merchants Executive Explain Lighting Situation

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,—

It has been the practice of the Merchants Association to foster decorative street lighting during the month of December in order to give a bright and cheery atmosphere to the shopping district and to create a favourable impression to the many shoppers and visitors from out of town.

With this view in mind we have for the past several years secured the cooperation of most of the Service Clubs in the city to put up lighting decorations at the approaches to this city and also in other suitable places. We have also had the co-operation of the Belleville Hydro in supplying this free. Front St., the cost of the power which was paid by the city. We have also supplied and put up small Christmas trees on all poles.

This year in attempting to carry out the same program, we again were promised the same co-operation from the Service Clubs, also the city, but the publicly owned Hydro could not do the same as in the past, but asked that the merchants celebrate themselves to pay close to $700.00 (including power charge) for this lighting. This amount was far too much for the merchants to attempt to raise. The result is that there will not be any special street lighting this season. It is a pity that the equipment that is now owned by the Hydro and on hand to be used, for which depreciation and carrying charges on as before) could not be used to illuminate our city and add to the cheerfulness of the coming holiday season.

In order that the public may know our position in this connection we leave the above facts for your consideration.

Executive Committee of The Belleville Retail Merchants Association.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Dec. 11 (Special)—Two local men appeared before Magistrate J. L. Loyd in police court here yesterday charged with assaulting Steve Star, cafe waiters. Each pleaded guilty and were assessed $19.50 apiece and a suspended sentence of three months was imposed. On default the offenders will spend one month in Belleville jail. The police officer in testifying said, the complainants were only given a little one receiving an abrasion on his head and a cut lip, and testified further that considerable damage was done to the furniture. In passing sentence the Magistrate said, "I am satisfied to let them go providing the damages and costs are paid.

Several cases of speeding within the town limits are to be dealt with and the regular costs were collected.

—Mr. Norman Kent of Toronto, paid $8.75 for speeding through the downtown section at the rate of 55 miles an hour.

Mr. H. Montgomery, truant officer for the municipality produced a number of signed notes from relief parents demanding and requesting their children must have sufficient clothing before they attend school regularly. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., requested that the cases be investigated immediately.

Trenton Bowling Leagues

Up at the alleys one of the most successful bowling seasons in the town's history is being enjoyed, and each game is keenly contested more thrills and stiffer competition. The R.C.A.F. squads have shown the locals a few tricks and the latter have popped a number of surprises on the airport rollers as the feeling from the standpoint of skill is mutual. The leaders of the R.C.A.F. league are A.C. No. 1 26-6; Stores, 23-6; Accounts, 23-9; T.T.S. No. 1, 21-11. Town league bowlers are going to town and Trent Cotton are on top of the stack with 17 wins to 3 reverses. Purina are second with 14 credits and 10 debits, while the Ava and Plymouths are deadlocked for third place with a score of 13-11 each. The teachers are also knocking down fine scores when their daily work is done and Dufferin "A" sits high on the ladder with 10 wins and 6 loses. College "A" comes next showing 15-9 while College "B" and Dufferin "B" are tightly in the rear. The Mixed League players are soon to be forgotten for their efforts and we see No. 2 Taylors displaying the highest score of 27 wins and 9 defeats to head the division, and No. 1 Pellow's and No. 4 Sterling's are tied for second. Sperling from the Port has two 318 counts to lead the league in gross scoring. Hall's Hallmarks Passes at 27

Following a sudden illness pneumonia Mrs. Amelia Hendy, 67, died at the home of her son Mr. William Hendy, Dufferin Avenue. She was born in Tyendinaga the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abel Wait and after her marriage to the late Mr. Andrew Brown moved to Carrying Place. While in Carrying Place she accumulated many friends and was active in church circles throughout the community as a church worker. Four years ago she came to Trenton and has since lived here also. Surviving are nine children. On Saturday afternoon the funeral will take place at the home here, with the Rev. Canon Greene of King street United Church officiating. Interment will be made in Carrying Place cemetery and grandchildren of the deceased will act as pall bearers.

NEW STORE FRONTS FEATURE BELLEVILLE'S BUSINESS SECTION

Cummings Block Being Re-modelled, Enlarged And New Fronts Added in Keeping With Spirit of Progress

New store fronts have become the order of the day in Belleville's business section, many new and handsome fronts have been put in recently, the result being a noticeable improvement giving the city a business district which will compare favorably with any city of similar size in Canada. Most recent development of this kind are those new fronts for stores in the business block owned by Mrs. E. Cummings, one of which is occupied by George Finch, jeweller, and the other, 214 Front street, to be occupied Jan. 1 by the Haines Shoe House, operated by Mr. Haines, who was formerly connected with the Haines Shoe House for many years, as manager and proprietor. For seventy-three years the Haines Shoe House has occupied the stand it is shortly vacating, 220 Front street, one of the oldest if not the oldest business operating in Belleville and still full of life and vigor and the progressive spirit of the new. The new location is being specially fitted up for the footwear business and will be attractive and modern in every respect.

GOD SAVE THE KING

The King reigns. God Save the King!

Edward has renounced the Throne and his brother automatically becomes King.

The Kingship endures, though Kings pass. Today the Throne is something vastly different from the office of the kings of old. It is a development of the ages, it is mainly a symbol of the peculiar form of democratic development of the British peoples.

As King Edward steps out there is a deep sense of melancholy and frustrated hope in that his reign has been so brief. The words of the monarch as he spoke on so many occasions this year will be recalled with a pathetic tinge for many years for hope centred about the day when he would become ruler. But the unexpected has happened and the King who has been the best known of British rulers departs. He yields to the will of parliament as expressed on his wish to marry a divorcee but preserves the dignity of standing by his decision to wed even if he should find it necessary to renounce his high office. He has felt the heavy burden of the regal duties. Into his retirement, Edward will be followed with the best wishes of Homeland and Dominion as so fittingly expressed by the Opposition Leader, Mr. Attlee, who said in the Commons:—

"We all know of his personal charm, courage and ready sympathy with suffering. We all know how he has felt for the mines in their time of trial and how he showed his deep human interest in the unemployed and the people of the distressed areas.

"Now purely personal and human considerations have conflicted with the obligations and responsibility of his high calling. I am sure that all of us have tried to see if there were some way in which this conflict could be resolved.

"We hoped it would not come to abdication but the King has made his decision. He is resolved to abide by it. We can say no other than accept it. The wish of all his people will be that he will have a long happy life."

The heavy task which devolved upon Prime Minister Baldwin was of a kind no man could wish to have placed on his shoulders. He was given the sympathy of Parliament and Nation and Empire on the role he has been compelled to play.

To the new ruler there will be a rallying of all the forces of the Empire to make his reign as pleasant a one as possible, for everyone realizes the difficult task with the office, especially under the present circumstances when one brother steps down and the other ascends the throne. There is deep sympathy for the new ruler and the members of the royal family, particularly Queen Mary, who has seen her husband, King George die, her son Edward mount the throne and renounce it, and her second son assume the regal state—three kings, all members of her family on the throne in one year.

The prayers and best wishes are for the new King and Emperor.

THE KINGSHIP

One of the most turbulent and momentous times in history is being lived. On every hand every thing seems in a state of change.

Fears were entertained for the state of the monarchy should Edward the Eighth retire, but the crisis has passed. A new King takes the Throne. The kingship in Britain and her Empire is one foundation which never fits in an age of change. And it is because it is essentially a part of the national life and that it is a natural development.

The world was very uneasy but now a feeling of greater ease is manifested since what was termed "the crisis" passed. "The crisis" was resolved in the characteristic British way. King Edward solved it in the manner of the British people. His wisdom in so doing indicates his depth and sincerity of interest in the Throne and Empire. Never for any time did he consider that suggestion of separating it from the people and so run the risk of forming a "king's party" with the result of damage to British solidarity. His renunciation was kingly.

A great event has taken place. History has been made in a way true to British tradition in this age of change. The kingship has not changed.

Not in the achievement, but in the endurance of the human soul, does it show its divine grandeur, and its alliance with the infinite God.—E. H. Chapin.

Faith is to believe, on the word of God, what we do not see, and its reward is to see and enjoy what we believe.—St. Augustine.

ABOUT LAC LONG

Ice has covered the lake,
And the dory swims below:
In the crystal cloth his eyes, like jewels,
Deride the wind-blown snow.
And a red fox runs where the hare thrums
And a red fox runs where the hare thrums
And a weasel tracks between,
Where in the summer the grouse drums
Under an evergreen.

No more the dusky paint-brush blows
Her pomegranate tones and red,
For the winds play where the sheep lay
And the spear-grass waved its head.

Fluted and ribbed is the gravel-pit,
And the snakes have slipped beneath
To slumber in sloth the days away
Under a twisted root;
While hushed and grim where the boughs hung dim
The seventh-year owls hoot.

THREE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-SIX CITIES in the United States have City Manager Government under charter, while many more have the same system by ordinance, and the number is growing every year. Ontario has one City Manager City, Chatham, population about 14,000. Quebec has seven City Manager communities, Alberta one, and New Brunswick one. Ireland has three, Cork, Dublin and Dun Laoghaire.-Porto Rico has one, San Juan.

Walter says gossip has taken precedence over news of late, has come into its own, if you like. Sez Walter in his column: "The editors, it appears, have just discovered what one of us has contended all along—that readers are more interested in people who are "living" than in those who are dying. People in love are alive. People who aren't are dead." Looks like a whole parcel of folks are walking around cheating the undertaker, if Winchell is right.

Letters to the Editor

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir, —

Please allow me space in your paper in regard to employment of single girls.

There are graduating every year from our collegiate but when they go to apply for work in factories offices, or stores they are told that no help is needed.

What the rush season is on in the stores and factories extra hands are called on. The single city girls put in applications for the work year after year but a lot of them get turned away in the end and the married women and girls from outside the city get the jobs. Why not employ city girls first?

If a girl marries and her husband is well and has work, why doesn't she quit her job and give the city girls a chance to live and pay their way.

What is the use of keeping the collegiate open to educate the girls if they cannot get jobs.

Mother of a girl who wants work.

ROYAL ASSENT GIVEN IN LORDS

Commission Completes Edward's Renunciation of Throne

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(AP)— The Royal Commission in the House of Lords today gave Royal assent to the abdication bill completing Edward's renunciation of the British Crown and elevating the Duke of York to the throne.

Lord Onslow, Lord Denman and the Earl of Stanhope, members of the Commission, acted for Edward in giving the Abdication Act the full force of law.

Immediately upon the Commission's approval, the Abdication Bill became an Act of Parliament with full force and effect.

The three Royal Commissioners, appointed by the King some time ago to act in his behalf during regular Legislative sessions, substituted for the abdicating ruler whose signature on the measure is not now necessary.

It was not immediately disclosed, however, whether Edward would eventually sign his own Abdication Act. He may, under Parliamentary Law, do so if he chooses.

Empire Newspapers Join in Praise For New King

London, Dec. 11 (CP Cable)—As Empire newspapers today marked the passing of King Edward from the Throne and the accession of the Duke of York, they joined in praise of the new King and in expressions of relief the crisis had left the Monarchy unharmed.

"The Throne has emerged entirely unscathed from a great ordeal," said the Cape Times. "The harm done is not irreparable. The Monarchical system remains firmly rooted in the hearts and sympathies of its British subjects."

"The crisis must not be permitted to weaken the Monarchical system," urged the Melbourne Age. "People are inexpressibly grieved by the King's departure, but a worthy successor is available. Any interruption of normal life or business is unwarranted, notwithstanding moments of emotional stress."

Mr. Baldwin Praised

The Melbourne Argus said "the crisis brought out the best in Mr. Baldwin and offered evidence of the solidity of the Empire."

The Sydney Sun commented "the Duke of York is of a quieter and more conventional temperament than King Edward. He views conform to those of English Royalty. With a charming Scottish Queen and the little Princesses, the tradition of family life set by the Monarchs of this house will be maintained."

The Sydney Telegraph said "The new King and Queen are assured of the deep affection and unswerving loyalty of their people. Upon the Throne is a changeless symbol in a changing world."

The Calcutta Statesman said: "The Indians themselves throughout have behaved with respect, reverence and loyalty which must have won the admiration and gratitude of every Briton."

The India Times said: "The abdication is a tragedy for the whole Empire because by the renunciation ... we lost a Monarch with great gifts and wide experience."

King Edward's Reign Brief In Momentous Time of History

REVOLVER INCIDENT

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—A short, precedent-breaking reign has ended abruptly with the abdication of King Edward VIII.

Here is the story of the less than eleven months during which he was king.

Edward, known throughout the world as the Prince of Wales, became King Edward VIII at the minutes before midnight, Jan. 20, on the death of his father, King George V.

A few hours before, the momentable bulletin had been flashed from Sandringham: "The king's life is drawing peacefully towards the close."

In one dread hour, Edward lost his father and gained the British throne, all the cares of modern kingship were thrust upon him while he mourned his father.

But the youthful looking sovereign carried himself with kingly stoicism and dignity.

His First Day As King.

On the first day of his reign, he flew to London, attended his first privy council and made his first speech as king.

Solemnly he declared: "I place my reliance upon the loyalty and affection of my people throughout the empire and upon the wisdom of their parliaments to support me in the heavy task and I pray that God will guide me to perform it."

At midnight, January 21, the sorrowing King Edward secured his place in the books of his subjects when he and his three brothers, the Dukes of York, Gloucester and Kent, shouted aloud, each the proclamation dropped down the window in ancient Westminster Hall.

Moments later, all stood at each corner of the cathedrale with bowed heads.

A day later Queen Mary, widow of the dead king and mother of the new, said to her children:

"I commend to you my dear son, as he enters upon his reign. In confident hope you will give him the same devotion and loyalty you gave so abundantly to his father."

Cares of State Mediated.

It was not until March 1 that the cares of state were relaxed sufficiently to permit the new king to a world-wide broadcast, to tell his subjects:

"I am still the same man whom constant effort it will be to continue to promote the well-being of my followmen."

One of his first acts after his father's death was to order all 150 clocks at Sandringham, the Scottish estate of his father, set at correct time.

Since the days of his grandfather, Edward VII, Sandringham time always had been a half-hour ahead of Greenwich time. Origin of this custom was traced to the eagerness of Edward VII to have his shooting parties get away on time.

King Edward VIII's reign flew on the first day of his reign, also made clear once and for all that he would give up flying. In June he became the first British king to make an aerial inspection of Royal Air Force stations in England.

Revolver Incident.

'It was July 16 that the famous "revolver incident" occurred.

As the king strode down Constitution Hill towards Buckingham Palace, a loaded pistol landed under his horse. For a moment, he reined in his mount, glanced in the direction from which the weapon came and then calmly proceeded.

Police arrested George Andrew Muldoon was arrested and in a subsequent trial was sentenced to twelve months imprisonment with hard labor.

On July 26 the king went to France to unveil the Canadian war memorial at Vimy Ridge.

Then, a few weeks later, accompanied by Mrs. Wallis Simpson and the king together.

First King in Turkey.

Edward VIII became the first British king to set foot in Turkey as Belgrade and the people there showed their appreciation for the honor.

The king received a tumultuous welcome in Vienna. There, also he was stranded by Prof. Heinrich Neumann, artist and specialist, whose art was previously troublesome were acclaimed sound.

A few days after his return to London, King Edward delighted 2,000 Canadian ex-servicemen and their families, returning from the Vimy pilgrimage, when he addressed them as "comrades, friends from Canada".

He opened his first parliament on Nov. 3 and took the affirmation of the Protestant faith.

His Visit to Wales.

His most important act before the storm over his desire to make Mrs. Simpson his wife broke around his head was his visit to the "country of wales" of Wales where he pledged that "something will be done".

DOMINIONS LINE UP WITH BALDWIN

Protests Are Heard in England About Abdication.

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—The British Dominions lined up swiftly behind Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and other members of the legislation necessary to carry on with the Duke of York as king and Queen Elizabeth as consort.

Australia led the way for the dominions, the cabinet passing an order-in-council immediately the accession of George VI was announced, requesting the parliament to pass the legislation necessary to enable Canada in the Act of Abdication and Succession.

New Zealand Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State announced the parliament's intention Friday and informal sources said a short bill yesterday would be passed.

Fears were there set at rest that the Free State might refuse to accept the abdication and hold up legislation enabling the Duke of York on the throne.

Australia Backs Africa Acts.

Parliaments in the Union of South Africa, Australia and New Zealand were prepared to back the family of commonwealths in hailing the new king.

In Australia, hundreds of thousands of citizens gathered by radio through the early hours of Friday morning to hear the king's message of abdication and Prime Minister Joseph Lyons announced:

In Melbourne one hostile demonstration marred the feeling of relief that the dreaded decision had finally been announced.

Protest Heard.

Some 500 persons attended a meeting where speakers protested King Edward had been forced from the throne because of his interest in the working classes.

In Dublin Christmas shopping came to a standstill as the crowds bey papers announcing the abdication from the hands of newsboys.

The foreign press, keenly alive to world reaction, expressed itself as gratified at the way the news had been received.

France Pleased Crisis Is Over.

France expressed itself as pleased the crisis was over and felt that the solution was a happy one for the empire and the world.

German officials declined to comment because "the whole change is regarded entirely as an internal affair."

In Berlin the propaganda ministry held up entire editions of newspapers for several hours although they lifted their ban on news of the crisis when the abdication was officially announced.

Along the Dalmatian coast where King Edward spent five vacation weeks last summer with Mrs. Simpson and a spy party no surprise was expressed at Edward's decision but only sorrow that their visitor had to pass through such an experience.

Yugoslavia felt that it knew the new king well since he has twice visited their royal court, and stood godfather to King Peter, young

CEASELESS WORRY AND LABOR SEEN IN ROYAL OFFICE

English Matronly View is Care Got on King's Nerves

London, Dec. 11.—When one hears expressions from that immense body of English folk "considering, in the words of the immediate predecessor of the present Duke of Devonshire, "those who don't go to meetings," one or two pronouncements quickly linger.

One of them ran thus: "Edward, much as we admire him, really let the country and the empire down when he failed to marry in his 30's or early 40's. It is absurd to believe that there was not an abundance of nice, good girls in England, Scotland, Canada, yes and America too, for that matter, with whom he could have got along happily."

Perhaps more charitable is the view of the goodly, if scattered, company of English matronhood. "It would not be surprising if the cares, worry and ceaseless labor, even if much of it is self-imposed, has got on his nerves to such an extent as to cloud his former acute judgment of actions and their consequences," said a person of this class. "This long hair brood that her almost uncontrollable impulse to break with it all."

In the connection the writer recalls an incident at the funeral of King George V, last January which he was the only newspaperman to witness.

Incident At Funeral.

After the funeral mass of the erected procession began their way from St. George's chapel to Windsor Station directly the Royal Family had withdrawn. They found the Prince of Wales still at the platform on another track.

Eminent judges, soldiers, sailors and cabinet ministers lined the platform in picturesque array. From them Edward, the only occupant to look out, gazed without expression upon the signal apparatus. He then remained fixed until the train moved away. Perhaps he was pondering on the immensity of the task of maintaining "truth and honor, religious and civil."

So ends a reign which held such fair promises. Edward had been sovereign for but 326 days the day of her his father, George V, of pious and glorious memory, breathed his last at Sandringham; Edward crashed in near unnoticed by King and London with his brother, the Duke of York, to attend a meeting of his Privy Council.

On that day, The Times wrote: "At a time when the crown has come to play a new and predominant part in the political unity of the empire, its wearer is blessed with his own indomitable energy and his father's unrivalled knowledge of his people."

Crisis In Mediterranean.

His holiday cruise in the Mediterranean in August was a triumph, and the whole world looking to the belief he intended to follow the example of his father in devoting his time to promote the peace of the world through personal contacts with other rulers.

In September he made his first visit to Scotland, receiving a hearty welcome from the people of Scottish castle and cottage alike.

On Nov. 3 King Edward opened his first parliament. The speech from the throne on that occasion was also conventional.

'Aspect of Loneliness'

On Armistice Day, Nov. 11, he stood before the cenotaph, bearing "a certain aspect of loneliness," as it was described at the time. After nightfall, he visited quite privately the Field of Remembrance where minister Abbey and scattered poppies on the greensward of the abbey. He also attended on the night the meeting of ex-service men in the Albert Hall.

Next day King Edward went to Portland on a two-day visit to the fleet, when he messaged along the line his satisfaction with what he had seen. Then came a visit to the mining area of South Wales lasting three days. At that Empress there he was received with unbounded enthusiasm. It was the most public appearance before the present unhappy chain of circumstances became known to his subjects at large.

KING GEORGE VI TO BE PROCLAIMED

Proclamation to Be Read Saturday at St. James's Palace

London, Dec. 11.—Steps in the succession of the new king will be swift after the proclamation of George VI to be read Saturday to the court at St. James' palace.

Following the accession council, the proclamation of the new king will be read at Privy Court in the palace by officers at arms.

Tripping with the double fanfare as the Garter Principal King of Arms honors the proclamation.

Afterward a procession, formed by the King of Arms, Heralds, Pursuivants and other officials, their prerogatives established by precedent, will move through London streets to the law courts, to the Royal Exchange in the heart of the city, proclaiming a new monarch for the second time within the year.

NATION SADLY RECALLS REIGN

Pathos Lingers About Words And Acts of Abdicated Queen

Today the nation recalled sadly the proceedings in the House of Commons last March 16 when Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, moved for a select committee regarding the civil list and referred to the arrangements necessary to provide for the contingency of the king's marriage. It was practically a formal motion, made at the beginning of every reign, but naturally it set gossip going.

"I Serve", King's Motto.

On April 2 the king received at Buckingham Palace addresses of congratulation from a number of public bodies, including the clergy of the Church of England, the older universities, the Bank of England, the Jewish Board of Deputies and the London County Council.

"I recognize the responsibilities as well as the opportunities lying before me," said the king in reply. "As Prince of Wales I bore a device with the ancient motto 'I serve.' As king I shall hold this in constant remembrance, for the king can perform no higher function than that of service."

The English spring was in its highest glory May when Edward with his mother went to the Famous Chelsea Flower Show. It was known that he had taken a lease of Fort Belvedere.

The city spell is disappointing to us amateur gardeners," he remarked to one person in charge of exhibits, "and to you professionally it is costly as well."

Created Admiral.

Ten days later he was created Admiral of the Royal Navy. Furthermore, perhaps the most exclusive club in the world. This was soon followed by a ceremony in which he conferred the baton of Field Marshal on the Duke of Connaught as the Senior Marshal, making the presentation in the Quadrangle of Gate of Hampton Court.

Court mourning for King George was ordered impossible by the evening courts but instead Edward held two afternoon receptions in July, Presentations at these were as if they were made at a court proper. Again spoiled the conventional function. It was the only occasion on which debutantes made their courtesies to the sovereign in short afternoons.

On July 27 the king performed the ceremony of unveiling the Canadian war memorial at Vimy Ridge, which will always be vividly remembered by 8,000 Canadians attending.

Cruise In Mediterranean.

His holiday cruise in the Mediterranean in August was a triumph, and the whole world looking to the belief he intended to follow the example of his father in devoting his time to promote the peace of the world through personal contacts with other rulers.

In September he made his first visit to Scotland, receiving a hearty welcome from the people of Scottish castle and cottage alike.

On Nov. 3 King Edward opened his first parliament. The speech from the throne on that occasion was also conventional.

'Aspect of Loneliness'

On Armistice Day, Nov. 11, he stood before the cenotaph, bearing "a certain aspect of loneliness," as it was described at the time. After nightfall, he visited quite privately the Field of Remembrance where minister Abbey and scattered poppies on the greensward of the abbey. He also attended on the night the meeting of ex-service men in the Albert Hall.

Next day King Edward went to Portland on a two-day visit to the fleet, when he messaged along the line his satisfaction with what he had seen. Then came a visit to the mining area of South Wales lasting three days. At that Empress there he was received with unbounded enthusiasm. It was the most public appearance before the present unhappy chain of circumstances became known to his subjects at large.

10 Year Old Princess Becomes Heir Presumptive to Throne

Heir to Mightiest Monarch May Become Queen Elizabeth Some Day

PRIVATELY EDUCATED

London, Dec. 11.—(CP)—Abdication of King Edward VIII and accession of his brother the Duke of York has opened up a new line of succession to the British throne and the possibility that some day the Empire will be ruled by a second Queen Elizabeth.

With the precedent-shattering act of her uncle, Princess Elizabeth, 10-year-old daughter of the new King thus becomes heir-presumptive to the mightiest monarchy in all the world. Her own right to succession to the throne is next in line of succession.

Princess Elizabeth has been educated from her early days to face the day she may some day be Queen of England. The British Cabinet has declared for constitutional rule and have the family of Windsor in Royal succession—that King George, Queen Mary, King Edward and her parents.

The Duchess of York at first was anxious that the little girl be sent to a private school where she might receive the customary education of the English girl of the upper classes. But she was persuaded to forego the idea.

Queen Mary herself has undertaken to teach Elizabeth Alexandra Mary, to give her the niceties of etiquette and diplomatic conversation.

Her Day's Routine

A Scottish governess, Miss Crawford, comes in every week morning at 9.30 and instructs Elizabeth in history and literature, which the child likes, and arithmetic, which she does not at all. Then comes a governess for an hour of French conversation. After that there are lessons on the pianoforte and lessons in dancing.

Princess Elizabeth, who has yellow hair, blue eyes and "the family nose," is "very lively." It is allowed to play in the park during the afternoon but except for her 10-year-old sister, Margaret Rose, and for several of her cousins, she has few child companions.

Even her birthday parties are attended by grown-up people; seldom by boys and girls her own age. Princess Elizabeth used to blow out the candles and the King cut the cake.

Elizabeth has a pony, a bicycle, ice skates, a string of coral beads, a jewel box given her by Queen Mary, a globe, a doll house, and a grandphonoe. She and her sister also have a collection of toys. She has opened a savings account at the London Post Office and a charge account at a Kingsbridge shop, but apparently at the latter are they she must limit her purchases to one shilling.

Gift of Garden Tools

One Christmas Queen Mary's present to Princess Elizabeth was a set of garden tools. A plot of ground is fenced off at Royal Windsor where she is taught to grow scillas, daffodils and other flowers.

The little girl's first biography was published when she was four years old, a glimpse of her has been exhibited at the Royal Academy, and at night she began her prayers, "God Bless Papa" is the author of several letters to King George, whom she called "Uncle England", to King Edward and to other members of the Royal family.

Two Bridesmaids

Princess Elizabeth acted as bridesmaid at the weddings of two of her uncles—that of the Duke of Kent to Princess Marina of Greece in November, 1934, and that of the Duke of Gloucester to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott, daughter of the Earl of Buccleugh. Both weddings took place in Westminster Abbey.

She is said to be able to perform an Irish jig and the Scottish highland fling. She likes to watch the Guardsmen on parade and once when a sergeant asked her if she had her permission to dismiss the Guard, she replied, "Yes, please." Then she turned to her mother, saying "didn't I say it loud."

Once her mother told her it was not nice to say "my goodness", that "gracious" was the proper way to express surprise.

Allowed in Drawing Room

On rare occasions she is allowed in the drawing room when her parents are entertaining company, the understanding being she is to be seen but not heard.

One of her most beloved possessions is a guilt-edged book of rather grotesque appearance.

She was born in London at the home of her grandfather, the Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, one of the descendants of MacBeth. Hite o'clock in her forenoon.

To her father and mother she is "Lilibeth" but to Queen Mary she is "the Baubbie".

Princess is Popular

Very popular, she once tried to make use of her public favor to her own advantage. She was told by Queen Mary once at a theatre to sit down and then again stood up the Queen threatened to have her sent home.

"I can't be sent home", said the Princess. "Think of all the people waiting outside to see me."

It is said the Queen had Elizabeth taken down a backstairs, and escorted home in a taxicab.

Once she attempted to trade on her Royal birth. A nurse told her to do something which Elizabeth did not want to do and when the nurse insisted Elizabeth from her with the reminder: "Royalty speaking."

Shoplifting Reported By Belleville Police

Reports of shoplifting here, recently been received by local police with the result that yesterday a woman was apprehended in a local store in possession of goods stolen not to have been paid for. Thefts were notified and the woman was removed to the station house to further questioning. The case will be heard in police court.

With the advent of the Christmas shopping season at its height police are receiving notification complaints regarding goods being removed from the counters of local stores by alleged shoplifters.

"Annually at this time of year we are confronted with an increased amount of shoplifting. We intend to make an example of those apprehended for this offence in the future," warned Belleville police officials today as they added complaints regarding this practice have been far too prevalent this year.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

Joe E. Brown in "Polo Joe", "Girl on Front Page"

Your old friend, Joe E. Brown, brings into the Belle Theatre his funny antics and Monday, matinee daily, in the latest and liveliest of all his screen hits, starring vehicles, "Polo Joe."

He plays the role of Joe Bolton, an American youth who, after several years in China, returns home with a solemn-vowed intent.... and an unbounded supply of talk tales. He returns to the arms of his adoring, gushing and disgustingly rich Aunt Minnie.... who is a member of an extremely swanky polo-playing colony.

Joe is forced into the big polo game of the season. After a number of dumb plays which weaken the faith of everyone but the girl.... Joe about-faces and makes a series of such brilliant ones that he wins both the game and the girl. But, see Joe in action!

Carol Hughes, who made such a hit with Joe in "Earthworm Tractor" is delightful as the pretty polo enthusiast. "Skeets" Gallagher does the dead-pan wise with gusto, Gordon Elliott is Joe's rival and Joseph King is Mary's country-gentle man pa. David Newell is the brother; Ollie Tell, her mother.... and Fay Holden is Joe's effusive Aunt Minnie. George E. Stone and Charles Foy are effective as the comic grooms.

As an added attraction in his new semi-reel non-stop laugh riot, Joe throws in some unique tricks and for good measure sings a Chinese song.

"Girl on the Front Page"

Inheriting a large newspaper may seem to be a great deal of good fortune but it has its drawbacks. "The Girl on the Front Page" discovers in the picture of that title presented as the second feature attraction on the same program. A millionaire dies and his will leaves the paper to his wife with the proviso that she run it for the greatest circulation in the country. Mrs. Hamilton is not hopefully enter the last two years of her life in the struggle for the cash for the greatest circulation in the country over the objections of her son, Jack, who wants to sell the paper and retire to a life of ease. Watch for Mrs. Hamilton's College pa.

Her appetite came right back, her nerves relaxed, and she is now bright and happy, the picture of buoyant health. I can't speak too highly of 'Fellows'."

Children of "ten" need the Calcium, Iron, Phosphorus and other mineral elements in Fellows' Syrup to aid their systems at this every-big stage. Buy Fellows' Syrup. It is an old-fry imitated. If you're fussed on the question. Look for the name FELLOWS on the wrapper — then there — your druggist.

FELLOWS' SYRUP

AT THE CAPITOL

"Moonlight on the Prairies"

A thrilling drama of the West, packed with romance, thrills, comedy and music will headline a new film star to Capitol theatre audiences when Dick Foran, the Singing Cowboy, in "Moonlight on the Prairie" will be shown Saturday only.

"Moonlight on the Prairie" has nothing in common with Western style "made over night" Western. On the contrary, it is the first of six big production features Warner Bros. are making with their new star.

Reports from Hollywood state that while it has all the exciting elements of the Western picture of the "silent days," including the exciting plot, the romance, the rough riding, daredevil exploits and wild adventure, it also has robust comedy, clever dialogue, and an element entirely new to Western music.

Dick Foran has a fine baritone voice, and sings two numbers written especially for the production. Hard riding old time cowboys, as well as rustlers and badmen, when gathered 'round the campfires or frequented their cow-town amusement places, were wont to roar out their plaintive songs. The film, made with all the features to delight typical of Warner Bros. pictures, has caught the spirit as well as the music of those days.

The plot centres about the attempt of a band of cattle-thieves and rustlers to murder a widow and her small son in order to obtain them out of their inheritance of a large and prosperous ranch. The thrilling action includes a terrifying wild horse stampede, many thrilling fights and gun battles and the burning of the bandit hide-out in a smashing climax.

Added Features

A sporting comedy "Duck and Daffy" with the famous Hamilton Star, Dizzy Dean and Paul Dean and the famous brother act "Dean and Paul". A musical comedy shot "On Donkey" studded with radio stars, also the radio ramblers in "Guest Stars" as a Looney Toon cartoon "Cold Shivers" in "46". completes this splendid show.

Next week Joe E. Brown is to become the greatest picture of the year "When Dark's Queen" is being shown for the last times today. It is raised by Liberty Magazine as the finest picture of the year. Bill "Love Letters of a Star." Last contests show at 8.40.

STONEWALL YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION

The regular weekly meeting of the Stonewall Young People's Union was held at Wallbridge on Tuesday evening, December 8th. The meeting was opened by singing the theme song after which minutes and roll call were given. Collection was taken up and also the business. A letter was read from Miss Horton suggesting that the union send clothing for the needy in the West. It was moved by E. Ketcheson, seconded by Mrs. Jim Sine that each member contribute 10c or more for this purpose. The devotional part of the programme taken by the convener, Mrs. Jim Sine, opened with hymn 436 followed with prayer by Clifford Millar. The Scripture lesson was read by Muriel Ketcheson. Worship period was taken by Mrs. Sam Nicolson. Hymn 441 was sung and discussion period was led by Mrs. Barton Mesbellitte. Instrumental selection, Grant Nicolson and Oona Chisholm. Music by Miss and Wilbur Shorey. Hymn 80 was sung. A few games were played and the meeting closed by repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

A SIMPLE EXPLANATION OF EYESIGHT

What It Is, What It Does No Great Mystery

EYE-SIGHT is a wonderful service, but there is no great mystery about it. The eye is a lens, just like the lens in a camera or a pair of field glasses — connected with the brain by a nerve. The nerve reports the messages that the light casts upon the exposed terminus of the nerve.

Just as you have to change the focus of a camera or a pair of field glasses, so the tiny muscles of the eye change the focus of the lens in the eyeball to keep the vision clear.

But defects frequently exist which are less great for the focusing muscles to correct and so you have blurred vision, headaches and other nervous disorders which may not show up in the eye itself.

It takes instruments of absolute precision to make the measurements necessary to determine just how far the eyes are from normal and what correction is needed and, of course, the one doing the measuring must be thoroughly competent.

REWARDS, the Eyesight Specialist is equipped to give you the class of specialized service that assures efficient vision.

LITTLE EMOTION

While the name of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson may be in the limelight, as it had been for days, statesmen and churchmen who commented on the King's decision made no mention of the woman herself. Edward plans to marry her when her divorce from Ernest Simpson is final.

Addressing the country by radio, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, explained the position of the Canadian Government. Since it was impossible to assemble parliament in time to pass an act of acceptance simultaneously with the British Parliament, the Order-in-Council was prepared.

Papers Sell Quickly

Before noon editions of newspapers, announcing His Majesty's final communication to the people of Britain's dominions, sold quickly on city streets.

Archbishop Derwyn T. Owen Church of England Primate of all Canada, called for Canadians to rally behind the new King. In a statement at Toronto, he said:

"The British people know how to stand trouble. They are great when difficulty and danger call upon them.

"Such an hour has come once more . . . . Now is the time for all people to rally in the support of constitutional government. It is the responsibility of all the people see to it that no effort should be allowed to weaken us in a day which needs our full strength.

"I call on all those with whom my voice has influence to pray to Almighty God, that His strength may be upon His servant, called so suddenly to take up the heavy load of kingship—and that all the people may rally around him, united and resolute."

In the absence of Rev. Dr. Peter Bryce of Montreal, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, on a visit to the United States, former Moderator Richard Roberts said in Toronto:

"It is impossible to hear of the abdication of our former King Edward without being deeply moved. And, whatever our judgment may be upon the circumstances which led to that decision, our hearts will go with him into his retirement. We shall not soon forget his warm humanity and his sincere concern for the lot of common folk."

EDWARD FIFTH

Bloody Story

Visitors today mount the narrow stone stairway of what is known as the bloody tower, where the murderers found the boys sleeping, suffocated one with a pillow and despatched the other with a dagger. The bodies were hastily buried nearby and discovered two centuries later, when they were removed to Westminster Abbey.

Richard then overlord. Richard III two years later when he was slain on the field of Bosworth. The Crown of England was found under a hawthorn hedge and straightway placed upon the head of the conqueror, Henry VII.

Two more years later Lady Jane Grey, or rather her ambitious father-in-law, Northumberland for her, attempted to gain the Throne on the death of the boy King Edward VI, but Mary reigned for only 14 days. From a prison window in the tower she beheld her husband's headless body pass and within a few days she herself, only 17, met the headsman's axe.

Bloody Death of Richard II

Richard II, son of that mediaeval idol, the Black Prince whose rusty armor still hangs over his tomb in Canterbury Cathedral, was deposed in 1399 at the age of 34, after reigning which had opened auspiciously and lasted 22 years. In a prisoner in the tower it is related that even his dog deserted him. He was removed to Pontefract Castle in Yorkshire. His end is a mystery dark as night. Probably he starved to death.

Henry VI, less than a year old, came to the Throne in 1422 and was deposed in 1461 but amidst the varying fortunes of the civil wars he regained his Throne temporarily. The Lancastrian cause was lost at the battles of Barnet and Tewkesbury. The death of Henry, return of his successor, Edward IV. from Tewkesbury, Henry died in the Tower, where he was murdered.

Charles I was beheaded at the age of 43 in 1649 after a reign of 24 years. He was tried by parliament, which declared he abdicated, and held that the Throne of Britain stands vacant. He abdicated without consent of both Houses of Parliament.

To come to happier details in the list of British sovereigns, the longest and, at any rate from a material viewpoint, the finest reign was that of Queen Victoria, who lasted 63 years. Her character led people to rally to her support on more of a legend than a personal basis.

George III reigned for exactly 60 years, but throughout that long regency carried on for the final nine years. The only other Monarchs to reign for 50 years or more were Henry III, 13-72, and Edward III, 1327-77.

Tradition Set Aside In Historic Document

London, Dec. 11 (CP)—Edward VIII, whose abdication is recorded will be written into history as one of the greatest precedent-breaking acts of British Empire, has set another tradition in the wording of his formal abdication.

In all formal state papers he has been known as Edward VIII, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, King, defender of the faith, Emperor of India."

Yesterday, for the first time since his accession reference to the deity was omitted in his own official renunciation and other state documents.

The phrase "By the Grace of God" and "Defender of the Faith" were not included.

WILL MEET AT DISTANT DATE

of any throw in England to invalidate her brunette divorce decree from Ernest Aldrich Simpson, the intermediary asserted.

Mrs. Simpson has "no arrangements to meet Edward," the spokesman declared, reiterating she expects to remain in southern France for several weeks at least.

Late today Mrs. Simpson left the villa for what her spokesman described as a short visit. She was accompanied by Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting to the King.

Her host, Herman Rogers, said Mrs. Simpson would be back "about this evening."

Shortly before she left, 4 messenger delivered a big box of roses to the villa.

No Immediate Meeting

The meeting of the abdicating Britain King and the Nevada-old American woman whose attachment for each other has shaken empire chancelleries, is not likely to take place until public interest has quieted, it was believed here.

As to their marriage, British society circles on the Riviera were declined to discuss it until Mrs. Simpson's divorce becomes absolute next April 27.

When the couple do meet again, it probably will be in seclusion remote from crowds such as have surrounded the villa here.

France, Switzerland and Italy have been mentioned as possible meeting places, but there was no definite indication; nor has any date been suggested.

No Word From Mrs. Simpson

No word could be obtained as to Mrs. Simpson's reaction to news that the King had abdicated. Members of the household confined themselves to saying she remained in seclusion at the villa where she is right after a hearty dinner.

Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting to the King who has been acting as official spokesman for the former Baltimore woman, prepared today for early departure for London.

Announcement that he was leaving was made by Rogers after Mrs. Simpson also was to go. The rumors were spiked by members of the household who said her plans had not been altered.

Denies Extravagant Reports

Lord Brownlow, evidently under a severe strain because of the caustic opinents of the past week, said he wished to emphasize there was no foundation whatever in the "extravagant reports" which he said had been published in the United States.

He did not elaborate concerning these reports, most of which started following a visit to the home of a London gynecologist, Dr. W. Dougla Kirkwood earlier this week.

REGRET

Quality of Courage

"Edward and self-willed Edward may have been, but let it be remembered that he freely admitted his failure before the bar, bundled from his past, thereby displaying the one quality redeeming wayward man from weakness, viz., the quality of courage as known to all sorts and conditions of men."

The Guardian expressed the opinion that Edward possibly strengthened and clarified the constitutional position of the monarchy in the eyes of the "High Court of Parliament".

The Western Morning News, Plymouth, said "other monarchs have yielded to the dominance of women, but previous-instance was so much given up. No stronger proof could be given of the innate loyalty of the people and faith in the Constitution than the calmness with which so momentous an event was attended."

Sheffield Telegraph's View

The Sheffield Telegraph said:—"On this day of disappointment let us take comfort in the fact that the great change was carried out with dignity and an absence of factiousness and recrimination".

The Liverpool Post said:—"One must allow for the nurseries of Edward's time. He grew up in a period of unprecedented social refinement and lacked the steadying influences of a Queen. Perhaps in fact kingship was not for him. His people will wish him the free and happy life to which he aspires."

The Western Mail, Cardiff, said "The immense disparity between the magnitude of the sacrifice and the cause occasioning it must fill the minds of countless observers with amazement. If an inexperienced youth had reached such a decision there would have been more sympathetic understanding.

"Yet he can away an empire that cherished him with almost unlimited devotion for a dream of personal happiness under circumstances making realisation almost impossible. The nation wishes him joy, though not without serious misgivings."

The East Anglican Times, Ipswich, said:—"Any criticism of Edward's decision will be tempered by reflection that kingship not sought by the holder, but thrust upon him by birth. The nation minded as the empire are bewildered, but if the commonsenses view is taken any ill effects will be greatly mitigated.

Frankford L.O.L. Holds Annual Oyster Supper

Interesting Program Features Address by Hon. A. S. McConnell

Stirling— About one hundred members and friends of the Frankford L.O.L. No. 324 gathered in their spacious and modern lodge hall on Thursday evening for the annual oyster supper given by the organization. The ladies of the L.O.B.A. of Frankford assisted in serving the splendid meal, and many local and visiting artists contributed to a well arranged program. Rev. A. S. McConnell was the speaker of the evening, and delivered a timely address of great benefit to all present. The program which followed the fine dinner took place in the L.O.B.A. hall which was filled to capacity with an interested and enthusiastic audience.

Programme

Mr. Les Flood acted as chairman for the evening, and called the gathering to order shortly after eight pm. Following the chairman's address of welcome Mr. Arthur Duncan offered an interesting reading 'On Going Home for Christmas' by Edgar Guest; Miss Doris Stickle sang a delightful soprano solo which was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Hayton of Harold was the next on the programme giving a group of very clever readings. A group of comic songs given by Walter Lohnes who played his own accompaniment on the guitar created much laughter. At this point in the program the speaker of the evening, Rev. A. S. McConnell was introduced and in his usual fine manner gave an address which was particularly timely and appropriate on "Loyalty to the King", the abdication of the former King Edward the VIII, the ascension to the sovereign throne of the Duke of York was discussed in a most enlightening fashion by one well-acquainted with the affairs of the British Royalty and the Commonwealth.

Rev. Mr. Lane of Frankford United Church, was present and in answer to request offered a fine reading "Laska". Other outstanding musical numbers on the program were presented by Messrs. Lowry and Mayhew talented exponents of Hawaiian music. A touch of humor was added to the evening by comic songs and stories of wit by Arthur Duncan of Stirling and the artists formerly mentioned each contributed second numbers.

All the guests remained for the interesting program and the committee in charge are to be congratulated for the variety of artists secured to take part. The program was brought to a close with the National Anthem and dismissal by Rev. A. S. McConnell.

St. Andrew's Young People's Society

The regular weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Guild was held in the Sunday School Room on Monday evening under the direction of Mr. Ross Scott, leader of the Missionary Department. The meeting opened with the usual song service followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison and the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Duncan Montgomery delivered a splendid address on the subject "Observations of a New Missionary". The work depicted by the speaker as seen through the eye of a new worker in mission fields took on a new light, and the address was both educational and of spiritual benefit to all in attendance. A brief social period followed the meeting which was closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Mr. C. M. Sine Awarded $25.00 Prize

Mr. C. M. Sine of Harold is the recipient of many congratulations of his friends these days for his success in winning the twenty-five dollar ladies' wristwatch in a beauty guessing contest sponsored by Mr. W. B. Bishop, Stirling jeweller. The contest has been open for a month and the nearest guess to the actual number of beans contained in the large sealer was made by Mr. Sine who entered the number 2,586, only six figures from the actual number which was 2601. The contest came to a close on December 5th when the award was made.

Stirling Legion Hold Re-organization Meeting

An interesting meeting of the Stirling Legion B.E.S.L. No. 228 was held recently in the Agricultural Hall for the purpose of discussing general business and for the election of officers to take the place of those who had created vacancies by their departure from the district and the death of one of the executive. The meeting was directed by Vice-President Edgar Matthews and among other matters brought before the meeting was the matter of reinstatement of former members. Through correspondence with the governing body it was revealed that members now in arrears with their dues could be placed in good standing with the organization by payment of six months past dues and three months dues in advance making a total of nine payable months to cover all back dues.

A nominating committee was appointed to bring in a slate of new officers for the incoming year and the date for the annual meeting was set. Interest in the organization is rapidly being stimulated by the hearty co-operation of the members who are anxious to see the work go forth and the future is very promising.

Stirling Street Adorned With Christmas Decorations

Evening in the streets of Stirling is most attractive with the additional decorative lights erected during the past week by the local members of the Stirling Hydro Electric system. Gaily tinted lights are strung across the street at regular intervals and the whole business section of the town and village plots is enhanced by the appearance of the hundred or more Christmas trees brought into the village to aid in the decorative scheme. With these temporary changes in the village a real touch of Christmas has been created. The merchants are encouraged by competition to reach new heights in window decorating during this season. Many artistic arrangements of original design are to be seen. The children in the district are particularly interested in the layout of window in the barber shop of Mr. H. Potter and Son. Here the entire space is given over to a miniature Santa Claus scene with a tiny train that continues all through the day journey round an endless track and the boys and girls never tire of watching it.

Personals

Many Stirling citizens spent Wednesday evening in Madoc where the long and hard fought election campaign was climaxed with a gigantic celebration until the small hours of the morning.

Mr. E. T. Ward, Mr. Tom Ward and Mr. Arthur Duncan were in Frankford, on Thursday evening, where they attended the annual oyster supper given by the L.O.L. Mr. Duncan assisted with readings and songs on the program of the evening.

Eight Men and Boy Appreciate Plight Of King Edward VIII

(By John Lear)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Of all the world's millions, eight men and a boy probably are best qualified to appreciate the present plight of King Edward VIII.

Those nine are the only living persons who know what it means to give up a Crown.

It was war, not love, that took Wilhelm his kingdom. His army was losing, his Allies were dropping out of the Great War. But he refused to abdicate.

Even after his Chancellor, Prince Maximilian of Baden, asked the enemy for an armistice, Wilhelm clung to his Crown. Not until he visited his generals and received their ultimatum did he sign his withdrawal and flee by motor across the Dutch border Nov. 9, 1918.

Haile Selassie's warriors still fight the Italian invaders in Ethiopia, and the "King of Kings" still has visions of getting the League of Nations' help to resume the royal line he says goes back to Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

Alfonso Ambitious

Equally ambitious is the former King Alfonso III of Spain. A revolution pushed him off his Throne but in the midst of the present civil war he vowed in public he would yet "die a King."

Instead of struggling to regain his Crown, former King Prajadhipok of Siam does everything he can to forget he ever lived in a palace. He resides quietly in England and asks not to be referred to by his traditional Oriental titles "Brother of the Moon" and "Possessor of the 34 Umbellas."

Former King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is also much relieved not to be a King any more. For the 30 years he ruled, he was in constant fear of assassination. But he had his pride. He kept a loaded revolver on his desk every time a visitor came, leaving the Throne to Crown Prince Boris after the Great War setback, he went to Austria and has lived since in exile.

It was considered bad when he and His Queen toured Europe in 1927, buying modern furniture, clothing and art objects. It was too much when he advocated education of women and abolition of the veil two years later. The Mohammedan priests got rid of him.

Crown Prince Michael was too young to know much about it, but he owed his short reign as King of Rumania to an "affair." He succeeded to the Throne as a child in 1927 after his father, the present King Carol, lost favor as a result of his friendship with Mme. Magda Lupescu and his subsequent divorce from his Queen, Helen of Greece. Four years later Carol regained the Throne and Michael is now just a Prince again.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today I kept wondering what finely happened to Mr. Riley's snake he told me about prestidee, and after school I went around to the firehouse to ask him, and he said, O yes, I didn't finish telling you about Oola, did I?

No sir, you was just getting up to the part about how you lost her, I said, and Mr. Riley said, Ah, that unfortunate misunderstanding. I hate to even think about it, but you mile as well know the whole story. Well, little Oola got to be more and more of a pet. She was a pretty little thing, about a foot and a half long, with the daintiest waistline I ever saw on a snake or a person either, for that matter. She made friends easily, and it wasn't long before all the children in the nayborhood were running in to play with her, he said.

What did they play? I said, and Mr. Riley said, Hide and seek, mostly, and Oola was always it, because naturally it was easy for her to hide in the most remarkable places, and that made the game more exciting. I've seen those kids hunt and hunt for half an hour, and here Oola would be up one of the boys truser legs all the time. She was especially fond of children but she really liked everybody with one exception, and that was the iceman. I thawt it was quite wookkish of her to biss at him so disdainfully every morning, until I found out why, he said.

O, why, Mr. Riley? I said, and he said Well, I began to sispect that he was overcharging me, so I checked up on him and discovered I was paying for twice as much ice as I receeved. Nothing makes me so furious as to be overcharged, and I said to, that iceman, You get out and stay out, you're a snake. Of course I didn't mean it litterly, and I could of bitten my tongue off the moment I said it, because Oola was rite there listening, and she wawked rite out of the kitchin and out of the house and out of my life forever. Come around again, any time, Mr. Riley said.

Parliament Approves

At 6 p.m. heralds, in medieval splendor, will step out on the balcony of the palace for the historic ceremony of public proclamation. Then will follow a splendid procession to Temple Bar and Royal Exchange, where the accession again will be proclaimed.

Then the monarch will not move into Buchingham Palace until the new year, but, like his brother, will go there to transact state business.

Edward Completes Draft of Broadcast

At Fort Belvedere, Edward completed the draft of the speech he will make to his empire tonight and prepare to leave for the continent—not Cannes—before morning. At the same time, Sir Donald Somervell, Attorney General, told his Labrorite questioners, Will Thorne, in Commons:

"There is no truth in the suggestion King Edward will be compelled to leave the country."

Edward's last luncheon as King was with Winston Churchill, and his youngest brother, the Duke of Kent.

The crowd outside roared again and again when the lantern-jawed, pipe-smoking figure of Baldwin walked out to his motor car. There were many cries of "good old Stan."

A short time after he had departed, the Duke of Gloucester, third of the royal brothers, entered the house. There were no cheers for him.

Edward Not Required to Sign

Out at Fort Belvedere, it became known, Edward during the morning signed a document empowering the Royal Commission to give his assent to the act of abdication.

Therefore, there was no necessity for him to sign the act itself.

Edward goes into self-banishment bare of all his titles except Duke of Windsor, which courtesy circles expected him to retain. George VI likely will confer a dukedom on him as a mark of brotherly affection.

Baldwin Improves

Prime Minister Baldwin, who was near collapse when yesterday he gave the House of Commons details of his long conferences with Edward, was reported improved today.

The stirring events of the recent critical days have shaken him, but associates said he was able to bear up due to the sympathy of his cabinet associates and the support of most members of the House of Commons

Coronation Date Likely May 12

Court and government officials believed George VI could be crowned at Westminster Abbey May 12, the date set for the coronation of Edward. The delay, if any, would be only a few weeks, they said.

Thereafter, it was thought possible Baldwin might resign the Premiership. He was understood to be eager to retain his post until the new King is crowned.

DEMISE OF CROWN

It provided that the house "declines to give second reading to the bill which has been submitted by the circumstances which alone clearly the danger to the unity and to the British Commonwealth of Nations inherent in hereditary monarchy at a time when the duties and responsibility of the people require a more ample participation in the government of the Republican kind, in closer contact with, and more responsible to, the will of the majority of the people."

Edward To Be King.

When the bill has been given the royal assent, Edward will cease to be king, and is free to join the woman he loves, Wallis Simpson, for whom he gave up the throne of the empire. His brother, the Duke of York, will be King.

The house again was crowded, still under the influence of the dramatic events of yesterday. The speakers who supported the Republican motion then were given an emotive hearing, although it was obvious from the outset that the amendment would be overwhelmingly defeated.

Maxton spoke for an hour without gesture. His long black hair hanging over his ears, gave him the appearance of a 17th century old-time French revolutionary. Campbell Stephen, deeply skilled in parliament of his argument, had for a few minutes to face a rather murmurous disapproval. William Gallacher, the only Communist member, was unusually vehement.

Kingship Ascribed To Hierds.

From the government benches there were only two speeches against the Maxton amendment. Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, argued that the events of the last few days had demonstrated how deeply the conception of constitutional kingship "has embedded itself in the nation."

Sir Austen Chamberlain, former foreign secretary, painted a moving picture of his own constituency of West Birmingham — an industrial area of poor homes and mean streets — where people regarded the monarch as their greatest friend.

Maxton's amendment was submitted too late to appear on the order paper, but was allowed to be submitted in manuscript form.

The second reading of the bill, Prime Minister Baldwin announced he had received a message from the Archbishop of Wales, President of the Irish Free State, saying the Dail Eireann would pass similar bills and legislation dealing with the situation in the Free State.

Attlee Blames Abolition.

Supporting the bill, Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, said he thought disservice was done to the constitutional monarchy by over-emphasis on vulgar admiration. He said he thought it absurd for wealth and class privileges had descended through the centuries "I find the persistence of old-fashioned court ceremonial and surrounding of the monarch with a narrow and privileged class has happened in the worst of times and frustrated good intentions," he said.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Opposition Liberal leader, said: "We look forward to the coronation of our new king, and we shall rally round the throne."

Maxton, referring to recent events, quoted the old proverb about Humpty Dumpty, who fell off the wall. "But all the king's horses and all the king's men cannot put Humpty Dumpty back again." Constitutional monarchy, Maxton pointedly added, was a device which had worked well in the past during times of reigns. But it had not worked well in the last few weeks. It was unlikely it would ever work well in such a long run of easy and smooth working.

"I say that we are making a great mistake if we don't seize the opportunity that is now presented to give us and establish in our time a completely democratic form of government."

Marxian Bill Unfortunate.

Sir John Simon said it was a misfortune that the bill had been used to rise to such an amendment as that proposed by Maxton.

"It is true," he said, "that what has happened has deeply shocked, inexpressibly saddened the British people. I don't mean merely the events of yesterday. The fact that it is so has only demonstrated more clearly how deeply the conception of constitutional kingship is embedded in our hearts."

The house divided.

"If it did not represent that idea, deeply cherished and profoundly respected, then we should think less about what happened than we do," Sir John added. The institution of monarch was greater than the life of experience of any individual man.

"I would beg everybody to remember that if institutions were not greater than our frailty or the inevitable promptings of the human heart orderly development would be impossible."

Republicanism Not Guarantee of Liberty.

Maxton had spoken of the monarchy as a device. "So is the president of a republic," Sir John declared, amid rounds of cheering. "And the honorable gentleman will allow me to remind that history does not show that Republicanism is a guarantee of stability—certainly not a guarantee of stability associated with liberty."

Duke of Crewe's Bill is Lords.

London, Dec. 11 (CP)—The House of Lords today passed the "Demise of the Crown" Bill made necessary by King Edward's abdication in six minutes.

It was given first reading immediately after the clerk announced receipt of the bill from Commons.

Then Lord Halifax, leader of the House, moved second reading, saying:

"It is not necessary for me to detain your lordships more than a few minutes in making this motion.

"Your lordships will recollect that the gracious message which we had before us yesterday the wish was expressed by His Majesty that this matter should be dealt with by both houses with all practical expedition.

Statement of Decision.

"The bill itself is plain and simple and a short one. Your lordships will please observe that in the second paragraph of the preamble the bill records the consent of the Dominion of Canada and the assent of the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand and the Union of South Africa (to bring the abdication measure before parliament).

The preamble is drawn in rather complicated form, consequent upon the statutory form given to the Statute of Westminster and the preamble represents the results of protracted consultations with the governments of the dominions.

"The bill makes plain in effect the Act of Abdication the Royal Marriages Act of 1772 will not apply in this case."

Lord Snell, leader of the opposition, and Lord Middleton, on behalf of the Liberal party, gave the consent of their delegations to passage of the measure.

QUEEN CONSORT TO BE CROWNED

London, Dec. 11.—(CP Cable)—Accession to the throne of the Duke of York involves the following addition to the Coronation Ceremony—that of crowning a Queen Consort.

At the Coronation of Edward VII in 1902, Queen Alexandra was crowned by the Archbishop of York, Dr. MacLagan, merely as save more solemn for the words Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Temple. The latter then fell ill and died the following December. Dr. Temple nearly collapsed when, after crowning the King, he followed her placement of the Royal family in kneeling in homage to Edward. The newly-crowned sovereign tenderly assisted the Primate to rise.

The Coronation of King George V and Queen Mary in 1911 both ceremonies were performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the late Dr. Davidson. But the Archbishop of York, Dr. Lang, now archbishop of Canterbury, was invited to crown the Queen.

The Archbishop of York, it seems has no official place in the Coronation ceremony. Canterbury is Primate of all England, York is Primate of England. Before this distinction was established in ages long distant, York had certain ecclesiastical tussles with the Primates.

ONE MAN KILLED DURING RIOTING

36 Injured, When Fire Engines Allegedly Run Through Crowd

Chester Pa., Dec. 11 (AP)— One man was killed and about 36 persons were injured during rioting today outside the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company, where a strike has been in progress since last March.

Police said they believed the man was killed when fire engines responding to a false alarm at the Sun plant ran through a crowd of striking shipbuilding pickets. Eyewitnesses outside the gates of the main entrance, many of the injured asserted they had been run down by fire engines.

The rioting broke out after nonstrikers attempted to get through picket lines during the early hours. All members of the Chester police force were on duty as about 100 persons made their way through a milling crowd into the high fence surrounding the company property.

Blows Struck

As a second contingent of workers arrived, blows were struck on both sides and the pickets massed around the gate, preventing any more persons from entering.

How the riot began brought the five pieces of fire fighting apparatus was sounded by police unstable to say. The alarm was turned in after a third contingent of workers, estimated by police at number several hundred, gained entrance to the plant through the picket lines.

The narrow street in front of the company's property close to the Delaware River was filled with thousands of persons. Witnesses said that many were unable to get out of the way as the fire engines as they made their way down the street.

Board Room Gossip

Speculative interest seems to be veering towards the mines, due in large measure to the spectacular advance in Thompson-Cadillac. Astute market observers are looking for a big mining market to develop early in 1937. It is interesting to point out that speculator of small means prefers the mines to the industrials for the reason that they can buy a large number of shares for a little money.

Consolidated Smelters has distributed in dividends since 1906 an amount of $60,212,890.

Some investors have been comparing the relative merits of International Nickel and Noranda. International Nickel reached a high of 72 in 1929, but in the same year company earned $1.47 a share and paid out 90 cents a share. In 1932 the company was showing a large deficit and the market price of the stock dropped to 4. In 1933 the company earned $1.85 a share and paid 75 cents in dividends. In the first nine months of 1936, Nickel had earnings available for common to $25,578,656, against $18,307,761 in 1935 and paid in dividends 90 cents a share against 45 cents in 1929. Its cash and near cash position is also much higher than in 1929. The company is selling more nickel, making greater profits and disbursing larger dividends than it has done in any previous period in its history.

Noranda sold for 74 a share in 1929 and touched a high of 75 during the present year. In 1929 the company earned $1.91 a share and paid out 75 cents a share. In 1935 it earned $2.62 and paid out $2.00 a share. Noranda will earn around $4.00 a share this year (double the 1929 figure) and disbursements amount to $3.00 a share.

Yellow level prices of three months will depend upon complicated factors that bear no relation in any way to the market prices of 1936.

McColl-Frontenac

Selling to yield about 6 per cent. the common shares of McColl-Frontenac are well regarded as speculative-investment for the patient investor. Latest official developments this year promise well sustained earnings for McColl-Frontenac compared with the $1.21 a common share reported for the fiscal year ended January 31, 1936.

Common stock dividends of 80 cents a share last year were entirely safe, since the latest reported financial position of the company was strong, with evidence of a gradual growth in earnings is supported by the strong trade parts standing and prospects for generally improving Canadian oil operations.

The development of favourable crude oil production from the West Indian properties acquired in 1932 and the withdrawal from the competitive retailing field through the leasing of service stations to individual operators offer additional possibilities for earnings improvement.

ITALY'S NAVAL MIGHT PLEASES THEM BOTH

After they had reviewed 104 grim units of the Italian navy in the bay of Naples, Benito Mussolini (left) and Italy and Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, exchanged smiles on board the Italian man-o'-war from which they received the fleet. Apparently the sight of Italy's armed naval might pleased both Il Duce and Regent.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP) — Price movements were irregular but mainly towards higher levels in the mining stock list today, with few changes of importance. Some of the more active issues were fractionally lower, including Lake Shore, Dome, McIntyre, Pickle Crow, Preston East Dome and Pamour were higher against minor losses for Mining Corporation, Argonaut, Kerr Addison, Wright Hargreaves.

The base metals higher prices were hoarded on considerable volume, Falconbridge, Aldermac and Chromium. Eldorado was the most active of the allvers and a few cents higher, while Beaver Gold gained for Calgary-Edmonton and Home Oil.

TORONTO INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)—Traders gave their chief attention to Brazilian Traction, Light and Hiram Walkers Common in the early action today. While the distillery stock advanced 1¼ points, Brazilian showed little profit-taking on yesterday's bulge when the company anticipated the announcement of a 40-cent dividend. The general tone was firm until the start but a bit sluggish around midday.

British American Oil pushed ahead of the 23 mark while Imperial Oil, a shade easier, and C.P.R. and Ford "A" were lower. The metals, Nickel and Smelters also sold off slightly. A few of the steels were strong, particularly National Steel Car, Canada Bridge and Steel of Canada Common.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec 11 (AP)—Specialties, notably the dull, low priced brackets, stormed the stock market tonight, rolling up gains of fractions to 2 or more points while many market leaders either stood still or fell back.

International Nickel yielded fractionally and Canadian Pacific and McIntyre added slightly while United Aircraft Corp.-Seagrams and Hiram Walker pushed modestly higher. Ford of Can. Curb, Lake Shore improved 1-2 of a point, Canadian dollars held unchanged at 99 1-32 of a cent.

Conspicuous shares on the upside included Gulf Oil, Consolidated Oil, Solvents, Hiram Walker, American Zinc, Rubber, Crucible Steel, Eastern Rolling Mill, International Harvester, Deere, J. I. Case, Houston Oil, Ohio Oil, Continental Oil, Rubber and American Radiator.

American Can, Continental Can and Du Pont were narrow at 1-2 at the worst. Western Union gave ground, as did Westinghouse, Lowe's and U.S. Smelting.

RELIEF COST DECREASED

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 11.—(CP)—Estimated cost of relief in the City of Windsor for 1937 is $167,810 less than the amount asked for 1936, according to figures presented to members of the City Council by City Administrator Charles Hays today.

Estimated expenditures on direct relief at the first of this year, including the governmental grants in aid, were $1,000,000. The new estimates, for 1937, total $3,558,305.

TAKE NO ACTION

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 11 (CP)—Windsor Utilities Commission at a meeting here last night decided to take no action about three years ago former employees of the former Walkerville Gas Commission pending further investigation and a study of the report on a special audit of Commissary books, expected within a week.

Shortages in the Walkerville Hydro accounts are now estimated at $60,000. The Walkerville System was taken over by the Utilities Commission when the municipalities of East Windsor, Ford City, Sandwich and Walkerville amalgamated into greater Windsor last year.

$500 IN LOOT TAKEN

Preston, Ont., Dec. 11.—(CP)—Loot estimated at $500 was stolen today by robbers at Jerry's Cigar Store where a back door was practically demolished to permit entrance. Cigarettes, candies, cigars, cigarettes, pipes and lighters comprised the loot taken.

Senator O'Connor Denies Purchase of Loblaw Stock

Report current for some time that Senator Frank P. O'Connor, President and Chairman of the Board of Laura Secord Candy Shops, Ltd., has been buying heavily of Loblaw Groceteria's common stock has no basis in fact.

When asked by The Globe and Mail if the story were true he answered, "it is not true. I regret to state that I do not own any Loblaw stock. I have a very good stock of a well-conducted company, and I am sorry to say that I have not a single share of it."

A director and one of the chief executives of Loblaw Groceterias, said he was unable to guess the source of this story. There has been no change in the control of the company since the death of the former President T. P. Loblaw. At that time a block out of the 350,000 par value common "B" shares were sold to various investment interests in England. Transfers indicate no important new interest in the stock and all holders have retained their holdings.

As pointed out recently in these columns the management of the big company from experienced management point and a long period of merchandising are sufficient explanation of the increasing favor it has been shown by the investing public.—The Globe and Mail.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, Dec. 11.—(CP)—Wheat prices were quietly firm on early trading on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, supported by moderate buying. Values near mid-session were 1-8 cent higher to 1-8 cent lower, December at 114 1-8 A. May at 115 3-4 and July 11.12 3-4.

Coarse grains followed, with closes 1-8 to 3-8d lower, had only a fleeting effect here.

Mr. Norman L. Leach, Winnipeg, new Royal Bank Director

N. L. Leach Appointed Royal Bank Director

The appointment of Mr. Norman Lawrence Leach of Winnipeg, as Director of The Royal Bank of Canada, is announced by the Bank's Head Office today.

For the past years Mr. Leach, has been closely identified with Canada's grain trade and the commercial and industrial life of the prairies. At one time he was President of the Dow Milling Grain Company and to-day holds high executive posts with a number of important grain companies.

Mr. Leach was born in Toronto in 1879 and educated there. He settled in Winnipeg in 1906 on his appointment as General Manager of the National Elevator Company, Ltd., and in 1907 joined the Searle Grain Company, Ltd., of which he is now President. Mr. Leach is also President of the Terminal Elevator, Ltd., President of the Home Grain Company, Ltd., and Vice-President of the Northland Elevator Company, Ltd. He is a Director of the Grain Insurance and Guarantee Company and a member of the Winnipeg Advisory Board of the Royal Trust Company.

Weekly Livestock Review

Toronto, Dec. 51—(CP)—Prices gained 26 cents a cwt. on Toronto livestock markets this week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported, but otherwise price changes were nominal. Calves were firm most of the period but eased a little on the end. The lambs closed strong after an early week dip and showed little change.

Receipts for daily steers sold in small lots at $5.75 to $6.35 with choice steers downward to $4.25. Good butcher cattle and heifers brought $5 to $5.25 with a few reaching $5.50. Cows generally sold down to $3.

Calves prices were unchanged at $2.25 to $3.50, choice reaching up to $3.75. Canners and Cutters were steady at $1.50 down. Good bulls were priced from $3.00 to $3.25 with cows at $3.75. Stockers were steady to $2.75, most going as the higher price.

Choice fed calves ranged from $7.50 to $8 with mediums downward to $5.25. Common stockers were priced to $3 to $3.50 and better grades as high as $4.25. Milkers and springers were about steady with a few at $100. Others were as low as $30 each.

Choice lambs sold to $10 with tops up to the close when the market eased off, after export orders had been filled from $9.50 to $9.75 and heavies from $4.50 to $5.50.

A lighter run of Ontario hogs and a trifle over reports in the United States sent prices up 25 cents here. Selects closed at $7.50 to $7.75 and $8 to $8.10 off trucks and at $8.25 weighed off cars. Canadian hogs, averaging 185 to 200 pounds, were quoted at $10.25 to $10.50 cwt. at Buffalo.

Lamb prices opened the week steady and firmed Wednesday. Good grass and wethers closed at $9 to $9.25 with heavies from $6 to $7.25. A few lots of choice Southdown lambs of show type traded from $9 to $10.50. Sheep were firm from $3 to $4.50 cwt according to quality and yearlings sold around $8 cwt.

LIFE, DEATH AND TUBERCULOSIS

Scores of thousands of people have died of tuberculosis in Ontario during the last thirty-five years, most of whom might have been saved had they taken time. It is little wonder, therefore, that the Canadian Tuberculosis Association has been endeavoring from 100 for each 100,000 living persons to 37 as the present time. In fact, your chances and mine of getting tuberculosis are less than one-half what they were when the turn of the present century. More than 4,000 men, women and children will celebrate Christmas and New Year this year who would have died of tuberculosis in 1900 had the conditions of living to-day existed then. It is the splendid work of the National Sanitarium Association that is largely getting under way.

But in spite of all that has been done and in spite of the continuous decline in the death rate from tuberculosis, there are still 7,000 deaths each year in Ontario last year. It is doubly sad to learn that two-thirds are about 4,500 active cases of tuberculosis in this Province right now. Of these, 1,500 are considered to be in the final stage of the disease, who died of tuberculosis last year and of those who are now sick, are young people in the prime, productive ages of life, between fifteen and forty-five. Sixty out of every one hundred deaths from tuberculosis are in this group.

Early prevention, between fifteen and twenty-five, is an especially dangerous time for the development of tuberculosis. It is at this time, when young people are in the most active period of life, that they are most susceptible to the disease. Because it is not discovered and treated in time, the disease gets a foothold and becomes fatal in as many as eighty young people out of every 100,000 living at this time. Of the 7,000 deaths last year, 3,000 young men and women between fifteen and thirty could be given a proper chest X-ray examination, if time found to have the disease could be given proper care, and restored to active usefulness. Thousands of young people with tuberculosis could easily be brought under control. Those three "ifs" are difficult but not impossible to attain.

In fact, this is the goal of the tuberculosis campaign of the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. Twenty Toronto Conservatories, any contribution you make toward the work of Muskoka hospital will be one more tuberculosis. Please send your gift to the National Sanitarium Association, 347 College St., Toronto.

Canadiens Lose 2 to 1 as Red Wings Score Second Victory

Gorman may be more anxious to keep the 35-year-old Torontonian after the rush that won Maroons a 2-1 victory over Chicago Black Hawks at Montreal last night. It lifted the Montreal team into third place in the Canadian Division, two points ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs with whom they had shared the cellar.

Montreal Canadiens met a 2-1 defeat before Red Wings at Detroit so the Maroon advance left them within striking distance of their local rivals. When Gorman's men and the happy Habitants meet in Montreal Saturday night Maroons can go into a tie for first place by whipping the Frenchmen.

Conacher used the rush he had been saving for a rainy day when the Hawks were lined up before Alex Connell for a gang attack while Cheri Robidas was serving a penalty. The score was tied 1-1 there was only seven minutes to play and it looked as if Hawks might be playing their sixth tie game in 12.

But old Conny broke away from the pack to take a pass from Wilder Tarcheille in hot pursuit. It was an odds on bet Wilder would catch him and he did but the Hawk had a harder job trying to get the puck away. Conacher shook off his chopping stick and drove the winning goal past Mike Karakas.

All three goals of the game were scored in the third. Herbie Cain selling the first when he took Cherry Carson's pass and lifted in a shot shot. Mush Marsh knotted the count 39 minutes later perfect low, fast shot that Connell didn't seem to see.

The Wings' win over Canadiens sent them into the lead in the American section by a point over New York Rangers. It was the second win for Detroit this week, Tuesday they won 4-3 from Boston.

Both wins were set up while Wings were seriously hampered by injuries to regular players, Tuesday they were without Mud Brunetean, Doug Young, Hal Rowe and Scotty Bowman. Last night only Bruneau lean was back in uniform.

The Border was started by Larry Aurie, Herbie Lewis and Marty Barry who engineered both goals. They came near the start and in the last minute of the second period. Lewis scoring the first with Aurie and Barry assisting and Aurie notching the second on the other two in on it.

Johnny Gagnon put Canadiens back in the fight with only a couple of minutes to play. Odie McKenzie gave him a pretty pass for the goal. Norm Smith saved a split in the points when he stopped Aurel Joliat's sure looking shot with only seconds to play.

First and foremost we cannot vouch for the authenticity or part of this story, but it was told to us for a positive fact and perhaps should carry the heading: "History repeats itself," or the chickens come home to roost. In 1922 when the Belleville Grand Trunks were playing the Toronto Hillcrests in the O.B.A.A. play-offs at the old Fair Ground, Lionel "Big Train" Conacher was in left field for the Hillcrests and the business of catching fly balls in that particular field was none too brisk in the early stages of the game, calling for a bit of exercise on the seventh inning. Conacher was busily engaged in the afternoon's nap when suddenly one of the Belleville batters lifted a long high fly towards left field. Conacher was unaware of the incident, still "pounding his ear." His teammates shouted and believed to the top of their voices and suddenly Lionel awoke to realize something important was happening in the ball game of which he was apparently unaware.

His teammates' shouts resulted in Conacher making a mad race in towards the now-fast-falling fly ball and finally succeeded in shaking the cob-webs of his drowsiness from his eyes, looking up and seeing directly upon the top of his head, the ball in question. Conacher, however, Now for the "History repeats itself episode." It seems Lionel Conacher is to be a Major League player at large for the Ontario Commission and has been assigned to Belleville as his first stop on the platform of the Big Time. Conacher should make a splendid member or ambassador for the C.A.C. He knows the ins and outs of all phases of sport, whether or pro and should be a valued member of the Commission.

When John DeDrusky, that grand old man of Canadian rugby football of the city of Toronto, needs we asked him to name his selection of an all-star team from Eastern Canada, taking in the senior O.R.F.U., interprovincial and junior intercollegiate series. His selections were: Centre, Bob Fritsch, Boz and Bilowits; Flying wing, Stirling; Quarterback, Mc-Watters; Snapback, A. Williams; Inside wings, Jokkus and Palmer; Middles, Sprague and Kemper; Outsides, Morris and Wilson.

As is his usual custom the Pete-terboro sport scribe wrote a few caustic comments to suit his fancy, as the saying goes: "the devil can quote scripture for his purpose." The Lifluck City scribe comes out and informs all and sundry that the Orillia team, known as the Terriers, Intermediate "A" ratings for the year and were not the O.H.A. champions, as the Peterboro executive member, informs us that the Orillia organized a "set-up" saying that Belleville and Trenton were to have a "fix" classification, while the Petes and the Fliers were to be "A". This is recorded on the minutes of the meeting, we understand.

In a severe attack upon the O. H. A. Mr. Berryman and Belleville and Trenton hockey interests, the Peterboro scribe says the Petes will only come into the O.H.A. series under one consideration, that being that all teams are to be made of an "A" or "B" classification. Unless this is adhered to the Peterboro outfit threats will definitely QUIT, he says. Well, well, now isn't that just too bad. And say boy, who cares? We understand there may be a berth for a good hockey team in the city of the Kingston district, that could adequately be taken care of by the R.C.A.F. interests, and Belleville and Trenton to play a five game series in the "B" grouping, that is if the Petes carry out their threat to drop out and withdraw all interests in the intermediate O.H.A. circles if they don't get their own way. Belleville and Trenton were given "B" ratings at the O.H.A. committee meeting and have agreed to retain that classification regardless.

Coach Frank Buckland of the Petes says he will not play in a group, where another team can knock his charges off the potential "A" play-downs and he cannot retaliate. It's quite obvious his team needs a good workout by knocking out either Belleville or Trenton in the series.

A signal honor will be bestowed upon the members of the local Personal Bible method team, interclubbists O.A.S.A. champions, this evening. The boys are to be feted and dined and later will be presented with sweater coats, suitably inscribed to fit the occasion.

The local intermediate O.H.A. team held its initial practice at the Arena last night and a goodly number of aspirants were on hand to limber up. Some of the old timers skated out and loosened the leg muscles while the younger and more agile pucksters turned it on with vim and vigor. They say that the ice is on as soon as the weather is suitable for ice-making.

Just seems as though Lionel Conacher is "in the news". Gloom might be slumbering at politics and on the diamond, but he was far from asleep last night. "The Big Train" was in the news when the Maroons trounced the Black Hawks 2 to 1; why—well Mrs. Conacher's little boy broke the dead-lock with a last minute solo rush to score the winning tally. While all this was going on the Red Wings set the Canadiens back 2 to 1.

Owing to the fact most of the major league clubs have a barn full of ball players they have in stock the dead ball will not be adopted until the 1938 season opens.

With fire in his eyes and ready to kill the person who dares to take Max Schmeling landed on the North American shores the other day and set up a terrific howl in protest against the proposed Louis-Braddock contest in June next. The winner of the Schmeling-Louis bout was promised a shot at the heavyweight crown and that's exactly what I'll fight the champ here, there or anywhere," shouted Herr Max as he demanded a hearing from the Boxing Commission.

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press

Detroit's Larry Aurie continued his terrific scoring pace in the National Hockey League last night with a goal and assist as Toronto Maple Leafs, thereby moving into undisputed possession of first place in the big seven with 31 points. Aurie's five mates, Herb Lewis and Marty Barry, also scored two points apiece to go into a second-place tie with Americans' Dave Schriner, who led the field last until the game this week.

"REDMEN" HOLD SNAPPY WORKOUT

Deseronto Forward Line Makes Appearance at Practice

On slow, soft ice, due to the weather conditions prevailing, the Belleville intermediate O. H. A. team held its initial practice of the season at the Arena last night evening. A goodly number of aspiring hockey players were on hand to take advantage of the evening's practice. Veteran pucksters, who have proven their worth in past years, were interspersed with unseasoned juniors, who were experiencing their first taste of intermediate hockey, much to the satisfaction of a large number of interested rail-birds, who took in the proceedings.

Manager Eddie Thomas introduced his new junior goalie, Jack McGrath, former Maritime netminder. Raymond "Bun" Wood and Art O'Grady, who saw service with the Athletic aggregation, were also in uniform, and three being well under the Junior age, however. A number of veteran players including Jimmie Ackerman, Gerald Stibbe, Jim McGuire, Cy Hartrage and Buster Whitlow, former Campbellford "pepper-pot" worked out.

Many of the new-comers who have advanced this year from the junior ranks, are Fred McGrath, Jim Tompkins, and the Jackson brothers of Deseronto, and Burley, of Wellington, all present. The Deseronto trio are starred with the Napanee Juniors last winter and attracted considerable attention throughout that part of the district by their speed and scoring ability. Manager Thomas expects to add to his present contingent of aspiring pucksters and has high hopes of icing a team of fast-skating youngsters, many of whom will be playing their initial season in the intermediate ranks.

The Belleville intermediates are entered in the "B" series of the intermediate class and will be represented at the forthcoming group meeting to be held at Belleville next week by Manager Thomas. In the meantime subsequent practices will be held according to weather conditions.

RUGBY PLAYER DEPROVES

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 11 (CP) — Buck Smith, injured Toronto footballer, will remain in hospital at least another ten days but hospital officials today reported he was progressing speedily.

Although 6 ft. Louis Cardinale still hoped to sell the great Dean, vice-president Brandon Rickey still was waiting for a bit as he kept his hook in the baseball pool.

FELLER RULED TO CLEVELAND

Rabbit Ball Will Be Used For One More Season

New York, Dec. 11.— (AP) — Bob Feller was safely in the Cleveland Wigwam, the Rabbit Ball was set for another riding spree over distant fences and the incomparable Dizzy Dean still received orders from Branch Rickey today.

As Major League Club owners and managers headed for home, all was peaceful and serene in the baseball world.

Cleveland was happy and relieved by the decision of Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, who finally ruled that Feller, 17-year-old pitching wonder, was Ha exclusive property.

Club owners were triumphant. With the Feller decision behind them, they hoped ultimately to erase the statute which forbids them to sign sandlot players without minor league experience.

Because the rabbit ball, a big warehouse filled with Rabbit balls it was decided to use them up in 1937 and then talk about a deader sphere for 1938.

SCHMELING WANTS SHOWDOWN 'CAN'T FOOL ME' HE SAYS

German Claims He Was Promised First Shot at Braddock's Title

Mein Herr Max was going to tell the fistic fathers he was ready to sign to meet Braddock any time the promoters can arrange the fight. Max didn't care whether it is staged here, in Miami or in Atlantic City.

Also Der Maxie was set to tell one and all he is prepared to square both the Germans and Hitler's Braddock fain to be through with his promise to give Joe Louis' conqueror first shot at the heavyweight crown.

"And when I say first shot, that's just what I mean," said Max. "They're not fooling me with that talk about a no-decision fight. Brad jock's title will be at stake the minute he steps into the ring with Louis whether the bout is for four, six or twelve rounds."

YOUR NEIGHBORS MADE THIS TEST!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Compared to the gasoline you have been using . . . did you get:—

(1) quicker starting? 87 YES

(2) faster pickup? 80 YES

(3) more power on hills? 72 YES

(4) better all-around performance? 95 YES

1214 motorists in 14 U.S. cities tested a "mystery" gasoline. 95% of them proved that it gave better performance than the gasoline they had been using.

This "mystery gas" was Blue Sunoco.

Truth in gasoline advertising! . . . Fact, instead of claim! — that's what Blue Sunoco brings you in the most complete, the most daring test ever devised for any gasoline!

HOW THIS TEST WAS MADE

We employed the services of the Ross Federal Research Corp.—an entirely independent, fact-finding organization. Unknown even to our own employees, this organization sent its men out into the highways and byways of fourteen cities—large and small in eastern United States.

WE LEFT THE BLUE OUT OF BLUE SUNOCO

This was to prevent identification. Otherwise, this gasoline was regular Blue Sunoco and the confidence to the test, made by an independent testing laboratory, proves it.

WHO TOOK PART IN THIS TEST?

More than twelve hundred motorists—people like yourself; workmen and clerks, housewives and doctors, business executives and others, were asked to try this "mystery" gasoline.

They came from all walks of life, in all makes of cars. The gasoline was drained from their tanks and replaced with ten gallons of this "mystery" gasoline. Then they went out for a test. Later, they were asked for their honest, candid opinions. Here are the figures. The comments of those motorists who were already using Blue Sunoco have been omitted from the compilations:

BLUE SUNOCO WINS AGAINST 54 OTHER LEADING BRANDS OF GASOLINE

In this remarkable test, Blue Sunoco was compared with 54 other makes of gasoline — extra-priced, regular-priced, car-priced. The 1214 motorists who took part in the test didn't know which gasoline they were testing—don't know even yet, until they read this report.

95% OF THESE MOTORISTS PROVED THE SUPERIORITY OF BLUE SUNOCO IN ALL-AROUND PERFORMANCE. THIS, BEYOND QUESTION, RANKS IT AS AN OUTSTANDING MOTOR FUEL AT ANY PRICE.

LETTER FROM E. W. SATBOLT & CO.

A recognized authority on Petroleum

This is to certify that we have supervised the filling of the drums of gasoline for these tests, and sealed them with tamper-proof ENSCO seals.

Furthermore, our laboratory analyses have proved that this gasoline was regular Blue Sunoco Motor Fuel in every respect, except for the blue color which was removed to avoid identification by motorists, and to avoid bias in the tests. Coloring, however, does not affect the performance of the gasoline in any way.

LETTER FROM ROSS FEDERAL RESEARCH CORPORATION

A nationally known organization

We witnessed the sealing of gasoline drums at the refinery and shipping of them to ten gallons of Blue Sunoco, minus its identifying blue color, to approximately one hundred motorists in each of these cities, first pumping out the gas in their tanks.

Later, our representatives called upon these motorists and obtained their confidential answers. We tabulated the results and certify to the correctness of the figures in this advertisement.

Chapter XIII

Rose left the room almost blind with rage. Walking out of the building she did not hear Sally's hail nor look up until that young lady tooled her hurt vigorously. "Hey," she called. "Whoa, what's the matter, dearie?"

Rose took up and shook her head. She was so angry that she forgot she liked Sally. Sally was a person, that was enough for her. Sally said, "Get in here. You look as if you were going to have a stroke or something. Father can find his way home alone. For heaven's sake, Rose, don't stand there looking as if you were going out to the Coliseum."

People were passing and eyeing them curiously. Rose wrenched the door open and got in. Sally shifted gears. "What's the matter?" she said softly.

Rose told her. She could not have helped telling her. Words poured from her. She said finally, "Well, I've a good mind to have my witnesses together and I haven't any! What's mother up to, anyway? She put her hands to her temples—"I'll have to tell her," she said dully.

"Not on your life," Sally was silent. Then she swore. She swore very fluently and well. Rose looked startled at her. Sally was pale. She stopped swearing and looked at Rose, softly.

Rose told her. She could not have helped telling her. Words poured from her. She said finally, "Well, I've a good mind to have my witnesses together and I haven't any! What's mother up to, anyway? She put her hands to her temples—"I'll have to tell her," she said dully.

"Not on your life," Sally was silent. Then she swore. She swore very fluently and well. Rose looked startled at her. Sally was pale. She stopped swearing and looked at Rose, softly.

"Rose, you've got to keep your head. You've got to be calm. I'm not going to let 'em! That was their idea, to get you stuck to it. Trying to railroad, are they? Well, they're not up against the Sutton-controlled intelligence. Listen, Rose, you've got to keep your own presence, your own poise, and by the standing of your family. Don't you see? Sally stormed, exasperated. "Oh, Mrs. Sanders is going to have a fit over it! She'll be all for the Board meeting our precious Larry admitted he'd been drinking. Now he was drinking on it in court. They'll crawl. You watch. Don't let 'em! That was their idea, to get you stuck to it. Trying to railroad, are they? Well, they're not up against the Sutton-controlled intelligence. Listen, Rose, you've got to keep your own presence, your own poise, and by the standing of your family. Don't you see?

"Rose, you're going to see Sam Patten," Sally answered.

Rose was quite still after Sally had left. Her mother was out. Rose dreaded her arrival. She telephoned Jonathan but he was at the hospital. She went upstairs to her room and changed her clothes. As she came down again the bell rang. Jonathan was at the door. He found Martin there, looking dourly at her.

"May I come in—?"

"Of course."

In the hall he said, "I won't take a minute of your time. You ought to get right home—"

"Sally's coming around presently, and Fred Sutton. We're going to have a quiet little cry no one knew it. Now she said something tremendously about a cup of coffee— her antidote against any poison, her particular brand of Dutch courage.

"I'm afraid I'm in for it," remarked Rose to Jonathan. Her mouth shook and her eyes brimmed. He took her in his arms. He said, "We'll both be in for it together, together."

"Sally tell you everything?"

"Yes. She told Sam too. I stopped at Sam's office, and she came in. That dirty little—let's not waste words on him. But we have the Enders case in the bag."

The local papers carried an item concerning Rose's suspension from duty and there was all precedent for getting out an extra. He did not of course itemize the charges against Rose. He merely gave the record and appealed to the students to keep their good name and their most popular teachers. He did more than that. He said and every normal young men and women deserved a little manslaughter calling on certain students who by reason of social standing, scholastic or athletic prowess were leaders in the school.

The result of this tragedy was that except for the handful which constituted Larry's following, the student body stuck.

They picketed the Sutton house and the Enders house and the Patten house and the Martin house. They made a marvelous time. They got into dust-ups with the police and came off victorious. You couldn't say severer things than the students, the jail wouldn't contain them. They held a meeting at which parents to their way of thinking were hissed out and cheered for their impassioned speech. Rose had a champion in Sam Patten, who got a lever by which a free obituary could get itself of Dictatorship.

"Talk about Europe, Spider," said Sam, "why, my friends, Europe isn't in it. We launched into a campaign against the 'Sutton-controlled intelligence.' Some of the students—Europeans—saying my own presence, Rose's people, led by the students, cheered and clapped.

Rose wasn't at the meeting. She was with Miss Jonathan. When Sam brought her word of the success of his maneuver she said, "It's sort of scared."

"I'm scared! Sam, "you aren't in she, Kim?"

"You're pretty swell," said Rose. "Sit down, Sam."

"Both of you."

"Rose, I can't. It isn't all you," explained Sam earnestly, "much as I love you. You understand that. But I'm not looking for a fight. I don't want to pick it. With our dear ex-Senator. You're in."

"O very nice little bone," John's wife said, "I'm in."

"Bill-Lynd's coming around presently, and Fred Sutton. We're going to have a quiet little cry no one knows. Now she said something tremendously about a cup of coffee—her antidote against any poison, her particular brand of Dutch courage.

"I'm afraid I'm in for it," remarked Rose to Jonathan. Her mouth shook and her eyes brimmed. He took her in his arms. He said, "We'll both be in for it together, together."

VANCOUVER'S NEW AND IMPOSING CITY HALL COMPLETED

Vancouver's new $1,000,000 city hall—an imposing structure of 10 stories—was opened with pomp and ceremony recently. The building, modernistic in design and striking in appearance was financed by an issue of "baby bonds" sold to Vancouver citizens at two per cent. interest. ABOVE is a view of the new city hall tower with a picture of Mayor-elect George C. Miller, inset. Mayor Miller was elected to succeed Gerald McGeer. Financing construction of the new city hall was part of Mayor McGeer's activities.

SPANIARD AND MOOR FIND ROAD TO MADRID A HARD ONE

A rest from the hardships of war gives this young Moor an opportunity to exchange experiences on the beret-wearing Carlist, fighting with the rebel forces road to Madrid. It's been a long road and a hard one near Madrid, and the grimfaced, turban-wearing old for the insurgents, who have yet to take the capital.

FORD MOTOR CO. EXPANDS PLANT

To Spend $3,303,000 Erecting New Assembly And Body Plant at Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 10.—Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited is preparing to erect a giant new body manufacturing and final assembly plant adjoining its main factory here at a cost of $3,300,000, Wallace R. Campbell, president, announced today.

The building is estimated to cost $3,300,000. Tools, equipment, building services, tunnel and subway to be installed, are estimated to cost another $1,000,000.

The new factory is part of an ambitious program designed to expand the Ford company's production capacity by at least 25 per cent. and to modernize and consolidate its manufacturing facilities. When the program is completed Ford will be able to build 100,000 units a year in Canada.

Construction work will get under way early in 1937. The new plant is scheduled to be ready for operation before the end of next year. The $3,300,000 expenditure for the new factory is in addition to the $1,700,000 approved by Ford directors at the November 18 meeting for enlargement of the main Ford manufacturing plant and installation of equipment to enlarge and modernize the production facilities.

The two projects will cost about $5,000,000 and are expected to provide employment for a large number of workers during the construction period.

This new expansion is a continuation of the program which got under way in 1935 with expansion and modernization of the power house at a cost of approximately $1,700,000, and construction and equipment of a new electric furnace building, at an additional cost of approximately $1,100,000. When fully completed the cost of the program will run to almost $8,000,000, of which $5,000,00, it is expected, will be expended during the coming year.

This is the largest expansion program undertaken by Ford in Windsor since 1923-3 when Ford erected the power house, constructed the main manufacturing plant and purchased the entire Ford property except that occupied by the original riverfront plant.

The new building will house all body manufacturing and assembly activities. It will also enable Ford to increase the amount of work done in Canada in body manufacturing, decrease its importation from the States and increase still further the British Empire content of its product.

FOXBORO

Foxboro, Dec. 11.—The December meeting of the W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. Embury on Thursday with fourteen present. The meeting opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Christie. A hymn was sung and Mrs. (Rev.) Horton gave a lovely poem on the theme of "working as you pray". Mrs. J. G. Sills offered prayer and Mrs. (Rev.) Horton read the Scripture lesson. The minutes were read and adopted and some business transacted. Another hymn was sung—Mrs. Hodgson gave a reading. Another verse was sung and Mrs. Jamieson gave a reading on "Christmas". A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Embury, retiring president, for the work done in the W.A. during the year and Mrs. Embury thanked the ladies for their co-operation. A very dainty lunch was then served by the hostess.

Mr. Allan Gay spent Wednesday at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sharpe and son of Belleville were Sunday evening guests at Mr. Harry Sharpe's.

The village was quiet on Saturday when a large crowd gathered at the polling booth, it being election day.

There was a small attendance at S. S. and church on Sunday owing to the slippery condition of the roads.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Hodgen and Dale of Belleville were Sunday evening guests at Mr. W. Hodgen's.

DAILY SHORT STORY

She Was Not L.O.P.H.

By Cora Remington

"Mary certainly is painfully plain."

A girl's voice came from behind the screen of palms and greenery and fell on Mary Westcott's ears with sickening distinctness.

"This is her fourth season and I don't believe she's had a single proposal. . . . I guess she'll be an L.O.P.H."

"Oh don't you know!—left on pa's hands, of course. Never heard that? Why, Jimmy, where did you grow up?" the girl laughed a little teasingly, but the man's reply made Mary want to jump through the ferns and hug him.

It was easy enough for Mary to recognize the voices of the speakers. The girl, she knew, was Virginia Brewster, a pretty, self-confident little debutante who had succeeded in making nearly every eligible man in her set think that he was in love with her; and the man was James Harvey, the despair and delight of every girl in Westway. For nearly a dozen seasons he had bravely but apparently blissfully withstood the charms and wiles of Westway's leading belles. Every unique known to woman had been tried on him from the modern flapper who boldly professed her love to the shrinking violet, modestly shy and helpless, but James Harvey was still footloose and fancy free. The most aggravating part was that he invariably refused to discuss marriage with anyone, so no one knew how he stood on the subject. Often on a moonlight night a few romantic remarks seemed appropriate, but in that case, he was always the girl who did the talking, Harvey merely sat, his clear, handsome profile tantalizing near, his long, lithe figure relaxed and inert.

"He doesn't know how to make a girl love him," stormed Virginia later, "I never saw such indifference in my life."

"He seems to, though," remarked her mother dryly. "You're about the tenth victim this season."

That evening at the ball at the Westway club when Mary overheard Virginia's remark behind the palms, her first instinct was to flee. She wanted to crawl off into a corner and weep until she died. Hot flashes rushed over her and cold little needle pricklings dancing over her skin. A lump rose in her throat and her swift resolution to leave out the evening was as promptly changed when she felt the scalding tears splashing down, her cheeks. As the voices moved away from behind the bower of ferns she crept around the other side and hid there herself.

If only she had never been born, she thought. Why had she been, anyway? She was no good, she wasn't pretty, she wasn't even very rich, she wasn't charming, she wasn't anything.

"But-I must stop this crying," she told herself, dabbing angrily at her eyes. "I can't get out of here. What shall I do? Thank heaven, the orchestra's started again. They'll all go and dance. Then maybe I can escape. But, oh, I'm so wretched. I'm so miserable and lonely. O.-O.P.-H.!"

"Why, Mary, why are you crying? I'm going to sit right down here without waiting for an invitation and you're going to tell me. Surely you can trust your secret with an old man like me." Harvey laughed as he slipped a hand over one of hers.

The girl was too startled and embarrassed to reply. She merely shook her averted head as she struggled to regain control. She'd be a million dollars cash would she let him know that she had overheard the dreadful conversation, not for anything on earth. She would die first.

"All right, honey, you needn't tell. I'll just sit here and hold your hand until you feel better," he said.

No wonder everybody loved him thought Mary. He was a sympathetic angel, a dancing bear, that's what.

"Strange, isn't it?" he went on talking gently. "I'd been looking for you when I ran across you here. Something Virginia said a little while ago made me fall in love with you. It happened almost in the flash of a second. I thought to myself suddenly, 'That's the very girl I want to protect and love. She'd appreciate what a fellow did for her.' After that I was so eager to find you and tell you about it that I could hardly wait for Virginia's next partner to come and claim her."

To this day Mary does not know just when or how her head got on Jim's big protective shoulder, or just when her tears of misery turned to those of sheer joy, but these things did happen and Mary insists that she has never been the same person since.

The people in Westway have not yet recovered from the shock.

"Mary's welcome to him," said Virginia, "I wouldn't have anything so picky slow as he is myself."

"I never dreamed old Jim would have enough sense to do it," said one of his friends at the club.

"I don't know," answered another, thoughtfully. "It often happens when a fellow gets tired of playing around he chooses a girl that will make a good wife and a real mother to his children. Jim's no fool."

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

As the pygmy warriors discussed the strange advent of the giant they had captured, they heard the unsunny notes of a weird cry, such a cry as they had heard occasionally all during their lives, sounding mysterious and awe-inspiring from the dark distances of the jungle.

Never, however, had they heard it so close. It sounded almost in the village. Their fears were confirmed by Tarzan's guards, who ran to them, wide-eyed and breathless. "It is a demon we have captured!" they cried; "he has changed himself into an ape. Did you hear?"

Tarzan, of course, had no power to transform his body, but in truth he had used that weird, bloodcurdling cry which was the ape-call of distress. That was circumstantial evidence of sufficient strength to convince the pygmies that the giant possessed magical powers.

"Let us go and kill the creature," said Nyalwa, who because of his bravery had been chosen temporary chief of the cannibal pygmies; "no matter what he is he shall be safer when he is dead." "True," agreed a haunty little warrior, "and our stomachs will be fuller."

MAY SUPPLY JOKER

President Ramonn de Valera of the Irish Free State served notice that his country may lose a joker into the expected accession of the former Duke of York as King George VI by refusing to ratify the new sovereign's status. The statute of Westminster provides that any one of the colonies or dominions can block an accession after an abdication by refusing to ratify the new monarch. Objection would be made not on personal grounds, but because the Irish Free State refuses to recognize any British sovereign.

EXILED ANEW

Exiled from Russia by the Stalin regime years ago, Leon Trotsky (ABOVE) has been asked to leave Norway, where he sought a haven during 1935. International relations were strained recently when the Soviet government demanded he be returned to Russia to face charges of plotting the assassination of Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator. Norway refused, but has notified Trotsky they will not renew his permit when it expires on Dec. 18. He may find his next sanctuary in Mexico.

BALDWIN CALLED GREAT STATESMAN

One of Greatest in British History Says Sir Dawson Bates

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Dec. 11 (CP-Havas)—The British Empire and the Crown "stand stronger and greater than ever," Sir Dawson Bates, Northern Ireland Home Secretary, declared today.

Expressing relief the grave constitutional crisis was at an end, Sir Dawson said he considered Prime Minister Baldwin one of Britain's greatest statesmen.

In an official proclamation issued last night, Lord Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, declared: "In this crisis in the history of the realm our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the Royal Family and our allegiance to the throne remains unalterable.

"His Royal Highness, the Duke of York, on being called to fulfill the highest position in the Empire is assured of the loyalty and devotion which are characteristic of the Ulster people.

"It is our earnest prayer that the new King and his Queen, under Divine guidance, may receive every strength and blessing in the great task which lies before them."

KING GEORGE VI WILL BE CROWNED MAY 12

EDWARD BECOMES H. R. H. DUKE OF WINDSOR

PRINCE EDWARD SAILS ABROAD AFTER FAREWELL

Heart-Touching Goodbye by Ex-Monarch Said to Empire

HIS OWN CHOICE

He May Return After Some Time to Native Land

With the crown discarded for love and his brother, George VI, on the throne, he slipped out of Portsmouth harbor at 1:08 a.m. today aboard the destroyer Fury.

Only 20 naval authorities at Portsmouth saw the former King take leave of his country. Civic and police authorities, usually informed when a member of the royal family visits the port, were not told Edward was coming.

Destination Unknown

The Fury, one of Britain's newest destroyers, was believed enroute to Boulogne, France, although other reports said it was headed for Italy or "a Mediterranean port."

There Edward could be near twice-divorced Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson without whom he found himself unable to live.

TITLES GO BACK TO MIDDLE AGES

Knights Fought in Days When Pageantry Was Supreme

(By The Associated Press)

Men whose titles and duties date back to the days of the peers and knights fought in armour will proclaim George VI King-Emperor to-day in London.

King of Arms

Garter King-of-Arms—Who regulates the order of the peers and Knights of the Garter. The office was founded about 1419.

Clarenceux King-of-Arms — Who has jurisdiction in England south of the River Trent.

Norroy King-of-Arms—Who has jurisdiction north of the Trent.

Heralds

Heralds were originally the messengers of princes and today still are charged with making solemn announcements as well as with the care of genealogies, of the privileges of noble families and especially of the armorial bearings.

The English heralds are six—Lancaster, Somerset, Chester, Richmond, Windsor, and York. Their titles came from their "provinces" or from their masters.

Pursuivants

The English Pursuivants are four:

Portcullis Pursuivant.

The officers' ceremonial dress is formed by Tabards, cloaks, that are sleeveless or have short, wide sleeves, emblazoned with Arms.

New Royal Family Known and Loved Throughout Empire

A family known and loved throughout the empire is the new Royal Family of Great Britain, formerly that of the 12th Duke of York, Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George, second son of the late King George V. Succeeding to the crown that his elder brother Edward laid aside, the duke, now His Majesty George VI of Great Britain and Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas, King and Emperor of India, takes up the duties of kingship with an empire satisfied that he will follow the footsteps of his father, the well-beloved. The empire's new Queen wedded to her royal consort in 1923, was born the daughter of the Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, of an ancient and noble Scottish line. Princess Elizabeth (LEFT), now 10 years old, is the world's most popular child. She early won her way into the hearts of the people she may some day rule, and who affectionately dubbed her the Sweetheart of the Empire. Her younger sister is Princess Margaret Rose, who was hailed in Scotland, home land of her mother, as their own particular Princess Charming.

King George Confers Title On His Abdicated Brother

The action of the new King fulfilled expectations that he would confer upon his elder brother some title in recognition of his great services of the empire.

'Bravely Done' Says Empire Of Former King's Farewell

"He Went Out Like a Man" Is General Impression

NO WORD OF REPROACH

London, Dec. 12(AP)—Edward's fellow citizens of the British Commonwealth of Nations — from the Shetland Islands to the Antipodes—today acclaimed his "Bravely done" farewell to empire.

Around the world his message, broadcast from the home of the Belgian Embassy at London, today was regarded Belgium's first minister to Canada. The consulate general becomes a legation.

Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, said: "He went out like a man."

In Australia, where the radiocast words were heard with unusual clarity, households interrupted their breakfast to hear their former sovereign.

ON WAY TO PORT

Portsmouth, England, Dec. 12 (AP)—A courteous "thank you very much" to a fellow motorist who supplied him with directions was one of Edward's last contacts with his former subjects today before he stepped off his native soil.

Driving through Portsmouth's narrow, back streets to the ship waiting to carry him away from England, Edward's chauffeur lost his way and asked George S. Hale, Portsmouth sign writer, for the route.

"I told him the way," Hale said, "and then a voice, which I recognized, came from inside the car, saying 'thank you very much'.

"It was the king's voice and I recognized it because little more than an hour before I had listened with deep attention to the same voice speaking from Windsor over the radio."

MAY SPEND TIME IN DALMATIA

Edward, Some Believe Will Visit His 'Ely' Ranch in Alberta

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—"It may be some time before I return to my native land....."

Thus Edward King Edward spoke three words yesterday in bidding his peoples farewell, only he knew the import, and when he sailed from Portsmouth early today only a handful could guess when he would return.

There is no law either requiring forward to leave or remain away from the homeland.

The Dalmatian coast has been suggested as a favored spot for Edward. He spent a happy vacation there the past summer, visiting a number of towns during his cruise aboard the yacht Nahlin.

Friends of Edward and Mrs. Simpson said they do not expect them to visit America any sooner than England. Other friends believe they may visit Edward's "Ely" ranch in Alberta.

POPE PIUS XI IS MUCH BETTER

Hopes He Will Be Able to Deliver Christmas Eve Allocution

Vatican City, Dec. 12 (AP)—Pope Pius XI recovered sufficiently today from his attack of paralysis for Vatican prelates to express hope he would be able to deliver his papal Christmas Eve allocution.

Although his attendants were encouraged by the Holy Father's progress against the attack which forced him to bed a week ago today they feared he would not be able to participate in the customary ritual in which his Christmas address is a part.

MRS. W. SIMPSON AWAITS REUNION IN THREE MONTHS

It is Not Expected Prince Edward Will Go to Cannes

HEARD BROADCAST

Possibility There May Be Dramatic Meeting at Sea

Cannes, France, Dec. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson, proclaimed to the world as "the woman I love" by former King Edward, remained in retreat today awaiting reunion with the man who gave up the throne of an empire for her.

Edward was aboard a ship believed headed for Boulogne, France, or some port on the Mediterranean, but it was believed they might not meet for more than three months.

"There is no reason why the former king should come here," said a spokesman for Mrs. Simpson. "There is every reason why he cannot come."

The spokesman referred to Mrs. Simpson's divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson, London businessman, which will be made absolute April 27 at the end of the usual six-month waiting period, unless there is a special dispensation.

Premier King Announces Abdication And Also Accession

Ottawa, Dec. 12 (CP)—While the thunder of a 21-gun salute echoed over the sunlit slopi Parliament Hill and strains of the National Anthem sounded out from the carillon high in the peace tower, Prime Minister Mackenzie King today read to listeners throughout the Dominion the solemn proclamation of King Edward's abdication and the accession of King George VI.

Synchronizing the ceremonies here with those in old London the government, speaking for the people of Canada acknowledged the new sovereign and pledged "all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God by whom all kings and queens do reign, to bless the Royal Prince George the VI with long and happy years to reign over us."

Adopt Two Motions

Earlier in the morning cabinet council had adopted the two essential orders-in-council, one to proclaim the new sovereign and the other to order and instruct all officers and functionaries of Canada, the judiciary and military, and all public servants to "severally continue in the due exercise of their respective duties, functions and professions, for which this our proclamation shall be sufficient warrant."

Boulogne - Sur - Mer Officials Arrange Welcome for Edward

Ex-King on Way to Switzerland For Period of Retirement

Boulogne-Sur-Mer, France, Dec. 12 (AP)—Former King Edward, travelling to an undisclosed haven, was expected by port officials to arrive from his sixth cruise aboard the British destroyer Fury.

Brigade of detectives were summoned to guard Edward.

The Fury was expected to arrive about 4 p.m. (11 a.m. E.D.T.) and remain outside the port during low tide while the prince and his party came ashore in a launch.

Five detectives of the French Secret Service, who were expected to accompany the former king to Switzerland, were among those arriving at the port.

One entire car of a train leaving Boulogne at 10:40 p.m. (5:40 p.m. E.S.T.) for Zurich arriving at Basel at 8:26 a.m. Saturday and at Zurich at 8:38 a.m.

The British destroyer Wolfhound entered Boulogne Harbor at 3:45 p.m.

George VI Proclaimed In Historic Ceremony Before Vast Assemblage

Queen Mary is Recognized by Crowds And is Cheered by Shouts of Subjects of Her Second Son King George Sixth

LITTLE PRINCESSES CHEERED

Commoners And Lords Swear Fealty to New Monarch in Impressive Scenes in the Ancient Capital City of Empire

London, Dec. 12—(AP)—George the Sixth was proclaimed Liege Lord of the British Empire today before the old turreted battlements of the royal palace of St. James's.

A vast crowd, but an orderly one, listened raptly while the sonorous tones the Garter Principal King of Arms Sir Gerald Wollaston, rolled from banks of loud speakers as he read the proclamation from the palace balcony.

King's Personal Message

The new King broadcast a personal message to each of the three fighting services.

To the navy he pointed out he had seen service with naval units during the Great War and his message to the air force recalled he had served with the Independent squadrons in France in 1918.

Second Coronation

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—For the second time within a year, crowds of Throne-loving British subjects massed outside St. James' Palace today to watch the ceremonial procedure of proclaiming a new King.

Accession Council Meets

The day's events, invested with the splendor of medieval pageantry, began with a meeting of the Accession Council to draw up the official document announcing George VI as the new British ruler.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain and other cabinet ministers were first to arrive for the historic session. Each wore the official uniform of black and gold with a plumed hat.

Then Sir George Broadbridge, Lord Mayor of London, drove up with his entourage of Sheriffs and Aldermen of the City Corporation.

All were garbed in their civic robes over court dress. Only of these attending was Mr. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London.

Altogether there were nearly 300 members of the Privy Council in attendance. The Archbishops of York and Canterbury completing the assemblage.

FACTS

Optical establishments of the "chiselling" type do not handle first quality, corrected lenses, lenses that are identifiable by a certificate and a trade-mark. The profit mark-up is not high enough, and such a handicap they don't like. The "easy" public is NOT TOLD that they are being offered inferior quality lenses—always obtainable for much less than the price asked — the misleading term "counter lenses" being craftily used as bait. Play safe and demand your certificate.

RESIDENTS IN WEST QUITE INTERESTED

As one indication of the number of former residents of this district, who are now residing in the western provinces and who still maintain interest and contact with their home townships here, disclosures today told of the tremendous interest aroused over the by-election in East Hastings at Winnipeg, Manitoba.

So numerous were the enquiries on election night in that city that two newspapers were forced to employ special telephone operators to handle the calls.

IMPERIAL VETERANS HOLD BENEFIT SOCIAL

Attended by the largest crowd on record, members of the Belleville Imperial Veterans' Club held their most successful Christmas Benefit social and euchre at the Sergeants' Mess in the Armouries last evening. Nearly 150 were present to take part in the entertainment of the evening.

Prizes for the euchre games were awarded to Norman Samain, gentlemen's first; Mrs. N. Samain, ladies' first; Warren Williamson, gentlemen's second and Mrs. C. Carr, ladies' second.

Music during the evening was furnished by the "In Centre" Band while various members assisted in the entertainment with impromptu skits and acts.

Refreshments served by the ladies in attendance completed the social evening.

Funds from the social will be devoted to gifts and a Christmas tree for children and families of veterans of the local Club.

BUSINESS GOOD SAY MERCHANTS

"Luxury Lines" More in Demand This Season is Opinion

Washing machines and radios, overcoats and bedroom suites, automobile accessories, fur coats, suitcases and alcazar trunks, boxes of stationery, bicycles and motorcycles, snow skits and skates, jewelry, electrical appliances and "such other things" too numerous to mention were among the purchases being made by Belleville district's buying public in local stores at the present time in spite of the busiest pre-Christmas shopping periods on record. It concluded today by way of a tentative canvass of larger stores of the city.

"Business is good," commented local merchants when questioned. "Better than we had first expected" it was added by many. "We're well satisfied" was the general tone of all.

Better conditions this year, more wages in the weekly pay envelopes, more industrial activity in local manufacturing plants and better working conditions in general this year than in years past has resulted in more buying power on the part of local residents was disclosed by the local Chamber of Commerce following an unofficial survey of the industrial field in the city. Better conditions for agriculturists of the section will also result in more and heavier Christmas shopping this year, it is believed. Prices for farm products have materially risen in the past year and present buying years and this will be reflected by sales in local stores, it was pointed out.

"Luxury lines" are selling more readily this year, as one indication, sales of the better class radios, home furnishings, refrigerators, washing machines and other heavy and luxury purchases which have apparently been delayed by many for some time are reported as increasing, and in many cases cash is being paid for these articles. Deferred payment purchases, it was stated by one large store have not been as heavy this year.

"The business barometer, as far as we are concerned shows a distinct rise, our charted graphs are climbing all the time. There seems to be more ready cash, more willingness to spend, and a greater cheerfulness about it. We have recaptured the old time holiday air. Christmas this year will probably be a merry one for the merchants at least," announced one large store executive.

T. TOWNSEND BADLY INJURED

Caught Underneath Truck When Vehicle Upsets Near Eldorado

Seriously injured when a truck in which he was a passenger overturned on a steep hill near Eldorado Village yesterday afternoon, Timothy Townsend of this city is at present a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, where his condition is reported unchanged today.

Attempting to jump from the moving truck when an upset appeared imminent, Townsend was caught under the chassis of the machine and dragged for a distance of fifty feet before it finally overturned.

Walter Way, also of this city, driver of the truck, received less serious injuries.

A third Belleville man, J. M. McCann, also driving a truck along the road at that point narrowly escaped adding further to the injuries of the two men, when he skidded and crashed into the overturned truck, shortly after Way was helping Townsend from the machine.

Microphones were placed at hand in the Prime Minister's private office while he read the proclamation from George's accession. He was followed immediately by the silver gun salutes from London of the similar proceedings taking place there.

F. R. Parker, Educationist, Has Won Fame in Many Posts

Will Retire Shortly as Principal of Elmira Free Academy

STIRLING NATIVE

Francis R. Parker, Principal of Elmira Free Academy, Elmira, New York, former native of this district who has gained distinction in educational circles in the United States where he is rounding out half a century in the teaching profession, has announced that he will retire as principal during the present school year there.

Mr. Parker, son of the late Dr. Robert Parker, Stirling, and brother of William A. Parker, this city, Judge Parker, Toronto, and Mrs. Dewey Hurd, Elmira, New York, is planning to return his duties as head of the high school in June, according to the Watertown (New York) Times. Upon his retirement he will spend some time travelling in the Western United States and Canada, it was announced. He is now serving his 31st year as the Academy's principal.

Native of Stirling

Mr. Parker, who was born in Stirling, entered the teaching profession in January, 1888 as an instructor at Kemptville, Ontario, high school. He was graduated from Queen's University, Kingston, in 1887 with first class honors and received a silver medal for proficiency in Latin and Greek.

In December, 1888, he resigned the Kemptville post to join the faculty of the Orangeville High School where he remained until 1892 when he became instructor in Latin and Greek in the Collegiate Institute, Owen Sound. After seven years at this institute he moved to the United States where he became principal of the Mexico, New York, Free Academy. One year later he was made head of the Latin and Greek department of the Cortland Normal School, a position he held until he was selected principal of the Elmira Free Academy, in 1906.

Wins Scholarship

During summer vacation periods he devoted his time to teaching and study, and in 1899 he was awarded a graduate scholarship with a value of $600 for advance study at Columbia University. He received his Master of Arts degree from Cornell University in 1901.

In 1903 the former resident was an instructor in the State Summer Institute at Cornell, Ithaca, New York, and in 1909 he studied psychology and education at the Cornell University summer session. From 1914 to 1916 he taught history and civics at the Normal School in the Genesee State Normal School summer session.

Honored by Many Posts

Mr. Parker has been honored many times by election and appointment to posts of responsibility. He was vice-president of the New York State Classical Teachers' Association in 1912 and he was presidents of the Associated Academic Principals' Association of New York State. In 1909 and 1910 he served as chairman of the committee for the preparation of Latin syllabus for the New York State Education Department, and from 1911 to 1918 he was examiner in Greek for the New York State Education Department.

Mr. Parker is charter member of Elmira Rotary Lodge, a Lit. and A. and a charter member of the Elmira Rotary Club. He is also a member of the Elmira Country Club, Elmira City Club, the Gatineau Rod and Gun Club of Maniwaki, Quebec, the Black River Valley Club and the Jefferson County Club of Watertown, New York. He is a former member of the Century Club and the Masonic Club of Elmira.

SUPREME COURT TO SIT ON TUESDAY

It was officially announced today there would be no police court session held in Belleville on Monday, that date being a statutory holiday in honor of the King's birthday. Crown Attorney D. C. Donnan, K.C., stated to the Ontario Intelligencer this morning that providing a statutory holiday was proclaimed by the Federal Government, it automatically followed there would be no legal proceedings throughout the Dominion. The non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court, to have opened before His Lordship, the Honorable Mr. Justice Chevrier in Belleville on Monday will also be postponed 24 hours and will commence on Tuesday, it was officially stated this morning.

CHRISTMAS TREES MUCH IN FAVOR ON LOCAL MART

FOWL PLENTIFUL

Christmas trees, turkeys, ducks and geese, all blended together on the Saturday market today to make it a typical pre-Christmas offering of products of the farm. Favored by a warm sun and milder weather, today's trading was well attended by both buyers and sellers.

Though turkeys were offered at fairly reasonable prices, their numbers were not large. The shrill cackle of one pen brought marketers to view a lordly gobbler and two hens which were vigorously alive and keenly interested in the crowds which viewed them. In this instance the live gobbler was offered for a price of $4, while two hens which kept him company were quoted at $3.

Geese and ducks, on the other hand were fairly plentiful and cheap at the local market, even $2.50 for geese ranging from 11 to 13 pounds while ducks sold from 85 cents to $1.25. The male common chicken, not so greatly in demand brought prices ranging from 70 cents to $1 the pair. Individual fowl reached from 50 cents upward.

In the dairy market butter also showed little change in prices, with the two-pound roll retailing at 55 cents and in a few instances at a straight 25 cents per pound.

In spite of the favorable weather and conditions, fish are still fairly plentiful and were offered today at 20 cents the pound for whitefish, and 25 cents the pair for perch, while salmon steaks were offered at 15 cents the pound, while fillets of haddock sold at 25 cents the pound or two for 25 cents.

Cabbages, carrots, parsnips and other staple vegetables were for the most part disposed of in bunches. Cauliflower retailed at 25 cents; turnips at 75; parsnips at 65 cents. Onions are three for ten cents, celery at 10 cents and other smaller vegetables from 5 to 10 cents the bunch were also in evidence.

Christmas being the most outstanding reminder of Christmas, sold from 25 cents to $1.50 each.

LORD BROWNLOW TO LEAVE CANNES

Mrs. Simpson Does Not Know Whereabouts of Edward Windsor

Cannes, France, Dec. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson has not heard from former King Edward since he left England and does not know where he is or where he is going, a spokesman for the American woman said today.

He repeated his former statement that Edward is not engaged to marry and that Mrs. Simpson is remaining at the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers.

Lord Brownlow, once gentleman-in-waiting to Edward said an automobile, which Mrs. Simpson sometimes used for country drives, had been taken from its garage for his use following news of his return trip to London.

He declared he intended to leave Cannes this afternoon but may stay off on the way for a short vacation, Mrs. Simpson said she had not abdicated monarch.

Servants said hosts and guest slept late at the villa, arising at 10:30 a.m.

Proclamation as Read by Premier

By His Excellency the Right Honorable Baron Tweedsmuir of Elsfield, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, member of the Order of the Companions of Honor, Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of the Dominion of Canada.

To all to whom these present shall come:

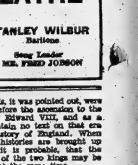
Greeting:

Whereas by an instrument of abdication, dated the 10th day of December instant, His Majesty King Edward the VIII did declare his irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for himself and his descendants, and the said abdication has now taken effect, whereby the Imperial Crown of Great Britain, Ireland and all other His Majesty's dominions is now solely and rightfully come to the high and mighty Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George, now known ye that I, the said High Honorable Baron Tweedsmuir of Elsfield, Governor General of Canada, do hereby with one voice and consent of tongue and heart publish and proclaim that the high and mighty Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George is now become our only lawful and rightful liege Lord George the Sixth, by the Grace of the Vi by the grace of, God of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor.

Given under my hand and seal at arms at Ottawa, this 12th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1936 and in the first year of His Majesty's reign.

By command, Fernand Rinfret, Secretary of State of Canada.

God save the King.



EDWARD'S HISTORY NOT YET WRITTEN

The ascension to the throne of Great Britain's recent Monarch, Edward VIII, his abdication, and the ascension of his eldest brother, the Duke of York, will put authentic history books now in use in public schools of the city for the reason, that these quickly moving events were never included in them. It was stated by one local educator today.

History books now being used in the schools, it was pointed out, were written before the ascension to the throne of Edward VIII, and as a result contain no text on that era in the history of England. When new books are brought out to date, it is probable, that the events of the two kings may be included at the same time.

ROAD COMMITTEE GIVES REPORT

James A. Moore, Chairman of Roads and Bridges, gave to members of the county council a comprehensive and concise report on the activities of his committee during the year. The report is given in detail.

Report of Road and Bridge Committee

To the Warden, Members of the County Council, Gentlemen:—

Shire Hall, December 10, 1936.

Your committee which directs the expenditures on roads and bridges for the County present for your information their report.

The total amount as submitted to the Highways Department and approved was $80,000.00. The amount levied as per estimates was $78,710. The total received by sales of stone and gravel, etc., $220.68. The total received by rebate on gas taxes $335.72. Total receipts $81,580.32.

Total expenditures from December 1, 1935, to November 30, 1936 was $81,580.32. Distribution of expenditures are as follows: Weeds and brush cutting, $1,400.54; gravel, $9,486.80; Dragging, $5,586.61; Culverts and Bridges, $14,301.35; Resurfacing $22,227.34; Dust layer, $4,339.96; Snow removal, $7,907.07; Pavements, $8,495.17. The General Account, which includes Superintendent's salary, travelling and office expenses, machinery and tools and Workmen's Compensation was $7,346.11. This expense has been lowered $1,400.92 from last year.

Number of accidents to labourers were 9, number of compensation labourers was $503.02, Doctor's paid labourers $178.50; claims not settled but estimate cost $85.00; amount levied by the board on the County, $1,-031.00. Average number of men employed per month (12) 218.

There has been considerable important improvements made this year such as the construction of West Huntingdon bridge and extensive repairs to Stoco (3) and Mill's bridges. This work was done by contract after calling for tenders. West Huntingdon bridge was contracted to the Standard Paving Company, the steel bridges at Stoco Co., and the steel bridge at Mill's and Millbridge to the Ontario Bridge Co. In the building of the West Huntingdon bridge there is a reinforced concrete 40 ft. span with 22 ft. roadway, plans and specifications, etc., were prepared by the Highway Department. Even from commencement tendered varying from $4,581.00 to $5,900.00. The Standard Paving Company being the lowest tenderer received the contract, there price being $500.00 lower than the engineer's estimate. Your committee were well satisfied with the quality of the work, etc., in these contracts.

We find that the costs of maintenance on some of our roads are excessive and a greater amount should be made to so construct these roads as the maintenance cost will be greatly reduced and the dust nuisance eliminated.

Work is now in progress in the township of Wellington building a section of road on a new location to eliminate two railway crossings. This work will cost the county 20 percent as the Railway Board is assisting to the extent of 40 percent of total cost. In the distribution of the year's work, 27 metallic and cement culverts were put in, three miles of grade improvement, 30,013 yards of crushed stone and gravel used in re-surfacing, 2,440 yards in pavements, 2,700 feet of 12 inches in depth, 8 spans of steel bridges were painted, 14 miles of road treated with dust layer.

In the snow removal costs we find that in some sections it has been very excessive for the service given. We have arranged with the Highway Department to do the work on the Madoc and Point Anne roads this winter.

A resolution from the County Council to the Department will be necessary if this work is to be done by them. Twenty-two miles of new roads is being added to the system at the first of 1937 as arranged by a committee that took this up with Mr. Thomas a short time ago.

We would like a general discussion so we could get the opinion of the members as to how extensively they would like the winter roads maintained.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed): Jas. A. Moore, Chairman, Wm. G. West, Warden. Henry Larkin, Geo. E. Thompson, Wesley Gray and J. L. Churcher.

Many Cities in Ontario To Observe Boxing Day

Old English Holiday is Steadily Growing in Favor

LONG WEEKEND

Even though this year it presents problems of a long week-end holiday, the old English holiday of boxing day is apparently becoming more popular and its observance more widespread in Ontario.

Originated years ago in England as a bank holiday on which employees received gifts, boxing day in the old country is surrounded with a tradition of its own. Christmas Day, according to tradition, the English family stays at home, eats and is merry. On the day following —Boxing Day— they visit their friends and exchange gifts.

In varying degrees many Ontario centres will observe Saturday, Dec. 26, this year. Majority of stores will be closed in Toronto, Hamilton, Peterborough, London, North Bay and Ottawa, according to advance reports.

Among the places where there will be no observance or where the question is still under consideration are St. Thomas, Kitchener, Belleville, Windsor and Orillia. Stratford has already decide Monday night.

In those places where observance was turned down, chief objection was to the closing of stores for so long a period—from Thursday, Dec. 24, to Monday, Dec. 28.

Majority is Close in Toronto.

George S. Houghan, secretary of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, announced after a Toronto survey the majority of Queen City stores would remain closed the day after Christmas. Those handling food, however, both chain and independent grocery stores, planned to open at noon so housewives may replenish holiday larders.

At Hamilton most of the stores will close Boxing Day as arranged by retail section of the Chamber of Commerce but otherwise it is not decided.

Reeve Wilbur M. Cramp of Orillia is leaving the question back to the council after protests from merchants against observance as they claim customers would be inconvenienced by the long closing. It was thought that many, too, would want to exchange presents, not with one another, but at the stores the day after Christmas. Orillia council has authorized the holiday to give residents a three-day week-end.

Peterborough merchants agreed to close. Chamber of Commerce offices also announced.

Stand By Decision.

From London came report the Retail Merchants' Association voted in favor of observance, although certain sections have been raised by some stores. President John T. Cook said organization will stand by the decision. It was believed at least 90 per cent. of stores and offices would be closed. Indication was given as to municipal offices or factories.

No action had been taken at St. Thomas as there appeared to be a lack of unanimity among the merchants.

Neither Kitchener nor Waterloo will observe Boxing Day this year. Waterloo did last year, but because of the too long week-end, no action was taken.

Windsor is not taking any action. The custom has not been followed in other years.

Ottawa council's sons of its larger stores are closing and believe a considerable group will follow suit.

BIG SWIM DADDY WILL TALK TURKEY

Elwood Hughes, General Manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and for several years publicity director of that organization, will be the guest of Belleville Rotary Club Monday and will speak on his experiences with sports, newspapers and "The Greatest Show on Earth." Mr. Hughes has had many and interesting experiences in many branches of Canadian life and his half hour as a speaker should be packed with interest when he tells Rotarians at Hotel Quinte Monday noon, some of the highlights of his experiences.

Trans-Canada Hiker Tells Of Life on the Open Trail

War Veteran Has Crossed Country Four Times by Foot

PLANS TO MARRY

A pair of restless feet that have carried their owner three times across this continent in search of health and adventure are again leading M. J. Rogers, who has returned a war veteran of Halifax across Canada on his fourth quest for strange scenes, but this time with a definite goal in sight at the end.

On his fourth attempt the veteran-hiker who scorns such methods of locomotion across country as running freight trains and rides by friendly motorists will end his journey at Point Barrow, Alaska, some of the fatal accident which resulted in the death of Wiley Post and "Will" Rogers, whose plane crashed on a barren tundra near that settlement some years ago.

A visitor to the city today, Cooke explained his mission as an effort to obtain the story behind the story of the fatal crash.

Starting from HALIFAX his adoption city, last October 6th, Cooke is "dallying the gay" financing his funds derived as an impromptu entertainer at the various cities and towns he visited by him. In a diary which is filled with clippings and scraps of his various activities he keeps close traits of his wanderings.

Before him he has planned to write a book about these. I have already had offers for it, and when I get the chance, I'll probably settle down and commence it. It should be full of hikers before him and weather beaten veteran ex plains.

On this fourth trans-Canada hike, Cooke is following Cupid's trail, for at Brandon, Manitoba, he will meet the future Mrs. Cooke with whom he has corresponded for a lengthy period. Equipping themselves there with dog teams and sufficient food and supplies for lengthy and hazardous travel, they will strike off toward Alaska where they hope through information supplied by natives of the district to learn what is the world just how Post and Rogers died. From there they proceed of this signed and the two adventurers hope, to pay the cost of the trip.

A former professional boxer, music hall entertainer, journalist and soldier of fortune, Cooke, who served as a private in the Third Battalion of the Edmonton Regiment in France and on other fronts during the Great War, was discharged, suffering wounds injuries and broken in health. Unable to continue in every day occupations of jobs, he took the open trail in an effort to recapture his lost health Since then his recovery has been startling, even to himself, he freely admits.

"It was hard at first, this hiking back and forth, but after the first year I got used to it. Now I love it. I wouldn't be happy at anything else, and I don't believe I could settle down even if tried. Furthermore the girl I'm going to marry possesses a fondness for the same sort of travel and new experiences as myself, so haven't given a thought to settling down yet for a year or so, decisions.

Steady hiking day after day has resulted in superb muscle development of the legs. Although no wagers were tossed out by him, it has indicated that he could execute or better any walking feat set up by any hikers before him, either for speed or distance trail. His best record he admits was a distance of 36 miles in seven hours 20 hours, made from Parrsboro to Truro, in Nova Scotia.

Names in New 'Phone Directory Fall With Odd Classifications

Colors, Birds, Animals, Agriculture And Land, Fruit, Weather All Represented

The new telephone directory contains almost two pages more of subscribers' names than that of last year. HENRI HEIDER IS FREE TODAY

Charge of Armed Robbery Dismissed Against French Canadian

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)— Henri Heider, reputed French-Canadian is free today. A jury took a "very lenient view" of evidence against him, according to Justice Hope F. W. Wilson, on a charge of armed robbery of the Provincial Bank of Canada at St. Joachim July 29.

The jury's verdict of not guilty followed a three-day hearing in County Court here during which Crown and defence have established an alibi that he was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weir while playing with their children when the bank, 23 miles from Windsor, was robbed of $2,271.

Surprise testimony as the trial drew to a close was given by Fred Weir, brought to court on a subpoena issued on request of Assistant Crown Attorney Louis St. Pierre.

Weir corroborated evidence of his wife by stating Heider had been at her home the afternoon and night of July 29. Heider was identified in a Detroit police lineup by Camille Dicaire, Manager of the bank, as one of the two gunmen masked men who held him up, forced him to open the vault, and trussed him up with wire as they fled with all the bank's currency.

Evidence of a purported confession by Heider to the crime failed to impress the jury, steider swore the "confession" had been forced from him after a three-hour grilling by police in Detroit. A policeman struck him in the face during the examination, he said.

SHELLS CRASH IN HEART OF CAPITAL

Long Range Artillery Duel Climaxes Fifth Week of Siege

Madrid, Dec. 13 — (AP) — Insurgent shells crashed into the heart of the Spanish Capital today as Fascist and Socialist batteries roared in a long range artillery duel to climax the fifth week of the seige of Madrid.

A heavy Insurgent infantry attack on the Western front from Monclos to Posuelo was smashed. the Government reported in a bitter three-hour scrugele.

Officials spealed the evacuation of the Capital's non — combatant population to the Eastern coast as the Government took steps to guard the food supply.

The severe cold sent Madrileno searching through the houses for wood. Others stood in line for hours to draw allotments of fuel.

Finance Report Of County Council

To the Clerk, the Warden and members of the County Council, Gentlemen:—

Your committee has met twice since June, at a meeting of the committee in June, Mr. Illsley, manager of the Bank of Commerce interviewed the committee with regard to the exchange on income tax, on all of which the exchange amounts to considerably more than formerly. Following discussion, it was agreed that the local municipalities should be asked to pay the exchange on all incoming cheques, while the bank would pay the exchange on all outgoing cheques.

The Toronto Hospital for Consumptives appealed to the Court decision with regard to Lukian Kovacks, who is an inmate of the hospital. Mr. O. A. Payne, County Solicitor, was instructed to appeal the case which was lost. This makes the County of Hastings liable for the maintenance of Lukian Mercaks, who was employed on the relief project at Farmington Mr. A costly precedent no doubt will be established by this action.

Considerable outstanding back has been done in the Clerk's office, the Treasurer's office, the Auditor's and the Committee Room. The work was done by inmates of the County Gaol, and therefore the only cost to the County was for materials, which did not amount to a great deal.

A High School account was submitted by Weston High School for a pupil who resides in Rawdon Township. Under the High school Amendment Act the County has no authority to pay school accounts unless for schools in Hastings County or in adjacent counties Weston is not an adjacent county, so no action was taken regarding the matter.

A new system of lighting was installed at the registry office as a cost of $66.00.

Drain Repaired

The drain from the cellar in the Clerk's residence to the storm sewer on Campbell street became plugged and had to be dug up. When the drain was reached it was discovered there was no connecting drain from the cellar in Shire Hall. This is being carried out at the present time.

Mr. Charles Hyde was given a contract to install plumbing and a drain in the courthouse at a cost of $65.00.

Dr. Morgan, gaol surgeon, interviewed the committee and asked for an increase in his salary. The matter was referred to this session of the County Council.

The hospital indigent accounts are not decreasing any, on the contrary, there is an increase, a total of $6,184.10 has been paid since June, with a number of accounts still outstanding. We do not think these accounts be discounted to the utmost.

At this time we wish to thank Mr. Lucas, Mr. Haggerty and their staffs for their co-operation with the committee throughout the year.

A list of general and indigent accounts paid by your committee since last session is attached hereto and will be laid on the table for the information of the council which is respectfully submitted—W. H. Sayers, chairman

W. R. MORTON, PUBLISHER

EDWARD EIGHTH BIDS FAREWELL

A document most poignant in its revelation of heart has gone into history—the farewell broadcast by Prince Edward, former King and Emperor, asking humble-hearted support of his brother, the new King George Sixth, and explaining his own heart's love story. One of the briefest messages lasting no more than six or seven minutes, it is one of the most profound revelations ever made.

In simple language, the former King told at last of his freedom "to say a few words of my own," and "that I never wanted to withhold anything, that I shall not forget the country or Empire, which as Prince of Wales and lately as King, I have for twenty-five years tried to serve."

One of the most pathetic utterances in the history of Kings is his reference to the lack in his own home life of those joys which he rejoiced to find his brother enjoying. The pity is that in his case as this romance came it made impossible his carrying as he said the "heavy burden of responsibility without the support of the woman I love." No bachelor was ever so self-revealing.

There were touching references to his family and the Prime Minister. He also noted that there was never a constitutional difficulty as he would never have allowed such to develop between himself and Parliament.

His voice seemed to come from one who had gone through a great crisis and decision. There were no doubt few who did not feel a gulp in the throat as the former king-emperor said that it would be some time before he would return to his native land. But this gave a hint that some day the man who had given the best years of his life as Prince and King to the Empire would come back home.

His lasting words "God Save the King" coming from the lips of him who a few hours before had signed away the office of King for the home life and for love was as a bugle call, rallying the Empire, the people of all climes including the ex-monarch himself in any private capacity, to the support of his royal brother.

HISTORY WILL REMEMBER

People today have seen take place one of those events which will go down in history. They have seen the actual making of history made by living characters in the drama of life as it is occurring in Britain. No mere lay figures nor pawns but throbbing personalities have been the actors.

Hundreds of years from now, whatever the fate of nations which constitute the modern world, the story will be told of this week's memorable event. King Edward who was crowned King, who took the brief reign and his abdication will live in history along with the attititude taken by Prime Minister Baldwin. British history is an open book. Authenticated stories of the past years enliven the pages of historical works so that great kings and leaders of the past live today though it is many generations since they have passed from the scene. Perhaps a thousand years hence the story of the last few days will be told in a far different world of a King, who had not reached middle age and who stepped down from history and of a Prime Minister who faced the issue with the monarch.

Premier Baldwin is assured of immortality in the denouement of the royal drama. He and members of the Commons will not escape eternity of fame.

Down the ages the story will be told of the brother who by force of circumstance was compelled to accept the Crown the elder brother relinquished to retire into private life.

What will the future historians say of the retirement of Edward VIII? Time is a great arbiter and judge of facts, and people of the present era are too close perhaps to measure all the developments of this week's great event. Will the historians look upon Edward as a state-weary ruler, who had served from the time he was seventeen years as prince and lately as ruler, a total of a quarter of a century, one of the most successful figures who ever had so much for the honors and also the limitations which go with the greatest honor given a public man? Will they think of this brilliant young monarch gifted by experience and training beyond the fondest hopes, escaping the appeal of love until he reached the forties, suddenly to find the burden of state duties without the presence of the social life in the royal palace, inspecting that he firmly cast a decision for the woman whom he had expressed a desire to marry, when he knew it meant renunciation of the throne?

Whatever the verdict of history, this seems clear, that history will not forget the soldier prince who became king and ceased to rule, the Prime Minister of State who had his duty to perform, a task no man would take pleasure in performing. The future will thing of the trials of this tempestuous era in which this drama was enacted. For the present age the drama of course is not complete and scenes have yet to unfold.

WINTER SKIES

How strange and lovely are the skies,
These winter days,
As if they would console our sighs
For spring's lost lays.

At night the heavens are warmly blue,
The moon is vivid orange-gold,
And stars write music on the sky
That cold winds sing to as they woo
Small clouds; beneath, the fields are cold,
And trees stand gaunt, and black and high. . .

DAYTON, OHIO, HAS HAD EIGHTEEN YEARS OF CITY MANAGER CITY GOVERNMENT and the citizens are so proud of the record that two books were written about the experience of Dayton under the City Manager form of civic government. A brief description of this form of civic government as given by one familiar with its working in the United States is:

"The voters elect the members of the Council who in turn appoint and may remove the city manager, a trained administrator and not a politician. He in turn appoints and may remove all heads of departments, and, subject to civil service provisions, is responsible for the appointment and removal of all other officers and employees in the administrative service of the city. While the Council may remove the manager at any time, it may not interfere with him in making appointments or removals; neither may the council give orders to any employee in the administrative service of the city except through the city manager."

Following the adoption of the city manager plan Dayton was able and was the first city government to undertake many public services including free nursing, free legal aid bureau, free employment bureau, and other services. Under the city manager Dayton saved hundreds of thousands of dollars every year through applying business principles to municipal administration.

Flint, Fort Worth, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Kenosha, and many other cities tried the plan, profited by it and would not depart from it now. From the experience of the United States it may be said the only enemies city manager municipal government has are politicians who formerly made a fat living in municipal mismanagement.

United States experience is cited because it has had its birth there and first practical application. Canada, now, has had experience in city manager form of government and that experience will be valuable to citizens in deciding whether it should be instituted here.

GALLOWS TIMBERS RECENTLY UNEARTHED IN BUFFALO are alleged by Time magazine to be parts of the gallows on which the 22nd and 24th President of the United States hanged two men. The timbers were all there but the rope was missing. Before it or not, Grover Cleveland, twice president of the United States, was one time sheriff of Erie County, and when hangings were necessary, it is alleged, attended to them personally, acts which did not seem to affect his political career, for he became Governor of New York State, after holding many minor offices, and was elected president not once but twice. As a hangman Cleveland was said to be a first class workman.

A TEMPTING PRIZE

Two metal dealers died, in due course ascended to Heaven, and knocked at the Golden Gates, which were opened by Peter.

"What do you do for you?" said Peter.

"If you please," said the metal dealers, "we want to come in."

"What are you?" said Peter, to which the men replied:

"We are metal merchants."

"Metal merchants," said Peter, "I can recollect no record of metal merchants up here; but if you will wait a minute I'll have a look at my card index."

Peter was away for some few minutes and when he returned the two men had gone and so had the Golden Gates.

Twenty Four Miles Highways In County to be Kept Open

A petition to the provincial government that twenty-four miles of highways and county roads be kept clear of snow this winter featured the second daily session of the Hastings County Council held yesterday afternoon.

Considerable discussion preceded the decision which was taken after the council arguing pro and con regarding the different parts of the county.

"We were the goals last year," said Dr. R. E. Lott, of Marmora, and it looks as if we were going to be again this year."

"It seems to me that we would be better off if we had our own machinery," declared a member. "That is if we had any money."

Following the taking of the resolution which asked that the government clear the road between Foxboro and Madoc, Camelford and Foxboro, and the Point Anne road running between highway No. 2 and the village, members of the council voiced the opinion that all parts of the county were entitled to the same consideration. It was added to the resolution that the road commissioners use their discretion regarding the clearance of other roads in the county.

"$3,000 was spent last year in the removal of snow," said Warden William West, "and if all the roads in the county had been kept clear it would entail a huge sum of money."

Superintendent T. Ruston of the Belleville Children's Aid Society addressed the council yesterday morning and gave a detailed report of the activities of his organization.

The total monthly pay list paid for the upkeep of the children than any country in the province," he said quoting the fact that the cost of 67.1 cents per day was a low rate. In addition to the effect that the Children's Aid assume the responsibility of the hospitalization of the children of the society met with a spirited debate. After three hours of argument council passed a resolution that no action be taken in the matter.

Chairman James Moore of the County Council, the Mayor of the City and two representatives of the City Council, also the Mayor of Trenton, and two representatives of that Town Council. These constitute the Board of Directors and hold office until their successors are appointed. This said Board of Directors may enact By-laws for the transaction of business, and the holding of its officers, and the Order by-laws of duties to different sub-committees. During their term of office the Board shall have full and complete management, control, and the disposal of the affairs, properties, and funds of the Society.

Under the Children's Protection Act the Judge shall order the payment by the Corporation of the Municipality to which a child becomes a charge of a reasonable sum not less than 70c per day for the maintenance of the child in a temporary home, institution, foster home, or elsewhere, where children are not cared for without compensation. The Municipal clerk must be notified of any pending action being taken in Court, so that the said municipality can be represented at such hearing, further, within one month, after the mailing of the order the Corporation of the municipality may apply to the Judge making the Order to vary such Order by having some other municipality declared liable for the expense of supporting a child. The Order shall be final and conclusive.

The Superintendent further pointed out that under the New System the money paid for maintenance was going back to the municipality from whence it came and that the cost to the said municipalities was no more than it was five years ago under the old system.

NEWS and VIEWS

By G. M. JAMES

Article No. III

As I entered Toronto's fine Union Station to continue my westward journey after a weekly business, newsboys were busy calling papers and shouting, "Extra! King abdicates to edicate." Small groups were to be seen everywhere discussing the crisis in a very serious mood. I heard one intelligent-looking man say:

"No matter what happens now, King Edward must go, for he has disastrously diminished the prestige of the throne."

As I walked around the spacious waiting-room, I heard fragments of conversation here and there, which revealed clearly that Prince Minister Baldwin was taking a perfectly acceptable course, for the general gloom prevailed everywhere. At this moment I was feeling terribly depressed, something happened to cheer me up immediately.

Shrilled and Sleepsie.

During my wanderings, I passed a few moments about ten feet in front of the middle of the long counter, which is divided into sections for the sale of tickets. In the opposite direction I saw a waitress in incoming costume approaching. Being gracefully on a level with her shrilled a tray covered neatly with dishes and food. She looked neither to the right nor to the left, but, like a box homeward bound, went straight towards a young man, who was busily engaged behind his counter sorting business letters or documents of some kind. As she brushed by my position with measured tread, I noticed she was very beautiful and that she had the cutest turned-up nose that I had ever seen.

"Here you are stinkfish, forty cents."

"Thirty-five senta," replied the unconcerned young man without even lifting his head or eyes.

"Oops on sixpence, You heard me, forty cents."

At that he beheld her with loveright in his eyes, advancing toward her, he put his thumb and first finger in a vest pocket, drew forth some coins (apparently the correct amount), and held them up before her just as they had come forth. As soon she seized coins and fingers and thus supported leaned backwards to his left in the exact position in which she would be if he had his arms around her and was kissing her. She gave him thus poised the sweetest, most charming smile I had ever seen. Then she straightened up, disentangled the coins from their steam-shovel resemblance and departed trailing clouds of glory after her, if the expression on that young man's face meant anything at all.

I could not help but envy the young men of to-day, when I had been told so much they would get for a nickle now as compared with fifty years ago. Most certainly they've taught this generation a lot in the matter of modern technique.

The Glen

A couple of hours later, I was in "The Glen" in Halton county near Georgetown, which is not many miles from Guelph where I was born. I saw P. T. Barnum, and his mammoth production, "The Greatest." The hamlet is surrounded by hills and through it winds the River Credit, which is fed by them by three bridges, all well known to me from earliest childhood.

When I visited Scotland four years ago, I was thrilled at a scene near Abbotsford, Scott's home. Every day it was his custom to take a drive along a certain road which gave a magnificent view of the River Tweed, and its neighboring hills. At one particular spot he stopped his horses always, and gazed for a long time on the beautiful scenery which extended many miles below and around him. That scene is similar to "The Glen," where the majesty, power, wisdom and glory of Jehovah was indelibly engraved on my soul.

"The Glen" has numerous industrial plants, such as a knitting mill, blanket factory, paper mill and others, due to the fact that water-power is abundant and cheap. The recent depression has not much unknown here; the people are well dressed and their homes almost without an exception are neat and lovely.

As I walked into "The Glen" the dogs came running to greet me, generally two from each home, without a single snarl as if Rip Van Winkle was returning. I petted them kindly, because once my own dog loved me dearly here, and soon I had a score around me of all kinds and sizes, each striving to be the nearest and to receive the most affection.

The people and children spoke to me kindly as I passed, although they had never seen me before. I was more pleased at this than they will ever know.

Santa Claus

On one of my roaming expeditions, I was near the middle bridge, which is the centre of this lovely hamlet. All at once I noticed that a fine little lad about five years old was leaving a group of children not far away, and that he was running towards me. On reaching my side, he seized my hand and began pulling me down to his level, at the same time shouting:

"O, Mr. Santa Claus, you will come to my home, won't you?"

As I stooped down and came within his reach, he put his little arms around my neck and hugged me until my eyes were filled with tears.

"Darling, why do you think I am Santa Claus?"

"The boys and girls over there said you were."

"Of course you know that I only visit good little girls and boys."

"Yes sir," and he hugged me now so tightly that I was a little uncomfortable.

"What is your name?"

"Jimmie Campbell."

"Where do you live, Jimmie?"

"Just over there near the bridge" and to my relief he released his grip long enough to point in the direction of his home.

"If I were terribly busy and had to come at night when you are asleep in bed, would it be all right, Jimmie, if I set something else for you with your mother?"

That night when I was sure that Jimmie was asleep, I called confidentially on Jimmie's mother. Explanations were unnecessary, since Jimmie had already told everything with the delightful embellishments of a child's imagination.

In a few minutes Jimmie's mother and I were conspirators in the most delightful experience of my whole life and hard to think that it should happen when, how and where it did. I shall be very happy on Christmas morning, though over a hundred miles away, to know that Jimmie is finding what is for him in "The Glen" will shout for joy.

More than ever now I believe that the sublime truth of the tradition and fiction of Santa Claus would be an overwhelming loss to childhood.

Birds We Love

Just after leaving Jimmie, I heard a chickadee, and then soon after a blue-jay, singing merrily in the top of the tree. Each as if to say:

"I am very happy; this is a lovely world to live in."

My First Triumph

As I stood on the middle bridge, memory flooded me. I could, in particular, spot, where as a child like him accomplished my first public achievement. Was it not on a piece of twine fastened to a branch a few feet long. I caught my first fish. True it was only a few inches long, but it was as important to me then as the monsters I saw when catching two years ago in Florida waters. I ran home with it dangling on my line to mother, who shared my enthusiasm as only mothers can, and cooked it for my next meal. That event had a thousand important consequences in later years, but of these I can only mention one now.

First Earned Money

In my childhood days, Nancy Murray was a poor, lonely widow, who worked at one of the mills and lived in a single, rented room. Soon after the semi-pig event, I became the best known fisher-lad in "The Glen". Almost any afternoon I could catch a nice string of fish. Nancy Murray fish, and I became her regular source of supply as ten cents a catch. In her lonely, childless widowhood, she often invited me to share her evening meal and eat some of the fish for which she had paid. Then she would read to me, sing, and tell me such marvellous things about my future that I learned to love her as a second mother. It is a great mystery to me now how she could tell so much that in the fullness of time came to pass.

My First Newspaper Scoop

One day while I was still in my teens, a tragedy was enacted not far from my childhood home. Returning from dances with my usual catch of fish, I was one of the first on the scene.

A quiet, respectable man and his wife had lived in "The Glen" as long as I could remember and had a grownup family. Next to them lived another, very similar family. Between these families existed the other, and one summer afternoon chased his own wife from their home, firing pistol shots at her as she fled. She finally fell badly wounded at her gate. Where I saw her fall first time, shot, bruised and bleeding. Neighbors quickly arrived, and disarming the husband, who was like a wild beast with jealous rage. In less than an hour, I sent my carefully written accounts of the tragedy to a well known Toronto paper, and received not only a handsome fee for it, but became their regular representative for our district for several years. This was a real settlement, and assisted greatly at all my future. Thus it should be credited to all young people, that what I did and became I developed naturally out of my surroundings. When an opportunity came along, though it was only a string of fish, I used it.

Stinking Nigger

There were times during my childhood days, when dignity and decorum of heavenly were laid aside to encounter better the stern facts of real life.

As a rule I preferred to go fishing alone, but occasionally half a dozen or more boys of my own age held expectant lines in the same pool. After a time some boy would weary of his waiting, and shout "Stinking Nigger". Like a flash of lightning all poles were thrown on the shore, and each boy undressed with nervous rapidity because the last to enter the water was a "Stinking Nigger" for the rest of that day; he was chucked under the water until he was nearly drowned, and he could not associate with anyone after coming out of the water. He became temporarily an outcast.

I had gone through this experience once, and found it so unpleasant that I devised a plan which worked to perfection. In the summer all Glen boys went around with bare feet, and wore a light two-piece suit, knee-pants and shirt. Mother sewed my buttons on so well, and made such tight fitting button-holes that it was impossible to undress with even comparative speed. After leaving home with my fishing-pole, I would hasten to the secluded pool, throw away really out of sight. Then I undid the other, and gave it the responsibility of holding everything with a shingle nail. I substituted my shirt at the back in Tom Sawyer fashion, and thus was ready for any emergency that might arise. When the others shouted "Stinking Nigger" came, I made three motions as quickly as you can count one, two, three; I dropped my pole, pulled out the shingle nail, and flipped my shirt over my head. Instead of being the last, I was henceforth the first to enter the water and watch developments.

It should be pointed out here that my young people have always exerted a powerful disciplinary influence among themselves.

My First Great Humiliation

A couple of miles from "The Glen" up over those eternal hills stands a hilly country schoolhouse of convenient crossroads. It was my first school as a teacher, and I remained there a long time since I left there forty-five years ago, I liked it well. I made many friends and girls such as I had known so well, most of them the children of those I knew in "The Glen".

All memories, however, were not pleasant ones. I recall one school on a spot in that little school, where I suffered terrible anguish for a long, long day. My master showed forty pupils, several of whom were boys of my own age and only a few years younger. One girl of fifteen, with beautiful dark eyes features and heavenly blue eyes, soon decided in Miss West fashion to sweep me off my feet, and tried me around her little finger. From her point of view, during the day after day to attract not only my attention but that of all the others, I was a fool. I was unconscious and unintentionally on my part, she was a queen. Her manner soon made slight indication that I was a victim of the charms. In a few months I was the laughing stock for disaster that the other thirty-nine I would gradually take advantage of me too, and that my career would be doomed. If I could not succeed in my first school, there was no hope of a second. Reader, what would you have done under these circumstances?

After thinking the matter over carefully and even tearfully, I bought an official strap and concealed it in my desk. It was a preparation for war, and war came with startling suddenness.

This blonde with the suppleness of a willow wand committed a very flagrant breach of discipline and I promptly summoned her forward to my desk. She came up smiling and if to say, "I like this: It's good fun." And strange to say, she did not flinch at the sight of the strap, believing no doubt that it would mean no harm to her in my gentle hands.

"Put out your hand," I commanded sternly.

Out came the hand, and down came the strap, a little harder than I had intended, but it was my first case of corporal punishment and I did not know my strength.

"Nine Eyes" gave a terrific scream, threw her arms around my neck, and sobbed on my shoulder as if her heart would break. I have never wanted to die very suddenly so badly as I did at that moment. The other children were frightened almost to death; I could never have their confidence much less their affection again, and consequently at the very threshold of my life's career, I was doomed to failure.

After a few awful moments I gained control of myself, and with my arm still around her, I escorted her to her seat, and sat her down very gently. She could not help but know that I was broken-hearted, and trembling like a leaf.

A guardian angel took care of me that day, because everything turned out as differently than I expected. Our charming blonde spread her heart that night to her mother, and confessed that she had given provocation many times. Next day she apologized very meekly and demurely, and said that she was going to be "awful good."

"But, Teacher, I'm terribly frightened, because father says that if I give you any more trouble, he's going to thrash me with a horse-whip."

I assured her that I felt certain that such a punishment would never be necessary. I was told yesterday that she is happily married and has five very beautiful daughters.

There are only a few of the events that have brought tears and laughter during my few days at "The Glen", where I have been re-living my youth, and reviving blessed, hallowed memories.

The writer expects to be back home again soon after this article is in print.

Best wishes to all.

PRINCE EDWARD

self unable to bear the burdens of kingship.

Mrs. Simpson remained at Cannes. There in a seaside villa last night she heard him refer to her in a farewell broadcast to the empire as "the woman I love."

Some 500,000,000 of his former subjects were estimated to have listened to Edward's radio address. The broadcast and the departure climaxed a dramatic day.

Early in the afternoon parliament passed a law legalizing his abdication and the accession of his brother.

Queen Mary Urges Loyalty

"God bless you all! God save the King!"

"You must believe me," he said, "when I tell you that I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King, as I would wish to discharge them, without the help and support of the woman I love."

"Mine and Mine Alone"

His decision to quit the throne for life with Mrs. Simpson was "mine and mine alone," he added, for:

"This was a thing I had to judge entirely for myself.

"The other person most nearly concerned has tried up to the last to persuade me to take a different course."

This was when he referred to the sympathetic comfort of "my mother and my family."

He spoke firmly and calmly while paying tribute to the attitude of Prime Minister Baldwin and pledging allegiance to his brother and successor, George VI.

"Lays Down Burden"

"I now quit altogether public affairs, and I lay down my burden," said the former King after revealing with a catch of a sob at times that his life had been empty in one respect.

"He (George VI) has one blessing," declared Edward, "enjoyed by so many of you and not bestowed upon me — a happy home with his wife and children."

He disposed of reports that he never would return to England with:

"I Shall Not Fail"

"It may be some time before I return to my native land, but I shall always follow the fortunes of the British race and empire with profound interest and if at any time in the future I can be found of service to His Majesty in a private station, I shall not fail."

Edward, dressed in dinner jacket and looking tired and worn, then left the castle with his mother, sad-eyed and weary from the strain of recent days.

The headlights of two motorcars stabbed through the darkness as the former king arrived. A group of dim figures alighted from the two machines and hastened down the dock.

Edward, wearing a heavy coat, strode aboard the Fury after port officials had welcomed him.

Headed Into Channel

Soon the destroyer weighed anchor, sailed down the harbor and headed into the English channel.

Queen Mary urged the world to hold for Edward a "great spirit" and "believe in your hearts" in a simple statement acknowledging the sympathy she has received in her ordeal.

"I know you will realize what it has cost him to come to this decision —," she said.

Then crossed to you from brother summoned so unexpectedly and in circumstances so painful to take his place."

Her own feelings she revealed thus:

"I need not speak of the distress which fills a mother's heart when I think that my dear son has deemed it to be his duty to lay down his charge and that the reign which had begun with so much hope and promise has so suddenly ended."

The boat which carried Edward away has a crew of 140 officers and men and can cruise 6,000 miles without refuelling.

"PICOBAC makes a Merry Christmas!" — says Mr. Picobac

"It's queer," said Mr. Picobac with a twinkle in his eye, "the trouble some folks go to, trying to get other folks to drop a hint about what they'd like for Christmas. If a man is a pipe smoker, that's hint enough for me — I know he wants Picobac — and that's what I give him — Picobac — for a mild cool ... sweet smoke!"

The half-pound tin is specially wrapped for Christmas.

R.C.A.F. FLIERS DEFEAT MASOUDS

Score is 5-0 And The Fliers Were Always The Better

Proving much too superior for their opponents the R.C.A.F. "Fliers" defeated the Kingston Masouds 5-0 in a scheduled game played in the Kingston City League last evening. The victory, although one score, however, the game proved exciting as the officials continually penalized the "Fliers" for alleged infractions and thereby endeavored to even matters in the uneven game.

The "Fliers" proved much too fast and clever for the Masouds while the losers failed miserably when attempting to penetrate the Fliers' defence. It was estimated after the game the Masoud aggregation gained only two Fliers' defence once, the homsters being allowed to fire as long range shots rather than to endeavor carrying the puck through the winners' defence.

At the time during the game the Fliers were penalized three times in succession and it was during the time the R.C.A.F. squad was two men short that they scored two goals. LaLonde bagged two counters while McNeely scored the remaining counter for the Fliers. The R.C.A.F. team is endeavoring to arrange an exhibition game to be played in Belleville next week, weather permitting, with the Whitby Red Wings. In the meantime, however, the Fliers complete their part in the Kingston schedule when they meet the Kingston Garrison team next Wednesday.

MRS. W. SIMPSON

WILL Not Complicate Case.

Friends said both Mrs. Simpson and the former king had no desire to complicate the situation by a protracted series of interviewing period. There have been no indications that efforts are being made to speed up the divorce.

Edward's departure from Portsmouth, England, for an undisclosed destination gave rise to rumors that Mrs. Simpson might board a yacht moored at Monte Carlo for a dramatic meeting at sea.

The rumors lacked confirmation in Paris. Vote Last Week.

Several members of the house said she planned to remain here for the present but her future plans are unknown.

Destination Kept Secret.

She is understood to have been informed of Edward's immediate destination during recent telephone conversations with London but it was so close a secret in the royal reaction when she heard his voice in his farewell broadcast.

Mrs. Herman Rogers of New York, the hostess, wept after listening. Her husband and Lord Brownlow, Edward's former gentleman-in-waiting, who attended Mrs. Simpson, were prohibited to questioning evidenced the depth of their emotion by their voices.

After the broadcast a crowd gathered in a light at the end of the road but only caught glimpses Mrs. Simpson but the curtains of the living room at which the house were drawn were closely drawn.

A guard sold only Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Simpson and Lord Brownlow were in the room at the time. All the servants were excluded.

'BRAVELY DONE' SAYS EMPIRE

In England all business halted last night as the people stopped their films and workmen dropped their tools to gather about receiving sets.

"He went out like a man," was the general impression.

Words of Sincerity and Emotion.

Words of sincerity and good bye was spoken with sincerity and emotion. The Daily Telegraph said: "Error as it was from the slightest trace of reproach, it must have awakened in every feeling heart an acute sense of unavailing regret and brought a mist of tears to countless eyes."

The News Chronicle commented: "His speech could not have been better phrased. He spoke with perfect respect for the constitutional propriety with the evident intent to smooth the path of his successor and to ease the wheels of nation and empire.

"'God bless you all!' were his words, and the answer echoed by the people's hearts in this world to the depths, can only have been—'And God bless you.'"

The Express said:

"Simple and direct his words, delivered clearly and firmly.

"He tells us only what we knew, says little to his mother, scolds his ministers of all blame, thanks the people and cries 'God save the King.' It is well and done.

"Farewell, prince!"

MONDAY DECLARED PUBLIC HOLIDAY

Government Offices to Close But Stores Can Remain Open

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—Monday, next, December 14, the birthday of King George VI, and will be celebrated throughout the Dominion as a public holiday. It was decided Friday by the Dominion Cabinet.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in making the announcement last night, said he had no doubt the people of His Majesty "will be widely and enthusiastically observed throughout the Dominion, and I hope it will be celebrated particularly by school children."

Whether the birthday of His Majesty will be celebrated on December 14 or December 15 will depend entirely on the wish of the King, the Prime Minister added.

He recalled that the birthday of former King Edward VIII. was specially celebrated in Canada on May 24, the birthday of Queen Victoria.

Although a statutory holiday, the King's birthday is not a day on which retail stores or other places of business are compelled to remain closed. There is no penalty for failure to observe the holiday.

Postal services and mail delivery will be maintained as usual on Monday, the Prime Minister said.

Braddock, Schmeling and Commission Fail to Agree As to Who Will Fight Who Champion Insists on Meeting Louis Before Schmeling

GERMAN AGAINST

Schmeling Does Not Want to Post Any Forfeit

New York, Dec. 13 (AP) — The heavyweight fight merry-go-round was due for another whirl today with champion Jimmy Braddock, challenger Max Schmeling and several promoters clutching for the coveted brass ring.

It did a lot of spinning yesterday but the only result was that arguments went round and round and everybody came out dizzy. After talking the matter over from every angle at a three-hour meeting of the New York State Athletic Commission, nobody agreed to anything.

Commissioner Walter D. Wear suggested either the Braddock-Schmeling title fight off entirely, but chairman John J. Phelan issued a call for another meeting this afternoon to resume negotiations.

Here were the possibilities brought up yesterday:

(1) Madison Square Garden submitted a contract calling for a title bout at the Long Island City Bowl June 18. Schmeling approved but Joe Gould, Braddock's manager, rejected the contract because it included at the German's suggestion a clause limiting the principals to four round exhibitions from now until the time of the bout.

Fight Any Time.

(2) Schmeling offered to fight Braddock at any time, either in New York or in the south, but insisted he should be permitted to face the champion before the proposed Braddock-Joe Louis no-decision bout at Atlantic City takes place.

(3) The Commission ordered the fighters to reach an agreement for a fight in February or March.

(4) Phelan said the contracts must include clauses calling for the winner to post a $25,000 forfeit that he will defend the title in the United States within the next six months. Schmeling objected on the grounds the forfeit would have to come out of his purse as he would not be allowed to take that amount out of Germany.

(5) Phelan said there is nothing in the rules to keep either from fighting exhibitions or tune-up bouts so long as they were below the championship limit of 15 rounds.

Unless one of the three sides had reversed its stand overnight, they were due to start today with each holding firmly to at least one point the others couldn't see.

PADDLING STAR QUITS RACING

Aymot's Status as an Amateur is Being Questioned

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—Frank Aymot, bond peddler and Canada's Olympic champion in 1936, and who ran afground on A.A.U. of C. rules when he got home, isn't worrying about his amateur status. He is through with paddling a canoe in competition.

Officially, Aymot's standing is unchallenged, but A.A.U. authorities made no bones their disapproval of the accepting a $1,000 gift by Ottawa admirers on his return from Berlin. They took no action. Aymot won't paddle any more. He hands that plaque, heavily loaded down with honors for his triumph in the 1,000-meter single blade event in the Olympics, he started home with his team-mates.

Big Frank, many times Canadian champion, sacrificed a great deal to go to the Games. He went into training in early spring, propelling his craft on the Ottawa, Rideau and Gatineau rivers. Before it was entirely clear of ice. He gave up smoking, late nights, dancing, movies. It was all work.

Appointed captain of the paddling team, he took complete charge before the team sailed. He cared for the managers, ordered the meals, saw that his charges were in condition. In Berlin he acted as manager, coach and trainer. And he topped it off by winning the only Canadian victory in the Games.

Not bad for a young fellow—but Aymot has had enough.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

Herman will likely wind up in any event. . . . A contract between the ball manufacturers and the majors may help the Yankees repeat in the American League next year. . . . Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yanks fought bitterly against dismissing the ball. . . . He fights and it would hurt his sluggers both at bat and in the field, and give an advantage to the young, fast team that could place its bets. In order to change the ball, the majors would have had to buy up the manufacturers present stock, good for about a season.

Rocky Harris, who was ousted as manager of the Red Sox to make room for Joe Cronin and then replaced Joe as Washington's manager, takes great pleasure in the fact his team beat the Red Box 16 games to 8 last year and finished fourth, two notches above Boston. . . . Steve O'Neill, Indians' manager, plans to catch Feller himself in spring training. . . . And now that Feller is definitely assigned to Cleveland, O'Neill is more anxious than ever to sign another catcher to develop him.

IMPERIALS ARE SENIOR CHAMPS

Trophy in Competition Since "1892 Now Enroute From "Pee"

Instituted in 1892 the Canadian Rugby Football Union has been in constant operation each autumn ever since, except for three seasons during the war period and in 1925-6. For the second time in three seasons the Sarnia Imperials won the coveted Dominion senior rugby football crown when they were declared champions following the recent withdrawal of challenge of the Regina Rough Riders. The Grey Cup, symbolic to the Dominion championship, has been crated and is enroute east from Winnipeg to Sarnia.

PERCIVAL STORES SOFTBALL TEAM HONORED BY FIRM

Intermediate 'A' Champions Given Windbreakers at Banquet

H. ROLLINS, CHAIRMAN

Johnnie Bawden, Star Hurler Especially Praised by Guests

Honoring the Intermediate "A" champions of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association, the Percival Stores, sponsors of the Belleville Percival Softball team, tendered the Provincial champions to a banquet at the New Service Restaurant last evening. During the evening's program maroon-colored windbreakers were presented to all players the windbreakers, being suitably inscribed with crests indicating the honors achieved by the local softball team during the 1936 season.

Harry Rollins local representative on the O.S.A., acted as chairman during the banquet and congratulated the Belleville Percivals upon their diamond achievements on behalf of the Provincial Association, Mr. W. J. Todd, manager of the local branch of the Percival Stores, was present and officiated during the presentation of the windbreakers, Mr. Todd personally congratulating and thanking the members of the team for the splendid showing throughout the season, especially bringing to the attention of those present the disadvantage the local softball team was labouring under owing to the lack of regular season play. The Belleville Percivals were not afforded the advantage of mid-season schedule play, the club being given a by, into the Provincial playdowns. Mr. Todd and Mr. Rollins both spoke in glowing terms of the great pitching efforts of Johnnie Bawden, whose trusty right arm personified valuable to the cause of the champions in their struggle for the provincial championship.

Sixteen windbreakers were distributed among the players of the 1936 O.A.S.A. Intermediate title holders. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Todd assured the members of the club it was the intention of the Percival Stores to again sponsor a softball club in Belleville during the season of 1937, which he hoped would be more successful in this immediate district, however, the conventional toasts were proposed and responded to.

FELLER DEMANDS $20,000 SALARY

Facts Reveal Dean Received $23,000 For Winning 24 Games

New York, Dec. 12.—Baseball's latest theme song is "the old grey Judge ain't what he used to be," meaning that Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis is getting soft.

Almost thirty years ago, as a Federal Judge, he fined the Standard Oil Company, of Indiana $29,240,000 in a freight rebate case. As Commissioner of baseball he fined Cleveland $7,500, but let the Indians keep Bob Feller.

Feller says he'll demand $20,000 to pitch for Cleveland next season. He'll be lucky to get $10,000. Now that they have Feller, the Indians are worried lest he be a flash in the pan.

"Dizzy" Dean had to win 27 games for the Cardinals before he received the big money asked by Feller, who won five and lost three last season for the Tribe.

St. Louis baseball writers estimate "Dizzy" alone pulled 250,000 cash customers in 1934 and got $70,000 for his job, which includes winning 24 ball games. That's about $ cents a customer for old "Diz"—not bad.

Why do the Cards want to get rid of Dean? The big reason is because he's got Owner Sam Breadon sore by picturing him as "the Machiavelli lightwad," which isn't so.

Latest gossip is: Alvin Jake Powell, Yankee World Series hero, will be sold or traded. . . . Joe DiMaggio has the Yanks mildly worried. They tried to get Joe to sign up at a reasonable boost in pay the other day, but the clouting rookie dashed out of the room for a conference with relatives who know how to get lots of money from baseball magnates. . . . Coach John Schulte of the world champs wrote Boss Joe McCarthy a letter before the minor-major league player meet opened and warned, "Don't let 'em los you." Joe stayed away from Connie Mack and Clark Griffith and came out okay.

Sport Callings

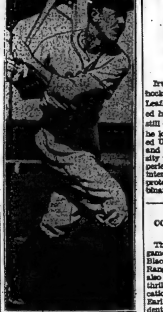
By Ken Colling

Not only in Belleville, but generally one can notice in athletic circles a general descent in late years. One British sports writer blames the prevailing situation on the game of golf. That may be the case across the waters, but there are many other elements far more dangerous that are slowly sapping the very existence of athletic prowess around these parts. The British writer, however, goes on to say golf is "a selfish solitary game". He adds—"men who would have become mighty athletes, stars at cricket, football and other red-blooded sporting endeavours, have sacrificed it all to play golf."

The British sports commentator adds thusly —"Golf has been the ruination of Britain's reign in the realm of athletics, for golf has lured away men who could have kept the Empire-flag waving haughtily at the mast heads if they had given to other sports some of the time devoted to golf". He concludes his lament on golf by stating it would be some consolation if Britain was supreme in golfdom, but such is not the case, and endeavours are lost, and all became too much time is devoted to golf, he contends.

Such conditions may be true for Britain, but we do not believe it has interfered to such a large degree with Canadian sport, however. Such could be very well be the case in hockey, we submit. There has been a general descent in hockey prowess in the smaller centres of Ontario in recent years, however, of which we will deal with our own particular community. There is no denying the fact that the material, the calibre, of which was developed in Belleville for twenty or thirty years ago is quite absent today. Why one may ask. Personally there are too many reasons some of which are individual opinions, but there are others, that should be common knowledge.

Today for the entertainment of the teen aged boy, whose brother 15 or 20 years ago was playing hockey on the corner vacant lot, we have the talking picture, the motor car and lastly the radio with its 57 varieties. The reasons to him be by away from participating in competitive sport, that is generally speaking. There are the odd few who desire participating in athletics, but their numbers are slowly diminishing, and, we believe, in a large degree this is due to some of the above counter attractions. Of course there are numerous minor professional hockey leagues to be provided with material today, which was not the case but 15 years ago . . . Personally we believe the hockey played in the Intermediate O.H.A. in these parts 15 or 20 years ago to have been equal to or superior to the class of hockey played in some of the minor pro loops of today . . .



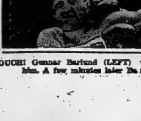
"What is the remedy and how can we of the smaller communities protect our interests and keep the interest in hockey alive?" some may ask. There is an answer to that question, we believe, and it lies in the newly proposed Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association, that is meeting with favour in the Western part of the Province. If Belleville pr any other small city in Ontario expects to revive interest in hockey, that interest must be sustained and stimulated from the "ground up". Let every community in the city of Belleville. Doubtless the newly instituted Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association is headed towards definite success and if Belleville should be one of the cities to affiliate with this Association, if for no other reason than for the salvation and stimulation of Canada's national winter sport. In the city today we have a retired professional hockey player, who made a success of his life's sporting endeavours for over a period of 15 years, we refer to Albert "Toots" Holway, who at one time played for the Montreal Maroons, when they won the world's professional hockey championship. Holway might prove the ideal coach for the education of young players in this city, but it is sincerely hoped however, Belleville sport interests will get behind a Juvenile team or league, in years to come. The Ki-Y League has sponsored juvenile hockey within the city, but the newly proposed provincial body should prove just what is needed locally to bring the status of the game to its proper level once again.

It has been said "sport travels in cycles". This may or may not be true, but, it is a certainty, however, there has been a general descent in the progress of both hockey and baseball conditions in Belleville in recent years. While this falling off of interest shown among the participants has been noted in these two particular sporting activities, however, there is an incline or upward trend towards the interest being shown in rugby football and basket ball. The younger generation is showing keen interest in these two pastimes and they are gaining public approval annually. The reason for this advancement in these newer sporting activities is due largely to the fact that the teen aged generation, in basket ball and football especially, is up to date interested in hockey and baseball to practically start all over again from scratch so to speak, and educate the juveniles of today in these two outstanding rugby phases, that is if they are to survive. Three ideas and suggestions are personally our own and we would appreciate those of others who may be interested in the subject.

The B.C.A.F. "Tiers" had Billie Iverdale as chairman. He will direct Mission Manoeds 5 to 6 last evening. Iverdale usually the cast in the Limestone City the officials "put the ben on the visitors". At one stage in the game the Flyers were penalized twice in succession, for why the referee seemed to favor, up to show their superiority the B.C.A.F. gang "fenced it on" and scored two goals when short handed. They should win the Kingston hop with ease, methinks.

Max Schmeling is still insistent regarding an early date for a early date for a Braddock decision boxing bout, but receives little satisfaction.

The New York State Boxing Commission protected their interests in the heavyweight title, however, by asking Schmeling to post a bond of $25,000.00 as a guarantee the "Black Uhlan" will defend his crown if he defeats Braddock, which sounds like a logical move by the boxing fathers in the face of the current rumors, that Schmeling had intended to meet Louis and wrested the title from Braddock.



Irvin "Ace" Bailey, crack big-time hockey forward with Toronto Maple Leafs until an injury in Boston halted his professional puck-chasing, is still on skates and still in the game he loves. Last year the Ace coached University of Toronto pucksters and this year is again back at Varsity with the hope that a year's experience and competition in the new intercollegiate loop will give his proteges the necessary winning combination. Ace is the fellow with the right idea—to help others to help themselves.

COULTER AND SEIBERT GET A BIT PERSONAL

This National Hockey League game brought together the Chicago Black Hawks and the New York Rangers on New York ice, and it also produced, along with some thrilling hockey, this played altercation. Art Coulter of Rangers and Earl Seibert of Hawks, who incidentally starred in an even-Stephen affair last year, shared the fireworks after crashing together in a hard-checking mix-up. They came up swinging and their mates joined in the fun. Seibert and Coulter both took penalties for their fracas, which left it a tie. So was the final score.

SHOP EARLY

"Dear OLD Santa"

—here we've been married half a year and now it's Christmas and for the life of me I don't know what to get the little girl! I think she'd like a lamp for the living room—but then again she might prefer an electric cleaner. Golly, Santa, as one old married man to another can't you help me out?

Anxiously,
JOE

Dear Joe:
Well, young fellow, it shouldn't be hard to decide. Does this young lady do her own housework, or has she a maid? With someone in to make the beds and wash the dishes, I'd say buy her a lamp . . . . but otherwise, well, for gosh sakes, help her out with the vacuum cleaner!
But — whichever it is — buy her something personal, too! A compact, a bag, lingerie, stockings. What it is doesn't matter just so long as it's all for her and you bought it!

Sincerely,
SANTA

P. S. Now If THIS Leaves You Up in the Air, Just Look at the Ads in the Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

DEAR SANTA: My husband has a million ties and the worst of it is he wants more. He's crazy on the subject of neckwear but doesn't trust my taste. What will I do?

Frantically yours,
MARY

DEAR MARY:
Buy him a couple of ties, of course! But before you visit his favorite store, wrap up half a dozen of his pet cravats and take them along. Show them to the sales person. Don't duplicate just what he's wearing, but get something similar. And here's a big word of caution: Don't try to set a new style for him! Buy him the kind of pattern he's been wearing. Remember—you can change his brand of coffe on him, but his necktles—never!

Love from SANTA

DEAR SANTA CLAUS: Don't faint—I want to buy a present for my mother-in-law. Yeh, I really like the old girl 'cause she lives out-of-town— though she does insist that her grandchildren look like her. What will I give her, Santy, huh?

Dear Art:
Where are your brains, old fellow? You could have answered your own question. Send her a nice lounge chair and a nice Merry Christmas letter to boot! After she's tried the chair, she may even admit she likes you better than you think.

Sincerely,
SANTA CLAUS

HOW JOAN LOVED THRU

by

ANNE FORESTER

Chapter I.

Mr. Ormond dressed for dinner by taking off his coat and unbuttoning his vest. This was a trick of his youth, a save-over from those days when young "Bill" Ormond had come home from his carpenter shop jog-trotting to dress in time to the way of an evening toilette, and even today, though poised on the proud eminence of Dorcyville's leading contractor and builder, the habit persisted. This done, he sat down to the dinner table and scowled at the empty chair opposite.

The thin face of his wife—seven long-nosed Dorcyville still called her "the second Mrs. Ormond"—lighted with a sort of sour satisfaction.

"Well, I'm glad that at last you're noticing something of your daughter's habits! She's always being late for meals lately. Haven't you known what she's thinking of—"

"Probably of boys! Ain't they crazy. Can't walk down town without picking up with someone. Now it's Hugh Sewell—that man that's visiting Mat Sewell. She's getting an awful name—" Julia stopped with a little gasp. Across the table Mr. Ormond's eyes had left his plate and came up to fasten on Julia's own. There was a piercing quality about those small, dark eyes. "They made one think of the grim let holes he bored in his own houses.

"What do you mean, Julia?"

Julia looked frightened, but jealousy of the other girl proved stronger than her fear of her stepfather. She gave a short, nervous laugh.

"Why—oh, pish, isn't it? All Dorcyville knows Joan is—is—boy struck. Oh, I don't mean anything wrong, of course, but I think you have to admit it does look funny.... for a fine girl to stand on the house on the street corners talking to men. And the drummers at the National House, they always make remarks, whistle when Joan goes by.... you know how it is, Mr. Ormond—"

Mrs. Ormond rushed to her daughter's relief—her thin figure trembling slightly in emotion.

"Jewel's right, Will,—ever since her sixteenth birthday she has been before, Julia's demand for the more fashionable clothes. She has been expected by all save her stepfather—Jewel's right. It certainly doesn't look nice for a girl to be so very attractive to men. All sorts of men. Why, Mrs. Hendrick said to me just yesterday, when we ate at the community clubhouse for the church supper, that Joan Ormond interrupted herself with a little shriek. The second Mrs. had danced under her husband's fist.

"Can't you two women talk plain!"

"Naw, they can't, cause they haven't anything real to say!" A sudden explosion from the fourth at the table—a freckle-faced boy of ten with tousled hair and thick utterance—due to bread and butter—did not check the flow of words at the rescue of the half-sister, he adored.

Forgetting the dignity of her 32 years, Jewel turned fiercely to meet this new attack.

"What do you know about it, Henry Ormond? I saw the way Joan's father chasing around with Hugh Sewell—out with him in his car at all hours—"

Henry overcame the handicap of the bread and butter by an enormous gulp. Tears or effort stood in his eyes, but he met Jewel's eyes—macho by his own estimation—and raising his voice shrilly over it.

"Aw—she's not! I'm not jealous! Just because Jo's prettier'n you are, if Mat Sergent and his aunt get into trouble! notice you'll be tickled pink. You're a crabby old maid and Jo's a jewel! Jo—"

"Silence!" The crockery danced again under Mr. Ormond's fist. The girls' faces were black with wrath. "Eat your dinner, you two! I'll attend to Joan—"

Shamed quite fell on them as Cathy, the "hired girl," entered with the pot roast and dish of boiled potatoes.

In the front of the house the screen door squeaked open and shut again with a little flat bang. Light footsteps came along the hall, muffled only by the thin rag-runner. A girl appeared in the doorway. A moment she hover for a brief, dismayed second at the sight of the dinner table.

The setting sun, slanting through the hall window behind her, touched her body—wand-slim in its sleeveless, crevasse slip of yellow voile—to a golden glow. It turned her hair to a windblown halo of shining brightness, the sweet eyes in her face to the golden-pink of a ripe apricot. Nor hidden half was the sailing sun never ill Joan with this vital radiance. There was something further, some inner fire of youth kindled within that set her apart from these grey people who moved in it with such awful bewilderment.

Long after she had passed out of their lives, when she was only a memory in this commonplace house, each of the four could recall Joan as she stood framed in the doorway now.

Chapter 3

Joan Defends Her Love

As Joan slipped into her chair beside Henry and began to eat, her father's voice sounded harshly—

"Look here, my girl! What's this evening rumored talked of about from one end of town to the other?"

The dreams faded from Joan's eyes, that inner glory died. She looked up with chilled bewilderment to find them all watching her. The scene was suddenly printed on her mind—the over-loaded table, the shapeless figure of Cathy kicking open the swinging door to the kitchen pantry.

"I'm not being talked about unless it's by nasty-minded gossips who have nothing else to do—"

Jewel rushed on in a sort of frightened triumph. She repeated the words at the girl opposite as though she was striking her in the face.

"I suppose you think I didn't see you and Hugh Sewell at the Maple Avenue, in Hugh Sewell's car—It's so, Mamma. I saw her. And he has been seen driving along the road his arms—long kisses—it was disgusting!"

As Jewel hurled the words it seemed to Joan to be a black hot spreading to stain the golden background of her glorious dreams. She sat in the shocked white face of such a hurt child sharing back at Jewel's malicious face.

Long after it had become only a hideous memory she was driving back the scene at will, even to its smallest details—a splash of gravy on her father's red-striped pongee nose of the pink-and-blue china bowl which fell from Henry's hand, her own throbbing heart.

"No that's not where doing!" thundered Mr. Ormond. "Chippy-ing around with that city fellow—you've been blazed with sudden hot rage, "That's—horrid! I've nothing to be ashamed of—I love Hugh and he—"

Joan stopped, swept by a guilty sense of betrayal. This love of hers—how to define it, so newly fledged —flinging it out in self-defense in this way like handling a butterfly with rough hands.

"Got it all settled, haven't you? Given out you and this fine lover of yours going to be married! Another thing, my girl!"

"Why—we—we hadn't planned —" Joan faltered. There had been no time for planning since the night noon. The marvelous fact of Hugh's love, the revelation of her own arms about her, had swomped her senses.

"Cautious young man—wants to make sure of his ground before he pipes! You're in the class with that Emmes drummer that was in the drug store counter in the National Hotel, but, opportunely, you've got a father to look after you, eat your dinner and do the sulks out of your face. Hugh Sewell can come to see you after a while."

"Either Father!" Joan cried in dismay. She could see him— Mr. Ormond's chief assistant at the City Hall, dull-eyed, fat face, tracks laugh, his long arms covered with white jackets, dangling their hands at paws. Since her childhood Elmer had adored Joan with a doggish devotion which alternally amused the girl and irritated her with a thin sense of fear, it was she like the terrible cold patience of a spider.

"Yes, Elmer Parsons!" rapped Mr. Ormond, "and let me tell you nothing, my girl, you'd better snap at him while you've got the chance. Let talk get started about you sneaking up side-streets to let Tom, Dick and Harry make love to you and you'll find your father won't be young! With an interest in the business and money in the bank, Elmer Parsher won't go begging for girls to marry—and you'll be won't go bidding very high for second hand goods, either!"

The coarseness of the attack sent a little sick wave over Joan. "I—I don't want any more dinner—I'm going to my room—"

Freed from their gaze, Joan fled up the stairs. It was sanctuary, this quiet room which Ruth Ormond had arranged so long ago for her little daughter. In her childish troubles it had soothed Joan with the suggested presence of her dead mother. But now she was too feverish to feel that gentle influence. She tugged off the yellow dress, substituted a hot flannel, for the night was cooler, and all the time her mind was repeating over and over minutes now she would be with Hugh. Let the recurrence be dark, tomorrow—to-night she would be happy in her love.

Flight! There was something fateful in the way the word fitted into her thoughts, like a sword driven through the night to a flame.... like some gentle wire creature rushing blindly toward its doom.

Joan crept down stairs, avoiding the step near the turn that creaked. She was opening the screen door by careful inches when her father's voice froze her. "Just what I thought; sneaking out to meet your fine friend! Now I'll tell you what, my girl—" William Ormond's voice was rasping in fury of his own save—"if you leave this house tonight—you'll not come back!"

Chapter 2.

JOAN TAKES THE PLUNGE

William Ormond's face was pale with temper—Joan's was quite as white. She faltered, but stood firm, remember, if you go out tonight, you'll stay out!"

Over her father's shoulder Joan could see her stepmother and Jewel, listening. All three were suddenly allen to her—hostile jailers instead of relatives. She had a sense of being utterly—pitifully—alone.

Joan whipped up her pride, turned to face her father. "You think you'll force me to marry Elmer Parcher this way, all right—I'll get out! I'll pack my things and go away with the man—I love! Well be married tonight!—" She fell the tears coming and fled blindly up the stairs.

She packed her suitcase in a frenzy, flinging in clothes, toilet articles, her mother's framed photograph, which she kissed frantically before she put it in. A muffled rap at her door. Her eyes flashed as she called, "Who is it"?

"S me," Henry's husky whisper. "Let me in, Joan—"

Henry blinked in the light, sowing in the doorway of a girl just—calm. "Aw-say, Jo," he kicked at the suitcase—"you aren't really goin'? Say, Jo, don't go. I'll get you candy the one ought to go—she's the cat's whiskers—you know she is, Jo, she's awful swell—"

Joan choked. Still on her knees beside the suitcase she turned to clasp her arms went around the stocky little figure, and she sobbed on her little brother's shoulder. "Listen, Henry—I'm going to marry Hugh Sewell and we'll live in the city and you'll come down and visit me. Think of the fun—the plays we'll see—and we'll play tennis at the Club—and golf—you can learn, because they'll be angry if they know you're in here talking to me. Kiss me, Henry—and don't tell anybody!"

Through a mist of tears Joan showed Henry's little wan figure into the hall and pulled her small white felt hat down over her bright hair. Then she was on one side with the weight of the grip, Joan went out. Not daring to look back at the quiet white room which had sheltered her for 16 years.

Downstairs...chin held high, eyes defiantly straight ahead. No one to the hall. No one on the porch. She slipped out with the curious unreality of a dream, trying to realize she was leaving home.

Mr. Platt was watering his lawn with the hose. Joan could see the dark earth and drenched lilacs riseted across the sidewalk. Instinctively Joan hated to leave—these pleasant commonplace things which went to make up the world of people, but the pink hydrangea by the front door, the lilacs, the sound of water—the murmur of voices from neighboring porches. She was leaving it all for Hugh and that was big her from passers-by as she walked down the street.

Hugh's car was parked under the trees where they had agreed to meet. His tall figure was coming to meet her. Impulsively Joan dropped the suitcase and ran forward to be drawn into his arms.

"Hugh—you're here—you've kept me waiting half an hour"

Almost fiercely Hugh crushed her to him, kissing her forehead, eyelids, lips, her closed eyelids—

The sharp delight of it stung through Joan's dull grief. She drew out of his arms, striving to read his face through the dusk. Apparently he had not seen the suitcase, and Joan's self-effacing with embarrassment Back there at the house it had seemed—so right to tell Hugh she meant to marry him. If he would only say something—make it easier for her.

When he tried to draw her to the car Joan stopped him with one hand on his chest. "No, Hugh—wait. There's something—something I have to tell you—during the last hour—"

"You—you love me, don't you? you, you—want me?"

"Of course I do, ever since that first day I saw you—so slim and boyish—"

Joan evaded Hugh's hands, half laughing, half crying. "Wait—wait, darling, until you hear. There was a dreadful scene at home. I had to tell them about you—about us. Can't you see— couldn't stay there after that. He was terribly angry—my father. And he told me that if I came out to meet you tonight I'd have to stay away. And they threw that horrid Elmer Parcher at me—he's been trying to marry me for years. And after you—this afternoon—it seemed like sacrilege! And I defied them all—that's what you'd want me to do, isn't it, Hugh? I told them I was glad to go—to you. That we—that you and I were going to be—married—"

At the first wild abandon of that moment fear struck a thin sharp sensation. Something terrifying in Hugh's embrace—something automatic and mechanical. Joan was caused her to draw back, startled, her anxious eyes straining through the dusk to catch which was his face.

"Hugh—what...."

Joan could see his eyes looking down—vague dark pools. The utter stillness of the moment stayed with her long afterwards. A sudden light flashed like a sword through the night to a flame.... like some gentle wire creature rushing blindly toward its doom.

His voice was smothered as though a giant hand were pressing on his lungs.

"You told them—Joan, dearest! Why—I'm already married."

Chapter 4

Far down the street someone had started a radio. On the night wind it reached Joan's and Hugh's motionless figures with ironic, sweetness.

"I'll be loving you
Always—
With a love that's true
Always—"

At Hugh's words Joan's face had gone cold; she felt her lips stiffen. Unauthorize she had backed away and now she was pressed flat against a trunk.

Married! Hugh—her Hugh—

Yet in this first moment she could not feel pain, only a crushing humiliation.

She forced a laugh, unnaturally high, pitifully shaky.

"Oh—you've—married. Why—that's that's a good joke on me—isn't it!"

"Not for just an hour,
Not for just a day,
Not for just a year,
But always ...."

The bitterbreaking sweetness of it.

"You—you certainly will think I'm—easy—"

"Stop—Joan!" Hugh's voice was sharp with pain. "You don't—you think that. Darling I meant to tell you. Maybe not at first, but it must seem necessary then...You attract me so, Joan—I didn't KNOW—I love you. And then—when I found I did love you—I didn't dare speak because I was afraid I'd lose you. Joan's arm was a slim barrier holding Hugh back.

"And you let me go ahead all these weeks—without a word. Loving you so—"

"I love you, Joan. Darling, you don't doubt that, do you?"

Joan's hand flew to her breast, as though the pain there were unbearable.

"Your wife——"

"Joan, you don't understand. She's so different from you. She's a brilliant, glittering woman. Not a little country girl like you. Joan, I'm—I don't mean to disparage, but I must make myself clear to you. I was nine years ago, I was a young fool—still in college. She was the most popular girl in the University town. Wealthy old family—ruled the town socially. I—I was flattered, rushed her. It became a sort of game to her, I think.

Hugh's hands lifted slightly, then dropped helplessly. Joan's came his arms—shrinking but black against myself. She—she seemed to prefer me and then—shipped me. Her family—my income were acceptable. She—she—married me for—"

The slender figure before him did not answer. Joan's pale face shadowed was plunged through the darkness into his.

"The time—over a long breath. We were married when I left college. We—we had our ups and downs—my life—of ours." he corrected himself. "Her—she's very spoiled children. There was no torment in our attitude, no desire to be understood—apparently—but there was no love. We were youthfully hotheaded. Quarrels—a year ago a scathing hand. Of course the thing went on the rocks. There were scenes—dozens of them. We would part and then go back to gether and—that's the end of the work of our two families. But there was Mat's—Mat's sister, Hugh—I—I've said to get a divorce, I think Thelma had been bored—bored she would gladly have granted that. But Mat's sister—Mat's aunt was very bitter against divorce. She told Thelma that she would disinherit her if she ever went through with divorce and social prestige mean a very great deal to Thelma, Joan.

Hugh's emphasis was bitter. Joan's hands fell to her sides still silent. With her short skirts, the straight, slim coat, she seemed like a tall child standing in the falling snows.

"Thelma and I separated for the last time four years ago. I left home and went to a hotel to live. But I couldn't get a divorce. There no grounds on which to base it. Thelma's family—that is the circumstances Thelma wouldn't, at first. I didn't blame her—I thought I was through with marriage forever. Then I came here to live and Thelma to put that brief deal across with Nat Sergent. I'd known Nat in college. But he was a year my senior and because it was disagreeable to me he never mentioned to Thelma that I was here—"

The day you came up on the porch with Nat was about a month ago, Joan. Then you were like some one I'd always known. Somehow you were familiar—like a well remembered song—or a perfume you've smelled somewhere. Do you remember? Thelma—"

Did she remember! The thought now was a torturing fire. Joan gasped a little low cry of despair.

"If you only knew what you seemed to me Hugh. You were all the books I'd read so long ago, some true. You were perfect to me!—Joan's cousin's voice broke. Her arm went over her face in a very young gesture.

"Joan—Joan, darling. You know I love you. Only you."

At the first wild abandon of that moment fear struck a thin sharp sensation. Something terrifying in Hugh's embrace—something automatic and mechanical. Joan was caused her to draw back, startled, her anxious eyes straining through the dusk to catch which was his face.

"Hugh—what...."

Joan could see his eyes looking down—vague dark pools. The utter stillness of the moment stayed with her long afterwards. A sudden light flashed like a sword through the night to a flame.... like some gentle wire creature rushing blindly toward its doom.

His voice was smothered as though a giant hand were pressing on his lungs.

"You told them—Joan, dearest! Why—I'm already married."

Chapter 4

Far down the street someone had started a radio. On the night wind it reached Joan's and Hugh's motionless figures with ironic, sweetness.

"I'll be loving you
Always—
With a love that's true
Always—"

At Hugh's words Joan's face had gone cold; she felt her lips stiffen. Unauthorize she had backed away and now she was pressed flat against a trunk.

Married! Hugh—her Hugh—

Yet in this first moment she could not feel pain, only a crushing humiliation.

She forced a laugh, unnaturally high, pitifully shaky.

"Oh—you've—married. Why—that's that's a good joke on me—isn't it!"

"Not for just an hour,
Not for just a day,
Not for just a year,
But always ...."

The bitterbreaking sweetness of it.

"You—you certainly will think I'm—easy—"

"Stop—Joan!" Hugh's voice was sharp with pain. "You don't—you think that. Darling I meant to tell you. Maybe not at first, but it must seem necessary then...You attract me so, Joan—I didn't KNOW—I love you. And then—when I found I did love you—I didn't dare speak because I was afraid I'd lose you.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Sunshine Cure in the Park

By Dorothy Douglas

The day was delightfully sunny and the park was looking unusually cheerful in its colors; but Wyndham was distinctly disgruntled with parks, whether lovely or otherwise. He wanted to get back to a man's job.

Hale his joyous service, however, was having the time of his life. Every day for the past few weeks he had his master had had a romp. Rats liked nothing better than to race in the park and frighten all the lady inmates in flight.

At present he was in the seventh heaven, having roused a score or more of squawking gulls from a most peaceful floating party they were enjoying on the surface of the lake.

"Oh drat You silly little dog! I was getting such a lovely sketch of those birds and now you've spoiled it all! No—go away—I don't like you."

Wyndham turned around in surprise to see the owner of the voice. She had been concealed behind a bush beside the path and was sketching in an enormous sketch book.

"Oh, I say," said Wyndham, doffing his tweed cap, "I'm frightfully sorry that hound of mine has disturbed the pigeons. He didn't, of course, know they were posing for their portraits."

"Those pigeons happen to be sea gulls," said the fair artist, "I could wish—I was getting them so nicely."

"Oh, my goodness, don't weep," hurriedly exclaimed Wyndham. "I'll make Rats sit up for five minutes while you sketch him—by way of punishment. Rats—big!" He commanded the small and astonished terrier. "At once and stay for five minutes. Don't even wiggle an ear.

"The girl looked up at Wyndham and smiled. Who could have help-ed it? After that she simply washed out all the disgruntled musings with which Wyndham's brain had been cluttered. He even found a second to wish to feel that the lamp post had been serving its countryman well—otherwise he would not have in the park and would thereby have missed the greatest smile he had ever seen. He liked the eyes, too.

"Oh please, don't punish him like that. He looks so sorry for himself sitting up like a dummy."

"I will relent—but he had no right to frighten those pigeons," declared Wyndham, himself down uninvited to watch the sketch. "I have to suspend this work of art".

"Perhaps you would like to purchase it when completed," laughed Daphne. "I need a new hat." She was sketching while she chatted and Wyndham fell to wondering if she were joking or not. She certainly looked like one of those impoverished artists with her shabby coat and more shabby hat.

"I'll buy it for five dollars, and tomorrow, if you will make another sketch I will buy that, too. I can find any number of animal models." Most of my friends would really like have a painting of their dogs than of their husbands."

"Nice sort of friends you have," laughed Daphne. "You evidently believe in the idle rich."

"Rich but not idle," put in Wyndham, misunderstanding. "My car caused a bit of a smashup and I'm expected to be idle for another fortnight, under doctor's orders. I don't mind quite so much now that I've met you," he added with a grin.

Daphne turned astonished eyes upon him. "But you haven't met me—nor have I met you," she said severely.

"Oh!" growled Wyndham. "What a rotter, situation—unkind fate and all that sort of thing. What are we going to do about it?"

"I am certainly not going to waste any time worrying about it," said Daphne and closed her sketch book, refusing to draw another line while Rats sat up so forlornly. "The world can jog along very nicely even though we have not met."

"Not for me, young lady," said Wyndham. "It will never be the same world again; I shall only live for the day when you will put that little hand in mine and say, 'yes, I do be mine'—Mr. Tom Wyndham."

The girl gasped. "But you're not Tom Wyndham of the Glover Manufacturing company are you? Goodness me! My dad has been raving about you and insisting on my meeting you. He calls a real out-and-out man for months. And I flatly refused. I am sick and tired of these paragons and frightened of these many virtues."

And before Wyndham could realize her intention she made a swift plunge behind the shrubbery and vanished from his sight. He said a few forceful words which made Rats want to cover his wagging ears. "How I've got to ask every man in the office if he has an adorable daughter with violet eyes and a chic of hair on her chin who sketches. Confound the luck."

"Dad," she said that evening. "I sort of want to meet your Mr. Wyndham. Could you ask him in dinner tomorrow night?"

So the little band was in his own even before Wyndham had expected it.

Against Trucking Franchise

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 12—(CP)—Finance Committee of City Council passed a resolution last night urging the Ontario Municipal Board not to grant franchises to certain United States' transport companies allowing them to travel over the highway between here and Niagara Falls, Ont.

A delegation representing the railways appeared before the committee to oppose such franchises and to ask the help of the committee in making representations against it.

Born, January 6th, 1412, burned as a heretic, May 30th, 1431 and canonized as a saint May 16, 1920, Joan of Arc has fired the world's imagination since the flames of Rouen rose about her feet. The outline of her life is familiar to most people - - - the story of a young woman who, listening to the voices of God and His angels in the fields of Domremy, led the armies of France until betrayed and burnt at the stake by the English at Rouen. The strange historical background is unknown to many people. V. Sackville - West, in her biography "Saint Joan of Arc," has given her interpretation of the facts of St. Joan's career, of the mystery of the Voices, the miracles and the power of the Maid. Those who have read the novels of V. Sackville - West will not be disappointed in this volume. She successfully builds up dramatic evidence on the known facts. She sees France's national saint as "not just the subject of a biography, not merely a picturesque figure in armour and a scarlet cloak, but a figure who challenges sense of the profoundest tenets of what we do and do not believe. More perhaps than any other military figure in history, she forces us to think." The New York Times has acclaimed this biography as one written "with great directness, with distinctiveness and careful scholarship, in the most complete detail and with a beauty and reverence from which the last grain of sentimentality has been refined away."

A visitor to the recent Chicago "Century of Progress" Exposition, Professor C. O Furnas, of the Chemical Engineering Department, Yale University, concluded that the books yet unwritten are the ones most important to the human race and that the real exposition of progress is not due for some time to come. He found that the world's leading scientists could not explain what causes cancer or the common cold, the composition of some of the simplest foodstuffs, or the fundamentals of the simple contraction of muscles that allows a man to walk. Professor Furnas decided to make a survey of all modern sciences and his volume "The Next Hundreds Years: the Unfinished Business of Science" is the comment of a scientist and engineer on our civilization. The author has a stimulating grasp of the field of applied science, of its accomplishments, its expectations and future consequences. The book is pervaded with an infectious sense of humour which gives it a sparkle that is refreshing.

The romance of steamship travel between Europe and America is described by F. R. Readhead in his book "Atlantic Ferry." The history of transatlantic travel is told from the first daring trip by the steam vessel Savannah in 1819 to the liners of the Queen Mary and the Normandie. Mr. Readhead traces the transition from the sailing clipper, through the triumph of the steam packet to the coming of the ship ship. The volume is illustrated with fine plates of ships - - - yesterday and today.

Noel Coward's new venture in theatre presentation, that of giving a group of three one-act plays in an evening's performance has captivated London for over a year. Now he has come to New York with his company and with Gertrude Lawrence as leading lady is proving the advantages of one-act plays in place of the longer three-act plays. "Tonight at 8:30" is the title of his new book containing his nine presentations. Each group provides variety and entertainment from the crisp repartee of "Hands Across the sea" to the delicate Victoriannisms of "Family Album," from the tragedy of the psycho-analyst tricked by his own emotions to the gay bravado of "Ways and Means."

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

As the pygmies started off to kill Tarzan, that weird ape-call rose once more from the prisoner's cage in the cave of the dim distance. But; and a moment later, out of the dim distance came an eerie cry that seemed a counterpart of the first. The warriors shook their heads and returned to the campfire.

There they held a long council, consisting of a maximum of talk and a minimum of thinking. Meanwhile, Numa grew braver and decided to risk a visit to his imprisoned master.

Soon the little monkey entered the cage and leaped to Tarzan's broad chest.

"I can gnaw the rope, and take off the wire with my fingers." Tarzan shook his head. "You cannot do," replied the ape-man; "otherwise I should have called you long ago." "Why do you demand Numa?" asked the ape. "Besides the rope, they twisted copper wire on my wrists and ankles."

"I have come to gnaw the cords that hold you," he said. "That you cannot do," replied the ape-man; "otherwise I should have called you long ago." "Why do you demand Numa?" asked the ape. "Besides the rope, they twisted copper wire on my wrists and ankles."

Then the pygmies sallied forth once more toward the hut to kill their prisoner.

Accession Proclamation

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—The text of the succession council proclamation announcing George VI as the new British King follows:

Whereas by an instrument of abdication dated the tenth day of December, his former majesty Edward the eighth did declare his irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for himself and his descendants, and the said instrument of abdication has now taken effect whereby the imperial crown of Great Britain, Ireland, all other of his former majesty's dominions is now solely and rightfully come to the high and mighty Prince, Albert Frederick Arthur George.

We therefore the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of this realm being here assisted with these of His Majesty's Privy Council, with numbers of other principal gentleman and quality and with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and citizens of London, do now hereby with one voice and consent of tongue and heart, publish and proclaim that the high and mighty Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George is now become our only lawful and rightful Liege Lord George the Sixth, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, to whom we do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty love and affection, beseeching God, by whom Kings and Queens do reign, to bless the Royal George VI with long and happy years to reign over us.

Given at James' Palace this Twelfth Day of December in the Year of Our Lord 1936. God Save The King.

FREE STATE TO RECOGNIZE KING

Office of Executive Council Will be Abolished Says de Valera

Dublin, Dec. 12 (AP)—President Eamon De Valera whose Government last night virtually abolished the office of Governor-General in the Irish Free State, asked the Dail Eireann today to ratify former King Edward's Abdication Act.

The Free State President restated his contention that abolition of the rule of the King's name in the conduct of the dominion's domestic affairs "has recognized the existing fact.

"As long as the King is the symbol of the Empire and is recognized as such, he will be recognized by the Free State," De Valera said.

Britishers in Madrid Sadly Toast New King

Madrid, Dec. 12 (AP)—A little group of Britons, isolated far from home in war-torn Spain, sadly toasted their new King today.

The group gathered in the hall of the General Hotel last night to listen to former King Edward's farewell and plea for allegiance to George VI.

Tears glistened in their eyes as they listened to Edward's last, clear word: "God bless the King."

TORONTO EXCHANGE TO CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—The Toronto Stock Exchange decided this morning to observe the new King's Birthday by closing on Monday, next, December 14.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

International Nickel firmed nearly a half and Consolidated Smelters eased down a minor fraction while Brazilian, C.P.R. and Ford A hardened no worth-while changes. A gain of 3-4 to 42 3-4 for Walkers Common was the main adjustment in beverage list. International Petroleum, Imperial, British American and McColl Common were off minor fractions.

Massey Harris pfd. dropped 1 1-2 and the common 1-4. Rise Ribbon pfd. lost 2 1-4 and closing prices were down for Consolidated Smelters, Dominion Stores and Penny Farmer, leader of the Wood held to the upside. Strong spots in the steels were the Canadian Car and Foundry stocks, Steel of Canada common and Dominion Bridge pfd. Canadian Locomotive advanced 3 1-2 to a new high at 19 1-2.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP)—Prices maintained an even course in the closing mining session of the week and volume was quite heavy with the medium-price and junior golds figuring prominently in the action.

Famour sold down to 2.90, losing 03 or about half of yesterday's gain. Dome registered a fractional point gain to 51 3-4 and Buffalo Ankerite at 12 was up 1-4. Little Long Lac, Hollinger and Macassa held to the up side. Among the cheaper issues prices were narrowly higher for Sherritt, Bidgood-Kirkland, Hard Rock, Canadian Malartic and Sylvanite.

Sherritt at 2.46, Hudson Bay at 32 3-4, Sudbury Basin at 5.45 and Aldermac at 1.36 were all close to Friday's closing prices. Eldorado at 1.30 was up 2.

God's Lake advanced to 90 up 12 for the day and Bobjo a holder of God's Lake stock was in sympathy at a higher price. Greene Stabell, Sudbury Contact, Goldcrest and Graham-Bousquet were all higher.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—Farm implements and amusements carried the buying banner for specialties in today's dull market as high favored issues pushing up 1 to around 2 points all the best.

Some of the recent leaders appeared a bit more resistant, but most issues were off a point here and there and three sizeable losses were evidenced. Trading approximated 1,100,000 shares.

Among Canadian stocks, Hiram Walker and International Nickel were a shade higher, while McIntyre and Distillers Corp. Seagrams were unchanged to slightly lower.

Canadian exchange trends held about even. Canadian dollars were steady at 100.09⅝ cents.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP)—Chatham and Hull posted the only gains in bacon hog prices today. Other points reported steady quotations.

Liveweights added 10 cents at Chatham-Hull and 5 cents at Stratford market. Dressedweights were 15 and 20 cents higher respectively.

Liveweights—Brantford $7.75, Kitchener $7.60, London $7.50, Hull $7.65, Peterborough $7.50, Stratford $7.50, Chatham $7.60.

Dressedweights—London $10, Peterborough $10.65, Hull $10.50, Stratford $10, Chatham $10.40.

GEORGE VI

a.m. and got into a waiting automobile. Only a police sergeant and footman attended, soon to be replaced by royal sentries with fixed bayonets, guarding the sovereign.

Three minutes later the King prepared to assume his royal responsibilities over the world's largest empire—arrived at the palace to receive official notification of the start of his reign.

In a firm voice, an official announced the councillors, were assembled to "publish and proclaim with one voice and consent of their tongue and heart that the high and mighty Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George is now by the grace of God become our only and lawful and rightful Liege Lord as King George the Sixth, to whom we do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection."

Crowd Cheers Queen Mary

Queen Mary, the wife of King George and the mother of two others, watched the colorful scene outside the palace from an upstairs window in Marlborough House.

The crowd, recognizing the stately, privileged person, cheered her heartily time after time.

Among the privy councillors was J. H. Thomas, former Colonial Secretary who resigned from the cabinet last May after in investigation of alleged leakages of budget information.

He smiled in acknowledgement of the cheers as the royal automobile carried him along the Mall to Buckingham Palace.

London Jammed With Crowds

Downtown London was literally jammed with people at the time of the public proclamations at St. James's, Charing Cross, Temple Bar and the Royal Exchange.

All traffic was diverted from the route of the historic proclamation.

At three o'clock, the little Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, made their first public appearance since their father's accession. With the king, they left their Piccadilly home to drive down Constitution Hill to an enthusiastic reception.

Scene Outside St. James's.

There was a remarkable scene outside St. James's just before the proclamation from the balcony of Friary Court. Several thousand excited people burst police cordons and swarmed into the balcony. Police and horsegard reinforcements rushed up to clear the roadway.

In the House of Commons, meanwhile members were taking the oath of allegiance to the king. Each member was sworn individually.

In the House of Lords, when the peers assembled likewise to swear their fealty, it was noted the single throne under the canopy at the head of the chamber had been replaced by two thrones, both covered in red plush.

London's crowds, it was estimated, were twice as great as those which witnessed Edward's proclamation of May 27, 1910.

Several women were knocked down in the crush, but none was seriously injured. The pocketbook on St. James Street was closed, and the doors locked against the throng.

TWO CHILDREN TRAPPED IN BED AS HOUSE BURNS

Man And Wife With One Child Escape From Inferno

LANTERN EXPLODES

Can of Gasoline Spills Over Floor And Ignites

Field, Ont., Dec. 14 (CP)—Three members of the Dennis Quenneville family today recovered from burns and mourned death of two young children in a week-end fire that destroyed their small home in the Northern Ontario village west of Sturgeon Falls.

Phillip Quenneville, his wife and four-year-old son Donald escaped from the flaming one-storey house after a gasoline lantern exploded Saturday night. An 18-months-old boy, Yoland, and his sister, four-year-old Odange, were trapped in their beds.

After the lantern exploded while Mrs. Quenneville filled it, her husband attempted to throw the can of gasoline out of the window, but it spilled on and ignited gasoline all over the floor.

Only way of leaving the flaming structure was through the children's bedroom. Quenneville and his brother broke the window and pushed the mother through. They snatched Donald from under his bed, barred the way to the other children.

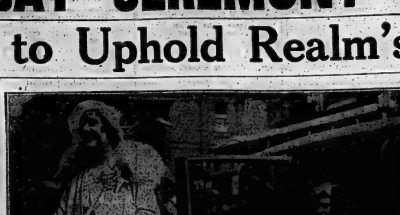
Volunteer firemen who extinguished the blaze entered the ruins and found the charred bodies of the infants.

Quenneville is suffering from bad burns about the face and hands. His wife was burned about the face and body. Donald had an ear burned and his hair singed.

Fifty Years in Show Business

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, who sang and danced his way from the days of the Ethiopian minstrels to the Broadway stage and screen and Harlem's Cotton Club, today looked back on 50 years in the show business.

"In a couple of years," he said, "I'll really start dancing. I've just been coasting the last 50 years but with a little more practice I may get pretty good."



Yesterday was climaxed by a special performance, attended by a galaxy of stars and celebrities, at the Times Square Night Club, where the 57-year-old negro hoofer's clickety-clicks are current, in keeping people jiggling in their seats.

TENDERS ACCEPTED

Ottawa, Dec. 14. —(CP)— The Bank of Canada today announced tenders have been accepted for the full amount of $20,000,000 Dominion Treasury Bill issue due March 15, 1937.

The average discount price was 99.9313, giving an average yield of .747 per cent.

The proceeds of the Treasury Bills will be used for maturing bills.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK REPORTED FREED BY HIS CAPTORS

Swift Moves Result of Kidnapping of War Lord

CAPTOR CAPTURED!

Unconfirmed reports reaching Peiping and Shanghai today said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek had been freed from captivity at Sian-Fu and his captor, Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, had been taken prisoner by loyal troops. The Chinese dictator was reported en route to Nanking.

Chiang's capture Saturday brought swift moves. Troop trains bearing loyal soldiers, rumbled toward Sian-Fu, capital of the Shensi Province.

Red Reader Seen.

In Tokyo Japan and Germany, allied against Communism, consultations were hurriedly suspended the Communist International was behind Marshal Chang, one-time warlord of Manchuria, now Manchukuo. They said an alignance between Chang and the Communist armies he was supposed to have been fighting had opened up "a red route to north central China."

(Reports from Shanghai said that Chang Hsueh-Liang had been imprisoned by Chiang Kai-Shek, after the generalissimo had effected his freedom and staged a counter coup d'etat. The report were not confirmed by Nanking government authorities, and were accepted with reserve in responsible Chinese quarters).

King George's Message Read

London, Dec. 14—(AP)—King George VI, in a message read in the House of Lords today, said:

"I have succeeded to the throne in circumstances which are without precedent and at a moment of great personal distress but I am resolved to do my duty and I am sustained by the knowledge that I am supported by widespread good will and sympathy from all my subjects here and throughout the world.

"It will be my constant endeavor, with God's help and supported as I am by dear wife, to uphold the honor of the realm and promote the happiness of my peoples."

The King's declaration was read by Lord Halifax, Lord Privy Seal, as the peers finished the ceremony of swearing allegiance to the new ruler.

MADRID SIEGE TO LAST ALL WINTER

Insurgents Realign Militia Forces Before Capital City

Madrid, Dec. 14 (AP)—The Socialist defence junta ordered complete reorganization today of its militia forces in preparation for a bitter winter siege.

While insurgent batteries threw occasional shells into the city, the defence forces were converted into a "perfect" army units, the government said.

Faced with the probability the insurgent siege would last throughout the winter, the defence government planned the reorganization to obtain strict discipline among the units.

Observers felt the lull in military activity indicated the Fascists had abandoned their efforts to smash their way into the city and had settled down to a "starvation siege" through the long winter months.

(The belief of the Madrid government that General Franco was planning to starve the city into surrender rather than take it by storm was borne out by reports from Fascist territory.

(Observers with the insurgent troops indicated France believed it was impossible to take the city street by street while it was becoming apparent an attack in force would require too many troops.)

Newspapers in the capital reported the government would reject any effort of foreign mediation of the conflict such as the Franco-British pacification proposal.

Official reports confirmed the loss of 47 lives when the government submarine C3 was torpedoed by another "evidently foreign" submarine off Malaga last week.

DUKE OF WINDSOR CONSULTS DOCTOR ON EAR TROUBLE

Abdicated King of England Closely Guarded in Austrian Villa

ESTATE PATROLED

Austria Welcomed Him as a Tourist Attraction

Vienna, Austria, Dec. 14 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor, closely guarded in a chateau where he started life anew today as a private citizen, made an appointment to consult a Vienna specialist about a long-standing ear affliction.

The former king of England, who came to Austria last night after giving up his throne for Mrs. Wallis Simpson, was expected to call at the Vienna clinic of Professor Heinrich Neumann in the early afternoon, the other patients had left, attendants said.

It was noted the former sovereign held his hand over his ear when he was driven from the Vienna station to the country estate of Baron Eugene de Rothschild near here after his trip from England through France and Switzerland.

Neumann maintained an ethical silence concerning the nature of the Duke's ear trouble but it was learned from attendants and other physicians that the treatment he will undergo consist of X-ray, light rays and rinsing the inner ear.

Neumann has treated the former king on previous visits to Vienna. The specialist confined himself to a statement the ear trouble was not serious and the treatments were designed to prevent deterioration becoming worse.

Most specialists believe the ailment might have been caused either by a fall from a horse or by infection following bathing.

Large Estate Patroled.

Gendarmes patrolled the large estate of Baron de Rothschild, keeping the curious at a distance. Journalists were forbidden to talk to callers.

Watchers patroled the entire railway line from the Austrian frontier to Vienna and the highway from Vienna to the Rothschild estate, over the royal visitor arrived. A gendarme was posted every half kilometre.

A police car accompanied the duke and his party as it dashed from Vienna to the estate, 23 miles from the capital. After he passed the Vienna city limits, police blocked off the road for ten minutes.

The party arrived early Saturday at Portsmouth, England, where he boarded the destroyer Fury for Boulogne, France, a few hours after his abdication. Only a brief ceremonial attended his departure.

THINKS TREMORS WERE ICE QUAKES

'Soo' Meteorologist Doubts Trembling at North Bay Earthquake

North Bay, nOt., Dec. 14.—(CP)—Residents in various parts of the city today reported slight earth tremors Sunday morning but no loss or visible damage was caused the quake was distinctly felt for about 30 seconds, Alexander Calander, 25, of 124 Calander resident. It is believed the tremors were caused over the area affected by a more severe quake last year. The motion was accompanied by a rumbling sound.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 14 (AP)—Meteorologists further hope of the United States Weather Bureau here today that possible earthquake earth tremors felt in North Bay today resulted from an "ice quake."

The theory is that rising temperatures generally during December cause the ice expanding and cracking with a rumbling sound, causing distinct tremors.

Timmins, Ont., Dec. 14.—(CP) — Hollinger mine meteorologist and other district points today reported slight evidences of earth tremors such as were felt in North Bay, Sunday.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—(CP)— Earth effects felt today at North Bay were apparently local as they did not register on instruments at the Dominion observatory here, government seismologists said.

Rises at Four a. m. To Change Adjectives In Loyalty Message

Ottawa, Dec. 14—(CP)—Evidence of the meticulous care used in official documents was offered by the fact Prime Minister Mackenzie King rose at 4 a.m. Saturday to "change two or three adjectives" in the message of loyalty and respect sent on behalf of the government and people of Canada to King George VI.

The Prime Minister had drafted the message about midnight Friday night but was not completely satisfied with its phrasing. Although the working period of the past few weeks had caused the Prime Minister to lose much sleep, he nevertheless left his bed before dawn on the day of the accession to make sure the message was thoroughly satisfactory.

ENGLISH HISTORY BOOKS ARE SELLING RAPIDLY

Detroit, Dec. 14 (AP)—Public interest over Edward VIII's abdication was held responsible today for some book business in a commodity heretofore laggard.

It blew the dust off many a forgotten volume of English history buried on the shelves of Edward T. Meehan's second-hand bookstore and buyers took them all away.

"My, yes," said Meehan, "I should say they did come in here. At first I thought that fuss over in Europe had something to do with it. After a while I was sure of it.

"I couldn't sell you an English history now. There's none left."

Vatican City, Dec. 14 (AP)—Attendants of Pope Pius XI said today the circulatory stagnation, which has caused the Holy Father intense pain in moving his legs, has been complicated by a grave varicose condition in the left leg.

Well informed sources said, while the 79-year-old Pontiff's condition was not such as to eliminate "every apprehension," these apprehensions were not immediate threats.

The Pope's doctors said his tenacious will had been his "best remedy" during the past few days.

The Holy Father read himself to deep last night with a book written by Marshals Emilio de Bono and Pietro Badoglio on the European War.

He sat up for several hours yesterday transacting affairs of the Church, with Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State.

Vatican authorities disclosed the Catholic Church, was developing a new anti-Communist activity throughout the world through bishops, priests and the Catholic Association, Catholic Action.

The Pope attacked the spread of Communism daily in the Spanish Civil War in an address to refugees from Spain, Sunday.

An official said the Pope himself was "the dictator of the world" in the Catholic fight against Communism and a plan for a special organization to fight Communism had been broached.

The organization, it has been suggested, would be based on the Pro Deo committees, composed of Catholic scholars, in Austria and Germany, which already exist in many European countries.

APRON ON FIRE WOMAN IS TORCH

Emma Hurst, 76, Fatally Burned in Leamington, Ontario

Leamington, Ont., Dec. 14.—(CP) —Turned into a human torch when her apron caught fire from a blazing kitchen stove Sunday, Emma Hurst, 76, was fatally burned about the head, face and body. She died today in the hospital here, 33 miles southeast of Windsor.

Miss Hurst lived alone in a portion of a log big, red brick house for some years. A nephew, Vivian Coulson, Windsor, visited her regularly three times a week.

Kenneth Kendrick, merchant, and Mrs. Frances Corwin, neighbor, played leading roles in the tragic story.

Smoke billowing from the open front door attracted Kendrick's attention as he passed on the street. He took one look at the charred figure on the floor, grabbed a chair just inside the door, and ran for Mrs. Turnbull, whose home is nearby.

Mrs. Cowan, a constant companion of Miss Hurst since last summer, notified Kendrick.

Mrs. Kendrick hurried and rushed across the street to the house.

Mrs. Cowan found Miss Hurst into bed and following emergency treatment by Dr. Turnbull, she was taken to the hospital.

She retained consciousness for some time, suffering keenly, and then lapsed into a coma from which she never fully recovered.

There are two sisters in London, and another in Windsor.

Throne Will Endure Says Rev. E.J. Springett

Toronto, Dec. 14.—The recent crisis in Britain was but another act in the "unfolding of the world's greatest drama" in the climax of the return of Christ to earth, according to Rev. E. J. Springett, Seventh-day Adventist minister of the British-Israel World Federation, who addressed a large audience here yesterday in Parkdale Theatre.

"No one is entitled to pass the danger of the throne, he believes whether he occupies the throne or not," declared the speaker. "The human instrument may fall, but God's affair will go on and may be thankful He is a kind and merciful God."

The British throne still stands—of the foundation of righteousness on which it was established, he remarked and will stand forever to carry out its purpose when it was lawfully God's covenant with David, namely, to provide a throne from which Christ would rule when He returns to carry on God's kingdom on earth.

New Monarch's Pledge Is Read to Both Houses On Forty-First Birthday

Ex-King's Apartment Empty And Bare at St. James's Palace

TWO THRONES IN LORDS

Reference in King's Message Points to "Personal Distress"

London, Dec. 14—(AP)—King George VI pledged to parliament today "my constant endeavor with God's help and supported by my dear wife, to uphold the honor of the realm and promote the happiness of the people."

His message was read, first to the House of Lords, while Edward Duke of Windsor, sought relaxation in the guarded grounds of an Austrian castle and as a private citizen, arranged to consult a Vienna specialist for an old ear ailment.

Into the new King's promise he injected the phrase, "at a moment of great personal distress." It was George VI's 41st birthday but in the grave aftermath of empire crisis created by his brother's love for a twice-married American he waived all anniversary ceremony.

Call From Archbishop.

His action was in keeping with a call from the Archbishop of Canterbury for a nation concentrated anew to Christian sobriety.

Lord Halifax read the monarch's message to the House of Lords. It was transmitted to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin for delivery to the House of Commons where members continued to take their individual oaths of allegiance to the king.

William Gallacher, Communist member of the House of Commons, and several others refused to take the oath of allegiance to the new king.

The dissenters substituted an "affirmation of good faith" but declined to swear the regular oath on a Bible.

MRS. W. SIMPSON CLOSELY GUARDED

Threatening Letters Sent To Her Villa At Cannes

Cannes, France, Dec. 14 (AP)—New guards watched over Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson today as the result of threatening letters about the former American wife of the king of England.

A detective from the Surete Nationale was designated as a special guard for the American woman on all trips from the Villa Lou Viei, her haven since she left London.

The police French guards on duty at the estate will remain but detectives from Scotland Yard, London, and Paris, Canada, are here, have been ordered home.

A new chauffeur also was engaged to assist the detective in guarding Mrs. Simpson on trips around home. He replaced George Ledbrook, royal chauffeur, who was ordered to return to London.

Not 'Worried By Letters.

Members of the household said they were not worried by the "crank letters" which they regarded as a matural consequence of the stirring days which gave Mrs. Simpson, the Duke of Windsor, give up his throne because of his love for Mrs. Simpson.

After a week-end indoors reading and writing letters, Mrs. Simpson hoped soon to resume her customary active life, latest word from the Villa said. If the weather improves, she hopes to play some golf.

As far as could be ascertained, there had been no word from Edward since he reached Austria last night.

All evidence indicated Mrs. Simpson was settling down for months in the villa until after Christmas in accordance with her original plans.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Chicago, Dec. 14 (CP)—Santa will visit the slums of the heavy world in Chicago on Christmas Eve.

W. Y. Young, Manager of the Anti-Cruelty Society, said employment relief will be extended to undernourished horses in poorer sections of the city. In them will be given carrots, bran, crushed corn and oats.

Perry, N.Y., Dec. 14 (CP)—Francis Shannon, plus five workers hung his oil-soaked pants on a radiator when he went to bed. A few hours later he was awakened by an explosion. The pants had blown up and the latters were in flames.

Shannon put his pants out and went back to sleep.

Wausau, Ind., Dec. 14 (CP) The police report of an accident in which an automobile driven by Thomas Thomas of Springfield, O., hit a truck read:

Washington, Dec. 14 (CP)—An attempt to grow turkeys and chickens was called a failure today by United States Agriculture Department experts.

Artificial methods were used to hatch poultry eggs. Baby chicks and turkey hens, best only a few of the eggs were fertile. Those died during incubation.

Budapest, Dec. 14 (CP)—Alexander Mayger, an Attorney, and Count Waldemar Sztaray settled a dispute over argument with a bloody duel yesterday.

They fought 11 rounds with heavy cavalry sabres and both were seriously wounded.

At the end of the duel they said they were reconciled.

Galt, Ont., Dec. 14 (CP)—A little know form of art, the painting of Bellini by the accomplishment of 2-Old artist Edward Lord. A sample of his work, 14 by 20 inches, depicting the early life of Jeanne D'Arc, is on display in Bellini Building. This is a story she and character, the Bellini derives its name from a Japanese word meaning wax painting.

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 14 (CP)—Bobbie dancer Sally Rand told a skylight spectator here what she thought of him—in most uncomplimentary terms.

Santa Advances Christmas For Two Tots Likely to Die

Kansas and Omaha Hospitals Put on Marvelous Christmas Trees

CHILDREN CELEBRATE

Kansas City, Dec. 14 (AP)—Santa Claus set his calendar ahead today for two little sufferers from what doctors say are incurable diseases—just to make sure death doesn't overtake them before they enjoy their first ecstatic tastes of Christmas.

Charles Mendenhall, five, in a Kansas City hospital, and Johnny Hernandez, three, in an Omaha hospital, revelled in new-found thrills, unaware their beds may be empty when Santa makes his regular rounds.

Nurses learned recently that neither child—both from poor families—ever had heard of Christmas, or else had forgotten about it.

So Omaha today, Johnny smiled through his pain, gazing at a glittering Christmas tree, unwrapping marvelous toys. He does not know he has cancer of the bone, that doctors predict he has to die before Christmas.

At Mercy Hospital here, Charles pedalled around his room as fast as his weakened little legs would permit on a new tricycle, never dreaming doctors had expected him to die a month ago. He has hydrocephalus, a disease that gradually covers the brain with harmful water.

When the blisters spread far enough death ensues.

CIGARETTE BUTT CAUSE OF DAMAGE

It was found out in the post mortem, which followed that the cigarette butt had not been completely extinguished when it was slipped in to an overcoat pocket alongside some celluloid Christmas tree trimmers that had been purchased shortly before he entered a second Front Street clothing store on Saturday evening.

But, one side of his overcoat erupted in flames, there was brisk activity on the part of a local resident to impress the garment before serious burns were suffered. Bringing the coal to the floor of the store, while nearby shoppers sustained for an extra few local resident calmly slapped out the smoulder ing fire, which ruined the almost new overcoat.

NORMAN GARBUTT ELECTED PRESIDENT

Norman Garbutt was elected president of the Belleville Kinsmen's Club for the coming year at a general meeting of the 1937 directorate. Other officers elected were: Immediate Past President, Jack Mitchell; Secretary, Robert Graydon; Treasurer, Lewis Hepburn; Sergeant-at-Arms, Chris Directors, Orm Wade Butler, Cleo Codling and Raymond Arnott.

CORRECTION

There will be no meeting at Bethel Hall this evening as announced in Saturday's paper.

Fir Trees Taken is Farmer's Complaint

Persons were not only stealing Christmas trees from the woods but stripping the fir trees on the property," Mr. Jordan, 2nd concession of Thurlow, stated at the Belleville Police today, Mr. Jordan stated he had apprehended three mature aged men in the act of cutting down fir trees, presumably for Christmas decoration purposes from his property over the week-end.

"Annually I set aside from 40 to 50 evergreen trees destroyed on our property and some of the tree stolen," said Mr. Jordan. "All ten trees mentioned by me were cut down only my property and have quite large trees in order to merely get a good Christmas tree from the top branches. The lower

POLICEMAN PLAYS ROLE OF SANTA

Tells Children Santa Claus Will be Around if They Are Good

A new role for police constables was revealed in Belleville recently by Sergeant Arthur Booth, when he answered a telephone call at the police station to be greeted with the startling statement—"Hello, is that you Santa Claus"?

"Sir, my 12 years with the local police force, I guess it was the first time I was really stumped for an answer, the reason being the voice at the other end of the line was undoubted like that of an aged lady. While on your beat or sitting in the police station a police officer can expect some funny requests, but being Santa Claus is really out of my line, I believe," added Sergeant Booth as he related the entire story.

Shortly after 4.30 p.m. one evening last week the telephone at the police station jingled—Sergeant Booth answered the phone and was surprised to be greeted with, "Is that you Santa Claus?". Before he could reply other voices, pronounced as that of children, were heard shouting into the telephone at the other end of the wire. It could but find out where the call originated. I could really tell from the voices, that the children really desire most. Judging from their early voices and their requests, Santa Claus could not bring each one of them a pet dog and I think he would be most acceptable as that seemed to be the unanimous request voiced by the boys and girls alike, although it was hard to distinguish what was really wanted, a set of the latest skates, sled, etc. Sergeant Booth stated that he related the entire story.

"Judging from the situation at the time of the telephone call, Sergeant Booth is of the opinion a children's party was in progress and the hostess-mother was only trying to create peace and quietness in the home. "I've heard of policemen being called to help in many incidents, but this is the first time the role of Santa Claus is a new one on me," concluded Sergeant Booth.

RELIGIOUS PLAY ACTED IN CHURCH

Story of Rich Young Ruler Presented by Young People

Telling a colorful story in the life of the "rich young ruler", the Young People's Society of Bridge Street United Church played in the church before at least six hundred persons on Sunday evening in the religious drama, "For He Had Great Possessions". It was the story of the great renunciation of Christ for the sake of possessions, though it closed with a story of the resurrection related by an eye witness who saw Jesus in the streets of Jerusalem after that event and showed the household of the rich ruler as definitely following Christ after their young son had been struck down dead by a horse's foot as he was crossing the road before the ruler's home at Jericho. The story or plot was very interesting.

The platform of the church was used as stage and a red curtain shut off the organ and choir loft. The stage itself was provided with such settings as would aid in transforming the platform in the mind's eye into the interior of the home of the rich young ruler; Pictures of white banded with red and other rich appointments created the setting of the drama. Two other scenes were apparent suited to the time and scene, the one at first giving a clear impression of the manners and customs of the people of the early part of the Christian history of the Christian era.

Taking part in the were S. George as Benazel, the young ruler; Mary Lockhart as Azubah, the ruler's wife; Geore Woodcock as their son Ezer; Miss Evelyn Reddick as Hadassah; Miss Lena Reddick as Miriam; Mrs. Taylor Franklin as Leah; Mr. Geore Martin as Jonathan; Mr. Taylor Franklin as Zacchius; Mr. R. P. Dackins as Ezekiel Bathaneses; and Mr. Elmer Dixon as Nason.

Actors developed their roles with considerable ability and lent a sense of reality to the play. The scenes and parts called for fine character-drawing and opportunities to intensify emotion, which were taken by players.

In spite of the natural handicaps of lighting in the church, the close of scenes was effective, the dimming of the stage, lighting of the stage was good and in one of the scenes a vesper light was effectively used.

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

The regular meeting of Tabernacle W.M.S. was held on Thursday afternoon, December 10, with a good attendance, the president Mrs. Gerow presided. The meeting opened with hymn 'Come all ye Faithful" followed with prayer by Mrs. Gerow and repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison.

As a tribute to the late Mrs. E. R. Sharpe a decade of the faithful worker in Tabernacle church work the meeting stood in memory of her "Safe in the Arms of Jesus".

Mrs. Emerson read the Scripture Lesson from 2nd Chapter of Luke and offered prayer. "Silent Night" was sung, followed by the Treasurer's and Secretary's report. A Christmas poem was read by Mrs. Adams also a reading by Mrs. Burgess entitled, "Christmas Star appeared". A duet by Mrs. Emerson and Miss Gladys Emerson, pianied by Mrs. Windover was much enjoyed. The election of officers followed with Mrs. Shorey conducting the election. The following are the new officers for 1937:

President, Mrs. Gerow; 1st Vice President, Mrs. Emerson; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. Palmer; 3rd Vice President, Mrs. Prenoti; Recording Secretary, Mrs. G. F. Johnson; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. G. F. Johnson; Treasurer, Mrs. Shorey; Christian Stewardship, Mrs. T. G. Bell; Associate Members, Mrs. Martin; Guppy Secretaries, Mrs. Spreckett and Mrs. Caverly; Literature Secretary, Mrs. Hogle; Stranger's Secretary, Mrs. Sharpe; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. Windover; Press Secretary, Mrs. Isard; Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Hogle; Press Secretary, Mrs. Naylor; Superintendent Mission Circle, Mrs. G. RHEUMATISM SPREAD TO ALL HER JOINTS

Obtained Relief by Using Kruschen Salts

Here is a sad story of suffering, but it has a happy ending. This lady was afflicted by severe rheumatism which spread to all her joints. But Kruschen brought relief as she describes below:—

"I feel it my duty to tell you how Kruschen Salts brought me relief from a severe attack of rheumatism. I had pains in my legs and knees, later spreading to every joint in my body. This lasted over a period of 13 weeks. I was then ordered to bed with acute rheumatism. I was recommended to try Kruschen and before finishing the second bottle I was able to perform my normal duties."—(Mrs.) I.D.

Rheumatic conditions are frequently due to excesses of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients in these Salts assist Nature to flush the dissolved uric acid through the natural channels.

FINDS OWL'S GRIP LIKE LION'S HOLD

J. W. Coulter Tells of Epic Battle With Huge Bird

Battling with an owl which has a wing spread of five feet and head with ears as large as that of a cat, J. W. Coulter, R.R. No. 1, Bellrock, Hastings, Prince Edward, still bears the marks of the huge talons of the creature, which seized both his hands and arms as he was putting on three thicknesses of clothing and penetrating the left arm above the wrist. Mr. Coulter told the following story of the encounter:

"I had bought several ducks. The ducks were kept in a pen and I found one duck and two hens dead one morning in the hen house. There was no sign of any animal or bird about. But next morning I went in and found a hen dead on the floor. It flew up to a perch. I picked it down with a pole and seized it by the neck.

The bird turned and its claws sprang into my wrist. It was like the grip of a lion.

"I held on until my arms got tired and yet I could not loosen the grip.

"I went across the road to my neighbor for help and the bird was still gripping me by the wrist. He and I put a rope around the owl's neck and I took hold of two the rope for all that was in us could not free my hand let go. But still it held on to me.

"Finally I managed to wrench my wrist free and took the bird home. Three hours later another neighbor called and I made a strap about the bird's neck, and tied it. Now I have him tied in the neck and pet him. He is very quiet."

Dominion Wide Cheese Exhibit Is Proposed

Heartened by the success of the recent cheese exhibit held in this city in conjunction with the ninth annual "convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association which attracted visitors from throughout Ontario, members of the Association at their year end banquet, in the Hotel Quinte, Belleville, unanimously decided at a meeting of the executive held on Saturday afternoon.

The matter of the location for the exhibit, which is expected to be either Kingston or Belleville was left with the Exhibition Committee consisting of Messrs. James H. Cook and Walter Morrow, president of the Belleville Cheese Board.

Larger prize lists and cash awards which will reach a heavy total, will guarantee the largest number of exhibits ever gathered in Canada.

At the meeting the complete list of officers who will represent the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association during the coming year was named as follows:

Officers Named

Honorary Presidents—James L. Irwin, Belleville; Chas. Vice-President, Garnet Bain, Lakeside; Hon-Secretary-Treasurer, Dairy Instructor Representative, J. A. Campbell, Kemptville; Executive, Messrs. Prompted by his inability to attend the meeting owing to pressure of business, the resignation from office tendered by W. R. Henry, auditors, Marcius Rose, was named director at the annual convention and entered at the police station until in fit condition to be permitted his liberty, it was stated today.

Today being the birthday of His Majesty King George VI, no session of police court was held, the proceedings being postponed two hours. A large number of transients passed through the city over the week-end, however, when twenty-five were given escorting charters at the police station. Of this number nine put in an appearance on Saturday night and 16 last evening. The latter number was the largest collection of prisoners to seek shelter in the cell block this month.

Constable Patrolman Sam Ervine of this city, returned home over the week-end after receiving a special course in highway patrol at Toronto and Western Ontario Under the regulations of the Highway Department a number of the veteran highway patrolmen have been added to the Provincial Headquarters, Toronto, where they receive a five day special instruction tuition last week. The entire detachment was moved in a body to a point near Windsor, Ont., where their studies were continued over the week-end, also upon the travelled highway. Local highways are the scene of major motor accidents over the week-end, Traffic Officer Hefferon reported at noon. The latter officer is replacing Motorcycle Patrolman Ervine, who is enjoying a week's holidays.

Former King Edward's apartments at St. James's Palace today were being occupied as Prince of Wales and also for guests of the royal household bare and empty today.

Probably they will be occupied eventually by the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester.

Col. Peter Legh, Edward's equery for the last seventeen years, now with him in his exile, has also removed this week into another portion of St. James's Palace, formerly occupied by the late Lord Stamfordham, a member of the Ponsonby family, and others in the entourage of several generations.

"His Majesty Could Not For Royalty.

The action of the king in conferring the title Duke of Windsor upon his brother makes another title reserved for royal use. Even if the dukedom became extinct, no new peer save a person of royal blood could assume such a title. For a secondary title, though, the Marquises of Bute already is Earl of Windsor. The Earl of Plymouth holds that a Viscountcy and Barony of Windsor and his eldest son is known as Viscount Windsor.

POLICE BLOTTER

"The quietest week-end of the season", was reported by local police today, after glancing over the police blotter of the week-end. Only one arrest was necessary in the city since last Friday, that being when a local citizen was apprehended in an alleged intoxicated condition and detained at the police station until in fit condition to be permitted his liberty, it was stated today.

Today being the birthday of His Majesty King George VI, no session of police court was held, the proceedings being postponed two hours. Terrier Pup Puts End To Hockey Game

Skates flashed in the dim light of the street lamps, while frenzied voices rang out in exuberant tones as the diminutive "Canadien" darted about in the elusive pack. The shrill sharp barks of a terrier pup added to the din as the game progressed and a small crowd of interested spectators stood on the Lower Bridge at an early hour last evening watching the first outdoor "shinny" match of the season.

Upwards of twenty four boys took part in the rubber-chasing game and many humorous incidents added to the enjoyment of the spectators as the game started and flashed under the bridge. Then an unforseen incident ended the game there and then, spectators laughed and took long. Looks of surprise then chagrin flashed over the faces of the small hockeyists. For the "Canadien" got the puck or pebble, suddenly took a "paw" in the game, Dashing after the puck he seized it in his mouth and chased by a band of excited hockey players disappeared in the darkness at the opposite side of the river.

FARADAY TWP. TO PAY RATES WITH CORDWOOD

County Council Accepts Wood at $7.00 Per Cord

MOTIONS LAID OVER

Warden West And Reeve James Moore Recipient of Gifts

Marking what is probably one of the most unique events in the municipal history of the County, the Hastings County Council went on record at the final sitting of the December session held in Shire Hall on Saturday last to accept three carloads of hard maple cordwood from the Township of Faraday in lieu of the regular cash payment of county rates.

That the county help township in financial difficulties by accepting offers of this nature seemed to be the consensus of opinion in the split discussion following the suggestion made by Reeve A. M. Bridgeford of Faraday, "It is the only alternative," he said. "We have no money with which to pay these rates and if the Council will accept this proposition, it will be of help to both this body and our Township. The motion carried with the wood to be laid down in Belleville at a rate of $7 per cord.

Occupying practically the whole of the afternoon session was a heated discussion which followed the introduction of a question of remuneration for the County Solicitor for his duties performed in the Appeal for the Equalization of Municipal Assessment now in session in the County Buildings. Argument anent the advisability of paying the solicitor a flat rate or a daily remuneration while so occupied, ensued until well after the luncheon hour, with the members of the Council finally leaving the matter to be decided by the Equalization Committee of the Council.

Pay Second Instalment

Other important matters decided at the afternoon session were the authorization of the second payment of the county Highways Assessment amounting to $67,500.00. This was formerly reported as being the first payment on the total assessment, or a sum amounting in the vicinity of $178,000 plus interest.

Another spirited debate took place when the question of expenses of experts hired by the county to value property in certain parts of the county for the information of the Equalization Appeal now under way.

"This bill seems to be high," declared the Reeve of Frankford, especially in view of the fact that the evidence gathered by these men has not been used at the Appeal sessions, and we do not know whether it would be of assistance to the county or the appellants.

Warden West threw oil on the troubled argumentative waters, when he informed Council that this matter had already been straightened out with equalization officials and the services of the valuators discontinued to save further expense to the county. The motion to pay the bill was carried.

The fight of the northern municipalities to have the roads in that part of the county kept clear during the winter months was continued at the Saturday session. "Last year," declared Dr. Limb, Reeve of Bancroft, "we were closed in for a period of six months, which created a hard situation for a lot of us. We want the road kept open and if the province won't do it, then the county must." Reeve McWhirter, Deputy-Reeve Lumb stated that it was very important that these roads be kept open. A motion to the effect that the Roads Committee be empowered to purchase machinery to keep the roads open wall referred to the Ways and Means Committee after argument that the County would not lose any money in view of the fact that the province purchased machinery in the Spring.

Motions Laid Over

Motions to the effect that the Treasurer's bond be increased from $10,000 to $15,000, and a readjustment of the salary of Dr. W. C. Morgan, gaol physician, were laid over until the January session.

The new bylaws passed their three readings and were officially adopted by the Council. These were the appointment of Messrs. Arthur Whitnack and Walter Brett of Madoc, Ontario, to the County Council at a salary of $75 each, and the assumption by the County of a road three and one quarter miles long and extending from Price's Corners to Foxboro Railroad station, in Dungannon Township.

Three applications were considered by the Council for the position of Auditors. These came from the two appointees and Mr. Gerald Carscallen. The latter was declared ineligible for the position when it was announced that he already held a municipal position in the County.

Adjourned on Saturday

Council adjourned for the current year shortly before five o'clock on Saturday evening following a brief address by the retiring Warden, William West, in which he expressed his appreciation of the co-operation given him by his associates.

Featuring the final sitting of the body was the presentation of splendid gifts to Warden West and to James Moore, Reeve of Elzevir and

A social meeting took place in St. Mark's Church on Thursday evening of last week, when Mr. Ernest R. Post and Miss Iva Lillian Mills both of Belleville were united in marriage by Canon W. G. Swayne.

Mrs. H. While and Robert of Oshawa, spent the past week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fenn.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ingram of Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Todd of Bewdley were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Todd.

On Tuesday evening, Wellman's Young People's Society entertained a goodly number of the members of Burnbrae Guild. Mrs. Omar Deacon, president of Wellman's Y.P.S. opened with devotionals and Rev. J. E. Beckel offered prayer. She graciously welcomed the visitors and the President Miss Marion Walker, suitably replied and opened her programme with a hymn. Messrs. Carl Linn and Merrel Linn sang a duet with guitar accompaniment. Miss Violet Allinson delighted with a piano solo. An interesting Christmas selection was recited by Mrs. George Ingram and Miss Laura Third rendered a vocal solo. Mrs. W. E. MacMillan and Miss Fern Weatherill contributed a piano duet and Mr. Charles Carter gave a humorous recitation. Miss Helen Murray gave a piano solo. Mrs. George Creighead and Mrs. Bill Craighead contributed a duet. Mr. Howard Hutcheon sang a vocal solo with guitar accompaniment and Miss Florence Hay read an appropriate selection. The topic on the subject "Time" was ably taken by Miss Marion Walker and brought out many points of interest. Robert and Donald Mallwes delighted with a duet, and Miss Ferne Weatherill sang a solo. Mr. Charlie Carter staged an interesting game and a contest.

A delicious lunch was served at the close by the Wellman's Young People's and all enjoyed together a social half-hour. Votes of thanks were reciprocated by both societies. The National Anthem closed the service.

The members of Wellman's Woman's Association held a very successful sale of home cooking and a bazaar in Mr. Duffin's Furniture store on Saturday afternoon and evening and the ladies realized over seventeen dollars.

The pupils of the Allan School under the direction of their teacher, Miss Muriel Milligan are now enjoying hot lunches at the noon hour. This is a step in the right direction and one for which those responsible should be highly commended.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Johnson and daughter accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Elliott attended the church at Carmel on Sunday afternoon where the Township Executive each gave short addresses on the different departments of Sunday School work. They were also privileged to hear the Rev. Manson Doyle guest speaker, who gave a very fine address on Young People's Work.

Miss Leslie Johnson spent a few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Johnson of Wallbridge, and attended the Cheese Maker's Banquet in Stirling on Wednesday evening.

Miss Ruby Wannamaker, of Stirling, spent Sunday with Miss Helen Farrell.

Mr. Ellis Smith spent a few days last week with friends at Bayside.

Mr. Will Linn of Bayside, spent a couple of days this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wesse.

The December meeting of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Alfred Mallwes, Thursday afternoon with an attendance of thirty-five. The president, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, presided and opened with a call to worship and a hymn was sung, after which Scripture reading the accompaniment. All repeated the Lord's prayer in unison. The roll call answered with a Christmas verse or thought was responded to by 26 members.

The Treasurer reported $11.86 for November. A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring supply secretary, Mrs. Blake Haley and to Mrs. Kenneth Weaver for her assistance and to Mrs. John Holmes for her kindness in the use of the packsale.

The Christmas programme prepared by Miss Frances McGowan was then given, consisting with an instrumental, guitar and harmonica by Miss Faye Andrews, Mrs. Morris Mallwes and Mrs. Stewart Sager as found in the second of Matthew and Luke. Helmut gave a splendid talk on "Christmas" particularly interesting. Mrs. Blake Haley and

THE NEW REIGN

In churches everywhere throughout the Empire on Sunday were offered special prayers for His Majesty King George, VI on his accession to the Throne, prayers for the former King Edward and prayers of thanksgiving that the Empire has passed through the recent crisis with renewed strength. The week end was like a breath of morn after the difficulties of the past weeks.

The coming of the new King, the Sabbath rest, and today the King's birthday were symbols of that new reign on which the vast Empire places so great hope. These three days marked the close of that situation which has developed in the past few months and especially the past two weeks. Now on the throne is one, who, every subject has confidence, will be a constitutional ruler whose reign will go down in history. The quiet and calm after the period of stress and stress found fitting symbol in the Sunday rest.

The Motherland and the Empire are stronger than ever. Parliament as it has developed through the ages has found its way supreme in that recent crisis, such a crisis as never faced before. The nation as represented by Parliament and the people and Lords represented by Premier Baldwin were supreme. That is inherent in the modern kingship.

But this does not mean that, within the kingship, the greatest symbol and task and honor ever given into the hand of a man on this earth, there is not vast opportunity for the ruler. The constitutional monarch who rules with Parliament can render a service to the Empire with unbounded possibilities. With King George the people are confident. The majesty of Parliament and the people is absolutely essential as the British system has developed.

The world has in the British situation seen how Britain solves her difficulties. It knows that Britain does not see how a ruler can call his private life his own. As once again the proverb is true that man cannot live to himself alone.

The satisfactory feature is that it was, according to Mr. Baldwin, the former King Edward who suggested to Mr. Baldwin that Parliament pass legislation making it possible for him to carry out his personal wishes and that the ex-King from the beginning stated that if such could not be he was "ready to go."

Whether the whole story has been told is difficult to say, but in the main it no doubt places the proper emphasis. Bernard Shaw says that ex-King Edward was not anxious to keep the office which meant limitations upon him and the opinion has been expressed by Hugh Walpole, novelist, that he was temperamentally unsuited for the office. He was a nervous person and his outspokenness, that he really did not like rule and that he should have waived his right to the throne during the lifetime of his father at the time of King George V's death such would have been impossible."

It has been said that former King Edward would have as king bowed his own personal wishes to Parliament. Had he done so, the Empire would have made an idol of him in his sacrifice for what the People thought the Empire's and his own welfare. At any rate the sad story is that the brilliant promise and hope in him, the democratic instincts with which he was imbued should not have reached full fruition after a long and happy reign. The Empire, it is felt, expects of a ruler that he should surrender to the wishes of the people.

In King George Sixth as said before, hopes run high. He is a man who has conquered difficulties, he has shown a steadiness and poise throughout his life, which much resemble those qualities of his father the late King George Fifth. All his subjects prophesy that his reign will go down in history as one of marked service and success.

The Empire's loyalty is reaffirmed to the monarch in no uncertain language and sentiments.

His birthday today gives that opportunity for meditation upon the days ahead of the new king emperor and for a revival of the spirit of devotion to the Empire by all the king's subjects.

Man is greater than a world—than a system of worlds; there is more mystery in the union of soul with body than in the creation of a universe.—Henry Giles.

Blessings we enjoy daily, and for the most of them, because they be so common, men forget to pay their praises. But let us not, because it is a sacrifice so pleasing to Him, who still protects us, and gives us flowers, and showers and meat and content.—Izaak Walton.

THE SNOWFLAKE'S SONG

Here I come! Here I come!
Fun and sport I'm bringing,
And I hear from far and near Joyous welcome ringing.
Here I come, a mighty band,
Millions follow after,
Oh, I am so glad to hear
Children's happy laughter!

When I make the old earth white,
Every nook and corner!
Won't I send a shining host
Sailing down upon her!
Quick! put on your boots and hats,
Skates and mittens, hurry!
Don't you see that I am in Something of a flurry?

Let the merry sport begin,
Shouting, sliding, ringing!
Early up and down the hill
Send your glad notes ringing.
Here I come! Here I come!
All my army leading,
To your welcome, warm and true,
Gaily, gladly speeding.

During a concert she was singing in Fargo, North Dakota, Margery Maxwell, Chicago opera singer, suddenly stopped, waved frantically at the orchestra conductor, and scuttled off the stage gasping, "I've swallowed a fly." Rid of the intruder, she returned to the stage and picked up where she had left off. At the conclusion of the number, the audience thundered its applause.

Life Insurance In Action

In the past year the London Life paid 3,343 death claims. The foresight of these policyholders meant provision for their dependents.

During the same period, 4,644 London Life living policyholders received the full amount of their policies. These matured endowments provided immediate cash for themselves and families.

Payments to living policyholders amounted to more then twice as much as death claims.

It is a great comfort to know that you may enjoy a carefree old age and that your dependents will be cared for should you not live to provide for them.

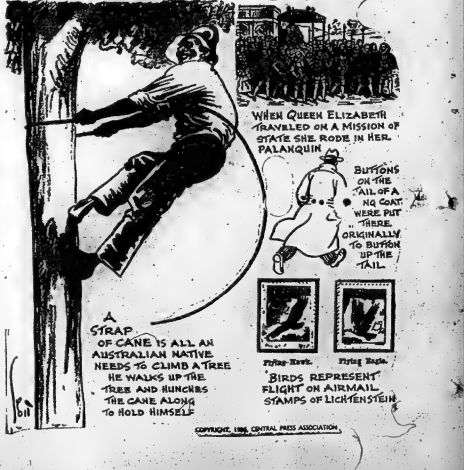
Little Benny's Note Book

Sattiday afternoon me and pop was taking a wark, and pop said, For Peet sake do my eyes deceive me or do I spy the ungainly figure of Lem Mawkins? Yes deah me my eyes are too truithful, it's Lem Mawkins the champion borrower of the civilized world. The last time I saw him was about 15 years ago, at which time he ran trye to form and borrowed 7 dollers, and now instead of repaying it he'll try to borrow 5 more or sila my eyes have deceered me after all, he said.

Whil just then the man stopped going past and held out his hand for pop to shake, saying, Well mock me down with 3 feathers, it's Foxey himself, in person and no picture except the good old picture of health.

Now wait a minnit, dont tell me, pop said. Yes, by golies, now I remember the name. It's Lem Mawkins, he said, and the man said, I should hope to sias a pig you would remember, after all the nites he had together at Peets bowling alleys. Do you ever see any of the old bunch? Pals Riley, he was a card, wasn't he, what's ever become of Pals Riley? he said.

I remember who you mean, he was the chap who used to call you Borrowing Bert, pop said. I always thawt it was a silly name. I mean as far as the Bert goes. Your name's not Bert, after all. Now if he'd called you Lend Me Lenny, it would of seemed more appropriate, he said, and Mr. Mawkins said, I must say I dont remember any such nickname. How about old Reds Park, do you ever see old Reds Park? he said.



Oh, you mean old Reds Park, the fite-wad who threattened to bring legal action against you if you didn't return the dollar and 50 cents he loaned you one time when you cawt him with a couple of drinks under his belt, pop said. The old scrawl, he said, and Mr. Mawkins said, I guess you've got your memory mixed up with your imagination, well so long, I'll see you again some time.

Sounding as if he really meant he hoped not, and he kept on going looking like somebody'd left a were instead of better.

OTTAWA HONORS KING'S BIRTHDAY

Governor General And Premier King Send Congratulations

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—(CP)— The nation today celebrated the 41st birthday anniversary of George VI as its third king in less than a year. Government offices, security and commodity exchanges were closed.

In this Capital and those of the Provinces Royal salutes of 21 guns boomed two days after they had sounded in honor of His Majesty's Accession on Saturday.

Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General, and Prime Minister Mackenzie King cabled messages of congratulation to the new monarch. Lord Tweedsmuir on behalf of himself and the Canadian People, Mr. King on behalf of himself and the Government.

Saturday the Governor General and the Prime Minister had sent messages to the King declaring their loyalty. Mr. Mackenzie King and Justice Minister Lapointe had read the proclamation announcing His Majesty's accession.

Lord Tweedsmuir, the Premier, Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff and all cabinet members except two also took the Oath of Allegiance to the King. The exceptions were Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Pensions and National Health, recovering from an illness, and Hon. Raoul Dandurand, Minister without Portfolio, who is in Europe.

SAFE CRACKERS BLAMED FOR JOB

Robbery of Safe Nets Those Responsible Over $1,400

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 14.—(CP) —Police, continuing investigation today into the week-end robbery of the Western Dairy Company's safe, blamed expert crackmen for the job which netted $1,400 in cash and cheques.

Using only a sledgehammer and a long, well-tempered steel punch, the yeggmen apparently had little difficulty opening the huge strongbox. The robbery is believed to have occurred sometime Saturday night, but the broken safe was not discovered until employees reported for work yesterday.

The safe did appeared to have been knocked off with one blow. Then, police believe, the punch was driven through the lock, shearing its tumblers. The entire lock combination was released from inside the safe door.

Half the loot was in cash while all cheques were made out to the company.

Says American Movies Influence English Youth

George de Warfaz, Regional Drama Adjudicator, Comments on Films

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 14 (CP)—American motion pictures are threatening to change the character of the rising generation in England, suggests George de Warfaz, who leaves here today for Canada, Monday, 30, in the office of Regional Adjudicator in the Dominion Drama Festival.

In the legitimate theatre Mr. de Warfaz has served as actor, producer and dramatist. Currently he is trying his hand in the production of a movie. The film is called "the Fella" and stars Paul Robeson. But while cinema work is interesting to Mr. de Warfaz, he does not find it an unmixed blessing. In too many instances, he says, the film actor appears to play down to the supposed juvenile mentality of the people who pay their money at the box office.

"The American film, I would almost venture to say," says the new Regional Adjudicator, "is thereby doing to change the character of the rising generation in England. You find even the errand boys adopting a nasal twang and using American slang."

It will be Mr. de Warfaz's first visit to North America, when he arrives there early next year. He will be looking over the Dominion's offerings in one act drama at Saint John, New Brunswick.

From there he will proceed westward toward Vancouver and possibly to Victoria, judging between 250 and 300 competitive dramatic productions in the preliminaries of Canada's theatre festival. Following that he will be judge of the literary and speech classes at the Quebec Music Festival early in April.

Mr. de Warfaz is director of a dramatic society in South Kensington. The society has 50 acting members and generally puts on three shows a year. One of the most interesting pieces of the society's work, in production of plays by unknown writers.

Mr. de Warfaz was producer of the first play in which Raymond Massey appeared in London. Raymond Massey is a member of the well-known Canadian family and a brother of Hon. Vincent Massey, Dominion High Commissioner in London. The play in which Massey, now regarded as a leading player, made his London debut was called "The Pilgrim Kings." Miss Lilian Massey produced a show called "The Wrong Road" on the air from Canadian Northwest, and in that she de Warfaz was a member of the cast. It was for that show that de Warfaz got his Garrick.

Two things the new Regional Adjudicator would like to see revived: the old-time curtain-raiser and the old-time actor-manager. Sir George Alexander and Sir Charles Wyndham, he says, curtain raiser would be a blessing because plays were then all three acts longer than they used to be and the little one-acter to start the evening off would give the audience time for evening's entertainment, also give budding dramatists a chance to display their stuff.

Weddings

WOODBECK—BAKER

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Stirling, on Saturday afternoon, December 5th, at 4 o'clock when Miss Dorothy, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jason Baker of Rawdon, became the bride of Gilbert Burton Woodbeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woodbeck of Stirling. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. S. McConnell.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, as the choir rendered the hymn, "O Perfect Love That Breathed O'er Eden" with Mrs. (Dr.) A. Alger as organist. The bride looked charming in a floor length powder blue suede satin, fashioned with inset panels of lace, and wore a lace jacket to match, and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of white roses and maiden hair fern.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Murray Mason, sister of the bride, wore a gown of royal blue with black accessories and carried a bouquet of pink roses and maiden hair fern, while little Miss Norma Mason, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl, dressed in mates taffeta and carrying a basket of pink and yellow sweet peas.

The groom was ably assisted by Mr. Murray Mason.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served to the bride and relatives at the home of the groom after which the happy couple left on a motor trip, amid showers of confetti to Port Perry, the bride travelling in a navy blue suit and coat with matching accessories.

The groom's gift to the bride, was a white gold bracelet, to the matron of honor, a bracelet and carring set, to the flower girl, a combination pen and pencil, and to the best man, a leather purse and key case, to the organist, a box of chocolates and to the soloist, a tie clip set.

The bride and groom received many costly and useful gifts showing the esteem in which they were held. On their return they will reside in Stirling.

ROYAL CHRISTMAS CARD D EPICTS GARTER FOUNDING

Friends of the King and Queen of England will this year receive this beautiful Christmas card, depicting the scene which history records as founding of the Order of the Garter. The illustration shows King Edward XII handing the Countess of Salisbury her garter after she had dropped it while he exclaimed, "Honi Soit Qui Mal Y Pense" (Dishonored be he who thinks ill of it.)

Frankford and District

Frankford—The December meeting of the Women's Association of the United Church was held in the Church on Friday afternoon, December 10th.

Mrs. H. Slingerland was in charge of the meeting. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary Mrs., J. M. Dafoe and the Treasurer's report was given by the Treasurer, Mrs. H. Terry. The yearly reports of the various departments of the Association were given. Election of officers followed with Rev. J. F. Laze conducting.

Mrs. de Warfaz was producer of the first play in which Raymond Massey appeared in London. Raymond Massey is a member of the well-known Canadian family and a brother of Hon. Vincent Massey, Dominion High Counsellenor in London. The play in which Massey, now regarded as a leading player, made his London debut was called "The Pilgrim Kings." Miss Lilian Massey produced a show called "The Wrong Road" on the air from Canadian Northwest, and in that de Warfaz was a member of the cast. It was for that show that de Warfaz got his Garrick.

The same officers will guide the Association during the coming year. They are as follows—President, Mrs. H. Slingerland; Vice President, Mrs. H. Bush; Secretary, Mrs. J. M. Dafoe; Treasurer, Mrs. H. Terry; Pianist, Mrs. Gerald Johnson; Representative to the Board, Mrs. H. Slingerland, Auditors—Mrs. D. O. Leavitt and Mrs. H. J. Madill. The meeting closed with the Benediction.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Dec. 14 (Special)—Several persons were badly cut by flying glass, when two cars crashed head on one mile and a half north of here on the Wooler road yesterday afternoon at 4.30 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Miller, Mrs. Lord and Mrs. Emmerser passengers of a car operated by Mrs. Clarke, all of Brighton, were returning from a church gathering and an automobile operated by Mr. L. Flood and carrying his wife and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Flood all of R. R. No. 3, Trenton, were the parties involved. The machine skidded on the ice, went to the wrong side of the road when the drivers became excited, police said. All the injured were treated by Dr. J. W. Farley and were suffering from a severe shaking and cuts.

Will Is Probated

Bills totaling $2561.30 owing to him by 56 patients for medical and surgical treatments were cancelled by the will of Dr. Ira T. Johnson, 443 Pulaski Street, Rochester, New York, appraisal of his estate filed for tax purposes showed recently in Surrogate's Court. A thyroid specialist, Doctor Johnson died last August 4th. His estate was appraised at $133,269.90 net and $146,855.12 gross. Doctor Johnson's unusual bequest to his patients was made known, when his will was probated in September, but the amount involved was not made known until filing of the tax statement by attorney Leo J. Rice. The physician's estate included $5,000 realty, $19,961.80 insurance payable to the estate and $95,315.55 cash in five Rochester banks. The realty consisting of the Pulaski Avenue residence was left to Lake Avenue Baptist Church. Bequests of $500 each went to four charitable institutions. Chief beneficiaries were Thomas J. Johnson, Trenton, Ont., brother, and Mrs. Jennie S. Johnson, Cleveland widow of a deceased brother, $30,000 each; Miss Emma S. Holman, the physician's office nurse and secretary for more than 20 years, $15,015 and Mrs. Alice Rochester, Rochester, $12,025.75. Two nephews and three nieces inherited $7,065.63 each. Carroll O. Barnes, Greece lumberman was executor. Tax proceedings were closed at $2,810.27. The deceased specialist was well known in Trenton, Brighton, Frankford and Belleville, and the surrounding district and spent many leisure hours during his holidays in the summer months at his brother's camp "Sack No Further" on the southern shores of the Bay of Quinte. He was interested in Trenton and came here for that purpose.

Womens Meetings

SALEM W.M.S.

The December meeting of the Salem W.M.S. was held on Tuesday at Mrs. Fred Robinson's, Mrs. Ernest Hagerman presiding and Mrs. J. Hanna read the Scripture Lesson. The minutes and the Treasurer's Report were read and adopted. The group leaders were re-elected for another year.

Mrs. Jay Haight group leader then took charge of the programme and Mrs. William Haight gave a very helpful Temperance reading. Mrs. Jim Sills, Mrs. Leslie MacGregor and Mrs. Ernest Hagerman gave readings. At this time Miss Bernice Robinson favored the ladies with a beautiful instrumental number. This was followed by a reading by Mrs. Dan Reynolds. Hymn 471 was sung and Mrs. Jim Leslie closed the meeting with Prayer.

ZION MISSION BAND

Zion Mission Band met at Maple Leaf School on Friday, December 11th, 1936. The President, Gerald Tummon, was in the chair. Hymn numbers were sung by Lee Ray and the roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture, beginning with the letter "S".

Scripture was read by Gerald Tummon. Jessie Tower was given by Lee Ray, Mary Emerson, Owen Ray, Jean Marshall, Alvin Emerson and Glen Emerson. Miss June Ray favoured with the children with a guitar solo which was much appreciated. The Study Book was given capably by Miss Merle Ray. A beautiful story was given by Floyd Ray, subject being for the Christmas season. Betty Ray took the collection.

The meeting closed with a hymn followed by prayer.

HALLOWAY Y.P.S.

On Monday, November 30th, Halloway Young People held their first meeting to organize for the winter months. Rev. Horton presided over the meeting. Owing to the list of officers—President, Mr. Earl Snider; Vice-President, Mrs. Colin Townsend; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Carter; Treasurer, Mr. Don Rose; Pianist, Mrs. Don Rose; Leader of Devotional, Mrs. Earl Snider; Leader of Missionary, Mrs. Cecil Carter; Leader of Citizenship, Miss Marie Townsend; Leader of Literary and Social, Mrs. Bill Hodkinson and Mr. Cecil Carter; Press Secretary, Mrs. Coleman Townsend.

It was decided to hold the meetings every Wednesday night. The meeting was then closed with prayer by Mr. Horton.

On Wednesday, Dec. 9th the regular weekly meeting of the Y.P.S. was held at the church with an attendance of sixteen members and four visitors. The meeting was opened by the President, Mr. Earl Snider, with the use of Hymn 81 followed by the Lord's Prayer. Scripture lesson was read by Mr. Albert Oadman. Roll Call and minutes of the last meeting were given and collection was received amounting to $1.30. Hymn 285 was then sung followed by a delightful musical selection by Mr. and Mrs. Don Rose, a reading was given by Mrs. Coleman Townsend. Miss Mary Carter gave a solo and Hymn 45 was sung and meeting was closed with Benediction.

ST. ANDREW'S, GILEAD W.M.S.

The December meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. S. Lawrenson on December 10th. The president opened the meeting. The Scripture reading was read with Gladys Yorke as leader, followed by another Christmas reading by members. Mrs. Hubble and Mrs. R. Yorke sang a duet. Mrs. Wilfred Clark gave a reading. Mrs. Belcanquel sang a solo, Verna Graham gave a reading. Mrs. Fred Yorke sang a solo followed by a hymn and Good Cheer Watchword.

Mrs. Lawrenson served a very tasty lunch. Collection of $3.40. Holiday calendars $6.90. Total amount realized this year is $87.50.

The ladies of Gilead held a social evening in aid of the W.M.S. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Belcanquel on December 3rd. A Hallowe'en party and fashioned programme was given consisting of readings, songs, instrumentals, music by the choir. Those taking part in the programme were dressed in old fashioned costumes. An interesting event of the evening was the Hallowe'en Travelling Apron. Each patch contained a contribution in aid of the W.M.S. Mrs. D. Hobkirk won the prize for the neatest patch and received the apron as a prize. The sum of $17.10 was realized from the apron. $10.55 collection making a total of $17.65. Lunch was then served consisting of doughnuts, all kinds of pie and coffee. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Belcanquel for the use of their home. About 12 o'clock everyone departed for their home feeling that a most enjoyable evening had been spent.

The December session, Group 7 of the W.M.S. of the United Church was held on Friday at the home of Mrs. S. H. Connor with an attendance of twenty-two. The meeting opened with a Christmas hymn "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and the Lord's prayer in unison. Mrs. A. S. Allen read an interesting story "Mrs. Morgan's Quarter," A chapter of the Study Book was taken by Mrs. Ardenne, the theme "Jesus in the Village." Mrs. H. Grier sang a Christmas solo "The Birth Morning of a King." A piano solo "Lullaby Jeanne" (Lack) was played by Mrs. Connor.

The status of Group 7 of the W.M.S. was changed and it has now become an evening auxiliary, to be designated in future "The Harold Coon Evening Auxiliary" in honor of Miss Marion Coon, a missionary in Chungking, West China, and a daughter of the late Rev. Chas. H. Coon, a former pastor of Tweed United Church.

President: Miss Isabelle Campbell.

Vice President: Miss Grace Houston.

Rec. Secretary: Miss Elizabeth Stuart B.A.

Cor. Secretary: Miss Myrtle Stark.

Treasurer: Miss Mary Logan.

Pianist: Miss Lois Richardson.

Temperance Secretary: Mrs. M. Ardenne.

Mission Secretary: Miss Florence Blaney.

The programme concluded with "Bark the Herald Angels Sing" and the Benediction. Lunch was served by Mrs. Ed. Way and Mrs. S. H. Connor.

The meeting of officers of the W.A. of Tweed United Church was held on the home of Mrs. Kleinsteiber. Mrs. C. H. Porritt was chosen as president for the ensuing year. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. S. B. McGee, who is relinquishing the office of president. Mrs. McGee aided so capably for two terms, especially during the isolation of the loyal co-operation which she had received from the officers and members.

President: Mrs. C. H. Porritt.

Treasurer: Mrs. C. Kleinsteiber.

Rec. Secretary: Miss C. Meikleiohn.

Pianist: Mrs. S. H. Connor.

Assistant Pianist: Mrs. S. G. Way.

Group Leaders: Mrs. Ed. Way, Mrs. W. E. Tummon, Mrs. F. E. Foster, Mrs. W. L. Ketcheson.

A number of committees were appointed at the January meeting.

The programme consisted of a duet "Infant Holy" Mrs. H. Connor and a duet "There's a Song in the Air" Mrs. Dale and Mrs. Connor. A Christmas reading, Mrs. M. Morrison and a poem Edgar Guest's Rev. Nicholson. Several Christmas hymns were used during the meeting. Miss Lillian Keillor a representative of the Upper Canada Tract Society addressed the W.A. briefly in the interest of the organization.

A pre-nuptial shower was given by Mrs. C. D. Wilson on Friday evening in honor of Miss Evelyn Allen, bride-to-be. A very delightful evening was spent with bridge and monopoly. The prizes were awarded to Mrs. C. M. Reeves and Miss Isabelle Campbell. Miss Allen received a large number of useful gifts, a delightful lunch was served by the hostess.

Carol Hughes and "Steele" Gallagher.

Edmund Lowe and Gloria Stuart are co-starred in "The Girl on the Front Page," the second feature attraction at the same program. The Belle World News and Views will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"One Way Passage"

In answer to the demand from countless movie fans, "One Way Passage," the greatest picture ever made by William Powell and Kay Francis will open today at the Capitol theatre.

The strange and hauntingly beautiful scenes of "One Way Passage" take place on the Pacific during the month's voyage from Hong Kong to San Francisco.

"One Way Passage" is the love story of two young people doomed —though in different ways—to but a few weeks of life. Their glimpse of each other and fall hopelessly in love just before the boat puts out to sea—determining decidedly to fill their days with ecstasy.

Joan, beautiful, eager and young, has been sold by her doctor that the least over-exertion may cause her death. Dan is going back to San Francisco in charge of a ruthless detective.

The ship makes but one stop in Honolulu, where Joan disembarks and there they have their one perfect day.

It is not our intention to reveal the amazing misadventures of the day nor the poignant and surprising climax.

It is enough to say that "One Way Passage" is a great drama. Comedy relief is furnished by a fake countess and a pickpocket who are fellow passengers—parts played by Aline MacMahon and Frank McHugh. Others in the supporting cast are Warren Hymer, Frederick Burton, Douglas Gerrard and Herbert Mundin.

Added Shorts

Another all-star Our Gang Comedy "A Lad-an-a Lassie," also a radio novelty with the 3 Diamond Brothers and Phil Regan, "The Voice of Experience" and a travelogue "Civilization of Africa."

"Auction Night"

Every Friday nite at 9 p.m. we are going to present something new and novel to Belleville. An auction sale of articles that you not sells for cash. He may offer to buy to many shirt off his back. There is no lucky numbers or lottery. Come and enjoy the laughs. Watch for further announcements.

Green Bay Packers Win Football Title

Walking after going around in what closely resembled a trance during the first quarter, the passers-by-commuter from the Midwest marched into the title yesterday by a 21-6 victory over Boston Redskins, champions of the East.

A crowd of 29,545 paid $37,471 to see the game. That gave each of the Green Bays about $250 for the championship and severed the Redskins about $175 apiece.

WHERE IS DIED IN AIR-LINER CRASH

This scene near Croydon airport shows the smashed remains of the royal Dutch airliner that crashed carrying to death 15 of the occupants. Over the victims was draped de la Cierva, Spanish inventor of the autogyro, who had devoted his life to the perfection of "crash-proof" aviation. In the background can be seen the remains of the empty house into which the aeroplane plowed. One wing is seen hanging on a fence. The picture was radioed to America.

THIS IS WHAT DEFEATED POLITICIANS DO

Out of the headlines and off the air since Franklin D. Roosevelt's smashing triumph in the United States, presidential elections are his most bitter opponents. Father Charles E. Coughlin of Royal Oak, Mich. champion and founder of the National Union party, and Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican candidate. Both are vacationing in the southland, the country generally their retreats to bring these pictures. "Craig's Wife"

Rosalind Russell and John Boles as Mr. and Mrs. Walter Craig will be seen in the picturization of George Kelly's famous Pulitzer prize-winning play, "Craig's Wife" which opens at the Belle tomorrow, for two days, matinee daily.

The stars are supported in their roles by an imposing cast including Billie Burke, Jane Darwell, Dorothy Wilson, Alma Kruger, Thomas Mitchell, Raymond Allen and Raymond Walburn. Dorothy Armer, foremost woman director in Hollywood, guided the film production through its production, based on the screen play by Mary McCall.

"Craig's Wife", as drama lovers will recall, is the story of a remarkable wife who subjugated her every emotion to attain what she considered the ideal home. The story in every woman's life...complete infatuation.

Miss Russell essays her first important role since she starred in "Craig's Wife" having thus far gained her greatest fame as a charming, subtle comedienne.

What was the crime of Craig's Wife? Nothing! was the caption that town talked about her! Within her own home she was a prisoner—more strangely about her unholy love!

George, Kelly's Pulitzer prize-honored play "Craig's Wife," now reaches the screen as a human, throbbing revelation of a woman who lived for the strangest love ever conceived.

This dynamic drama...baring the life of a woman bound...in a screen triumph no wife or sweetheart dare miss. It tells why Craig's wife was the talk of the town! Why Craig's wife drove her pin from her home! Why Craig's wife always kept her door locked!

Youthful Rangers Score Two In Overtime to Defeat Leafs; Amerks Taken in Rough Game

Interest in N.H.L. Continues With Large Crowd Present

HAINSWORTH PLAYS

Replaces Wilf Cude in Nets For The Canadiens

(By A. R. Pulford, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Some slight slackening of interest in the National Hockey League might have been expected as a result of Jesse Ellis Trophy Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks failing to win games, but it seems the reverse is true. Chicago and Toronto opened at home and their favorites beaten quite as resignedly as they attended to see them win.

Combine that with increased attendances at Montreal due to the Canadiens' fine showing and it all adds up to growing interest. Yesterday, about 45,500 persons saw four games over the week-end. Visits of Toronto and New York report attendance figures are up far above last year's.

Chicago fans certainly are the most loyal fans in the world. There were 12,500 of them present last night to see their team get set once again. Detroit did it 2-1 in time to replace the American Division leadership the New York Rangers had taken over Saturday by beating Boston 3-2.

Contests in Outcome

Both, these contests went overtime and there also was extra time played at Montreal Wednesday night when Canadiens and Maroons staged a rough 2-2 tie before 9,000 persons, the same number as saw the Rangers-Toronto contest. There was 13,000 in Madison Square Garden last night to see Boston Bruins whip Americans 4-2.

The winning goal at Chicago was just another bit of hard luck for the Hawks, who have won only one game in 12. Marty Barry's shot struck Mike Karakas' pads and bounced 30 feet in the air. As it fell Joe Cooper banged it home. Next March attempted to bat it into bed in a knock both of them succeeded into the net.

The other two goals came within 19 seconds in the second period. Rusty Hertie Lewis took Larry Aurie's pass to him Saturday night 10 seconds later March shot from the blue line and Paul Thompson deftly cleanly.

Cecil Dillon of Rangers was the hero of the game at Toronto. Scoring three goals and assisting in another, Dillon came from behind three times to tie the score and Rangers made it 4-3 in the extra overtime. Their perfect passing attacks gave them a good edge over the Leafs.

Drillon Scores Two

Gordon Drillon scored two of the Toronto goals and Sweeney Schriner got the other while Lynn Patrick and Butch Keeling took care of the Rangers' scoring. Lorne Chabot, Ranger goalkeeper, given his outright release by Manager Lester Patrick, appeared in the nets for his old team Canadiens, in the one against Maroons. He substituted for Wilf Cude with Jules Boschman injured shoulder in the game with Detroit Thursday.

The Habitants seemed to be on their way to victory in the first period, when Toe Blake and Babe Siebert scored but before that session was over Earl Robertson of Maroons into the picture and Dave Trottier sent the game into overtime with his third goal of the night.

The game was a real old Canadien-Maroons affair with plenty of penalties. In the second period Paul Haynes and Yip Radley picked up majors for fighting and Lionel Conacher was handed a 10-minute misconduct penalty for protesting a minor.

Game Rough Affair

The Boston-American game was also a rough affair with nine penalties for two misconduct penalties and 10 minutes Milton Schmidt of the Bruins got one of the misconducts for fighting with Mickey Ackerman in the third period and the other went to Art Jackson because of the taunts he argued with officials.

Ray Getliffe won the game with less than four minutes to play, when he broke the 3-3 deadlock on a passing play with Bill Cowley and Bill Sands.

Goals by Ned Beattie, in the first period, and by Bun Cook and Nels Stewart in the second seemed to put the game on ice for the Bruins but Amerks fought back gamely.

Sweeney Schriner put going on the scoring summary late in the second and Wiseman counted once in the third to prepare the way for Getliffe's game-winning goal.

ART JACKSON IS A SMART PLAYER

Considered to be Best Minor League Player in Business

(By The Canadian Press)

In the eyes of Toronto Maple Leaf experts Young Art Jackson may not be National Hockey League timber but there's no doubt he's one of the best minor leaguers in the business. Shipped down the river by Leafs twice this season, Jackson, centre ice man, has been Syracuse Stars in the International Association.

The former St. Michael's College star, with three of five Syracuse goals at the week-end as his total, chalked up a pair of ties to keep Stars undefeated in front of the league's Western Division. He bagged one goal Saturday night as Stars held the bolstered Cleveland Indians to a 3-3 tie and scored twice in the team deadlocked with Philadelphia Ramblers 3-3 Sunday.

Jackson's goals were the last two Puzie and Art Lesieur scored too but Syracuse was outplayed most of the game. Jackson's performance was a credit to Leafs' scouting staff.

Springfield Indians, pace-setters in the Eastern Group, had a successful week-end, gaining three points of a possible four. After blanking Pittsburgh 2-0 Saturday, they invaded New Haven Sunday to hold Eagles to a 1-1 tie. Benny Grant's Springfield net-minding was the feature of both Springfield stands.

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press

Neil Colville, star rookie of New York Rangers, was the lone member of the National Hockey League's big seven to get more than one point over the weekend but he remained in fifth place in the scoring race. He let each posted a goal or assist. Colville accounted for both on an 11-point total, three behind the Larry Aurie of Detroit Red Wings.

FOUR TEAMS HAVE PICK OF ROOKIES

Cleveland Has The Standout Player in Hurler, Bob Feller

(By Scotty Reston, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—Cleveland Indians, Detroit Tigers, St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs picked up the best of this year's Major League prospects, an Associated Press poll of Major League Managers indicated today.

Standout of the lot, of course, was Bob Feller, whose graduation to Cleveland is the talk of baseball keeping without his having played for a single league club save the memories of considerable excitement and worry at the recent baseball meetings.

Aside from him there's no single standout player but the managers list the following as outstanding Rookies:

Cleveland: Pitcher Charlie Fichtenberg, Buffalo and International League with 17 victories, 2 defeats; Tony Rensvich, outfielder from New Orleans via Montreal; batted .346 in 157 games for New Orleans.

Cardinals: Catcher Arnold "Mickey" Owen, Columbus, hit .336 in 135 games; and was picked as one of the finest receivers seen in the league in years; Infielder Ira Smith, Houston, batted .313 in Texas League.

The energetic Cincinnati Club and the personal scouting system of Manager Bill McKechnie of Boston brought in some promising youngsters.

The Reds obtained two outstanding boys from the Durham, N.C., Club of the Piedmont League, infielder Frank McCormick and pitcher John Vandermeer. McCormick batted .331 and Vandermeer won 19 and lost only 6.

George Hainsworth Is 'Welcomed Home' By Habitant Team

Montreal, Dec. 14—(CP)— Old George Hainsworth, combed out of the National Hockey League only a few weeks ago, came back Saturday night with the team he backed on its great triumphs. There's every possibility he'll be around at the end of the season.

Hainsworth led Montreal Canadiens on to the ice against Toronto Maple Leafs and was surprised, then Maroon and Canadien supporters showed up and accorded a welcome home to the little fellow from Kitchener, Ont.

Manager Leo Dandurand, Hainsworth stalled to the Canadien net. Twenty minutes later, after 2-2 tie, the consensus of opinion was that he did do in the big league for a little while yet.

It was in the tri-color sweater of the flying Frenchmen, that Hainsworth played for six years of the seven he has been with the N.H.L. In that time the Habitants won two Stanley Cups and Hainsworth scored 22 shutouts, a one season record hardly approached since.

But the trail of the little guy who checks, kicks and spravels at pucks with supreme confidence appar ently petered out a month ago, when Canadiens suddenly decided the youthful Walter Brodu, and not Hainsworth, would be their goalkeeper.

And that time Hainsworth asked for "just one more season" in hockey's biggest show. And apparently he got it. Not only in a relief role, for Wilf Cude will be out for a week or two. When he comes back, reconverted from an injured shoulder Hainsworth probably will be kept for protection against other injuries to the regular Canadien goaltender.

No one, outside of the Canadien club circle, knew of Cude's injury. The first Hainsworth knew of it was Friday night, when Chaddock telegraphed him to rush here. An all-day train ride, an hour's rest and Hainsworth again was in action.

He might even see Stanley Cup play once more. Those flying Frenchmen are flying at present at the top of the leagues Canadian section.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Did you know the only time Madison Square Garden, when it was headed by Tex Rickard, took a financial "beating" was on June 5th, 1926, when Gene Tunney made his final ring appearance as champion against Tom Heeney. The gross receipts were only $891,014. Tunney was guaranteed $525,000 and Heeney $100,000—regardless. From the gross of $891,014 had to be deducted the sale and federal tax of $161,146.90, ball park rental of 60 000, incidental expenses amounting to some $60,000. Rickard, admitted a loss of "around $100,000" —his first real setback as a promoter. The Garden, under the leadership of Wm. E. Carey, lost at least $60,000 when it promoted the Max Schmeling-William (Young) Stribling bout at Cleveland on July 3rd, 1931, however. "The gross receipts that day were only $349,419 and the net $263,340. Now the guesses arise what will the returns Schmeling-Louis bout gross the people? Schmeling-Louis bout gross the people? Schmeling-Louis bout crown from Braddock, and when.

When the Central Ontario Secondary School Association met to adopt new playing rules for sports activities some time ago that regulation adopted unanimously some of the regulations already in force in the W.O.S.S.A. were E.O.S.S.A.—namely— "no student playing hockey for his school in the O.S.S.A. may participate in hockey in other hockey club in the town or city he attends during the period of school term." With the B.C.I. and V.S. Albert College, St. Michaels and the O.S.D. all entered in the O.S.S.A. in both senior and junior classifications, it simply means that the Belleville junior O.H.A. club will be deprived of the services of these students, who elect to play with the school team. In other words it simply defies them to be "double decked, in one season". Of course the O.H.A. does not solely with the public he can elect to play with his home town in the O.H.A. circles, but if he elects to play interschastic hockey, that player cannot play O.H.A. hockey for the time being. Suspension bars him from further competition with his school team.

Personally we believe this new rule to be rather a selfish one, but interscholastic officials feel no doubt the player can do justice to two different playing clubs in two organizations and also retain his academic standing. Of course to play with the school team, which will in all probability be the case, the student must attain a certain standing in his academic course. If this standard is not kept up the player is not permitted to compete in the school sport activities. On the other hand, however, if the player is participating with the school team there is no governing of his school activities outside of playing and after all the paramount or chief principle of any school is primarily the scholastic and not athletic activities. In order to keep control of both the public and academic and athletic activities the O.S.S.A. adopted the one player-one team rule from the rules of the W.O.S.S.A., where this rule has been working out for a number of years.

As we understand it however, any student attending St. Michael's or Belleville Collegiate is free to play hockey with whatever club he desires he chooses, but once that decision is made the player-student remains with that club throughout the current season. In other words if a student at the B.C.I. decides he would rather play junior O. H. A. hockey this season than play interscholastic hockey all well and good, but he cannot play with the school team once he participates with the O.H.A. club. What effect this will have upon the future of Junior O.H.A. team in Belleville is hard to determine. Last season the B.C.I. and V.S. senior interscholastic hockey team was composed of two provincial finals and some might players were developed at the local seat of learning.

Also last winter there was a splendid four teamed senior interscholastic league organized in Belleville. The class of hockey played was encouraging and at that time it was believed Belleville would not be wanting for future junior O.H.A. material. With the new rule in force one team a season rule in effect, however, it remains to be seen which club the individual player will line-up with, his school team or the city O.H.A. club of which he naturally follows that some of the senior interscholastic players last season have either graduated or have discontinued their studies at either St. Mikes or the B.C.I. and these players would be available for playing purposes with the city O.H.A. club. The new C. O. S. S. A. interscholastic hockey rule will be watched with interest.

S. E. "Sandy" Burrows, convener of O.H.A. groups No. 3 in the junior and intermediate series, announced today the group meetings would be held in Belleville tomorrow or Wednesday if possible. Mr. Burrows has notified the Peterboro, R.C.A.F., Trenton, Belleville and Tweed clubs he expects to be in Toronto the latter part of the week to confer with the executive of the O.H.A. and "Bigsins the various clubs composing the two local groups to convene and draft their respective schedules before he goes to the Queen City.

"Kicked upstairs" is about what George Hainsworth enjoyed when he received his walking ticket from the Toronto Maple Leafs. On Saturday night Hainsworth returned to his first love, the Montreal Canadiens, and was instrumental in helping the Frenchmen in a 2 all tie against the Maroons. Hainsworth is far from finished as a goalie and is now playing with the N.H.L. leaders, while the luckless Leafs are floundering in the cellar. The Rangers, Detroit and Boston are grouped around the s.N.H.L. over the week end. Rangers downed the Leafs 5 to 3 in Toronto, Boston bang it on the Americans, 4 to 2 last night, while Jack Adams' Red Wings shot out a last minute 2 to 1 victory over the Blackhawks in the Windy City.

Sarnia, the city of champions when it comes to football, annexed their second consecutive Interscholastic O.R.F.U. title on Saturday, when the "Tunnel Town" squad defeated Toronto Weslevan 6 to 0. Taking into consideration the Sarnia Juvenile team won the Canadian Rugby Union senior title and then the intermediate honors, it speaks rather highly of the Sarnia boys' skill at the game in that community. No wonder the Imperial Oil refinery has a large, grid stars, with minor clubs that annually win championships and providing a grist for the mill.

The verbal war between Max Schmeling and the Braddock-Rosenbloom champion will commence over the week end when Braddock signed the dotted line in New York for the world's heavyweight title next June. Braddock was persuaded to sign the contracts by which to time-up, but must forego any bouts with the Bronx Beau, Joe Louis. As a matter of fact Braddock must meet Louis and both must defend the crown next fall regardless.

REBOUNDS

Trenton, December 14.—(Special) —A ruling penalizing deliberate fouls was enforced by the Trenton and District hockey executive at a meeting last Friday night and since has received tremendous comment. The ruling says, that a player deliberately fouling another cannot and must spend five minutes in the penalty box. Mr. Hockey Fans asks how is a referee going to know if a trip or on illegal body check is intentional or not and if so should a player be put off the ice for it? Further he will be merely penalized and therefore cautious games will be played, and what is duller than watching a cautious game. The above ruling will cause considerable argument before the season is closed and it is likely that league officials will propose an amendment.

The penalty shot, authorized in the professional ranks was proposed, but the league executive voted it out. The proposer claimed the games would be made cleaner if the penalty shot was enforced and would think twice before tripping or throwing his stick at an incoming forward with the puck or shot at the goal was the alternative. The league executives issued a negative answer maintaining the penalty shot was not included in the O.H.A. rules.

A manager without a hockey team is like a man without a country and this applies to Harry Smith, who in the past has managed hockey and softball entries with the greatest enthusiasm. Looking back one sees Mr. Smith coaching Trenton's Le Brash's Imperials, the team, that defeated Belleville's best commercial club and annexed the trophy. Also the celebrated Whittall Cans that won the-Trenton and District honours two years ago, was under Mr. Smith's tutorship. He was a fighter from the drop of the hat and his hectic uprisings will never be forgotten by opponents. As yet Mr. Smith's services have not been solicited and he is unlikely to be seen in action this year.

For the first time this season hockey in Trenton and the surrounding district has been given a brighter outlook by the announcement that teams provide in the Trenton and District Hockey League. Secretary Mr. Harry M. Moore, editor of the Courier has decided to take in the league's helm and through his workings the league executive promises a real kind of contest everyone likes to see. Owing to many players leaving the district we were forced to resign his position and recently Mr. O. Alves was selected to fill the vacancy. He is also an able and sport-minded leader and we feel sure he will be equal to the task to write many paragraphs in Trenton's sport columns. Mr. Alves has a heart is in the game and one attending a fixture can see him watching each play with the great est interest.

Hockey should be given children at an early age the same as we give that make the sports fans of tomorrow. Proposal of a "Scooter Club" was a worthy one. Every school child under the age of 16 will be entitled to the same for the sum of ten cents. A section will be placed at the rear of the local rink for the y ungsters and the club members will have organized their centre. Several of the ideas that "Red" Foster of Toronto, exercised material. With the new year plans attempted and if at all possible a number of new ones will be tried out.

Hat's Corners under the management of Percy Hyatt, entered a squad in the Trenton and District League last Friday night. Whether the total strike affect all teams must enter the league by Jan. 1st is unknown as yet. Local officials have been expecting representatives from Belleville, Picton for the August, and rumors had it that an aggregation from the south end of the city would enter.

Outlook from a gate receipt standpoint looks good for the hockey league this winter. Manager of the H.C.A.F., entry said that their team would be backed with supporters galore. At contests the sport team figured in last season, drew large crowds and a good showing. With the Air Force's strong increase of younger members this year prospects for bigger crowds are brighter.

HOW JOAN LOVED THRU

by

ANNE FORESTER

HUGH PLEADS HIS CASE

CHAPTER FIVE

Hugh had taken Joan into his arms now . . . was holding her tightly. His words beat somewhat meaningiessly against her agitation. Then she was suddenly clearing him. She was alert—painfully alert.

"I love you and I, dearest. No one need know. My work here is nearly finished. I could join you there in a couple of days."

Joan's body had stiffened in his arms. The tears were drying on her face.

Hugh's words tumbled out in a hot stream. . . . a cozy little place of our own. Joan. I know just the apartment. And after all it will be more of a real marriage than many, darling. It's nobody's business but our own. You're of age——"

Hugh stopped: the girl was struggling in his arms. "That you could say that to me—to me! And I thought you loved me! Oh, what a fool I am——"

"Joan—Joan, dearest—you don't understand——"

"I do! That's the terrible part! That's what you mean! I mean—I'm starting you must listen!" Hugh was fighting to hold the girl in his arms. His face, darkened, intense, was close to hers in the darkness. "Joan, for Joan, I love you. Can't you see ever give you up now that I've found you? . . . You must listen! I'll try to give you everything you want, darling, and some day I'll be free. Able to marry you——"

"No—no—Oh, please——"

The man held him, his pleading voice, were draining Joan of strength. . . . If she only dared to stay! . . . to sink in the warm comfort of his love and protection. The very thought was dangerous . . . she was yielding, being drawn into Hugh's arms. She was conscious of his one dragged, dimly aware of what she should do but unable to obey the dictates of her own brain. Her lips moved. Her voice came as a weak whisper, breathed against his cheek. "It would be—a sin!"

"Not a sin! We love each other so, sweetheart." Hugh's voice thrilled her through. "It would be the same as married darling, more than the farce I now have to play out to the world. She—Thelma! Joan Ormond who made such a fool of herself over a married man."

She writhed in humiliation. And how about herself—how could she stand the long empty days . . . the monotonous life of the town? How could she endure the company to Fourth-of-July parades, and Saturday night dances at the Country Hall after the sweet wild ecstasy of rushing moonlight rides in Hugh's car?

Joan choked and dropped the girl's arms. She pushed Hugh from her hands. In the last few minutes she had lived a lifetime. She looked back on this night of pain through a vista of years and tears. One thing was plain; it was impossible to go on living in Dorcyville.

The girl's aimless steps quickened, spurred by definite purpose. She almost running to the outskirts of town where the through trains stopped to take on water at the tank. Not for worlds would she have gone to the lighted station in the centre of town where she knew all the clerks and they would see tomorrow of having seen Joan Ormond running away from home.

Joan had money in her purse. Money she had been saving to buy that brown velvet dress in the Dorcyville emporium. It would go for her train fare.

Cement pavements became rickety wooden sidewalks on the outskirts of town, became in turn a dirt road running between hayfields pale in the starlight. The watertank bulked black against the grey starlit sky.

A lilti, gasp of thankfulness escaped Joan's lips. She crouched to the gloom under the tank, dropped to the grit and taking off the pail brushed back the hair clinging to her hot face. The shrilling silence stole around her like a dream. Monotonous drip—drip of water came from the pipe overhead. A frog croaked by the ditch till formed to the sporadic chirp of crickets went stirring softly through the dried grass of the field across which the trees rose their tall over charred tree trunks. As a lad Joan had known here many times with the others hunting berries in season. They would eat their sandwiches in the grateful shade of the watertank and catch its drips in their cupped hands.

How strange! Joan cried sharply away from the past. Memory no inkling had come of this heartbreaking night when she knew she was running away. She knew a frightened marvel at life which could be so unexpected, shocking one out of the accustomed as a tangent.

A train whistle in the distance, a long string of lights curved out of the cut up near Sawyer's Cutch. The rails began to sing, the glare of the lights grew and brightened and brighter along the track.

The train was thundering down on her, shaking the ground— it wasn't going to stop—yes, it was—a burst of steam, the hissing of the air brakes, white patches of faces in the cab. It was still a great panting beast, eagerly drinking water from the tank. A brakeman appeared on the steps of the Pullman to move her, swung her aboard by the wrists. Her fingers clutched after her. Under Joan's feet came the train's jolting start as she braced herself in the doorway of the Pullman, looking down the vista of green curtains swaying faded out of the room into a dark background. Joan continued to stand, hand clasped under her chin in an old childish gesture of fright, her eyes unnaturally large and dark, slowly drinking in the room.

THE OGRE OF FEAR

CHAPTER EIGHT

Joan unpacked her grip and hung her dresses in the stuffy closet. How limp and forlorn, how dejected! Her hands lingered over the orchis georgette. She had made it for the fourth of July dance. It had been Hugh's favorite; even Elmer Parcher had flushed a dark red, and grown tongue-tied when she wore it.

Instead of relieving the ugliness of the room, the sight of Joan's familiar things seemed to accentuate it—her silver toilet articles on the blotched bureau, the rose-colored robe on the lumpy couch, her mother's picture in a silver frame looking down from above the stained mantel.

Joan lidded herself preparing to look for work. Her image loosed back from the stained mirror, pale as a gold-tipped arrow, sweetly-cool, grey eyes, slightly defiant, between their long lashes—no one would guess at the secret fear in her heart.

That fear grew, spread over her heart, as the day wore on and her courage, dimming the gallant youthful beauty of her.

The sign of a big advertising agency was sufficient to prick Joan's dreams of a career in commercial artist. With no training how could she hope to compete with the glances of the slick, smooth finish of professional work. Drawing had been a game, a fad. She had indulged it. Her choice of work was narrowed with the day to the handful of offices had no place for a girl who knew no shorthand. She could only type indifferently. The offices got meaner, the pay smaller, but still there was no opening.

Chill crept over the city with the night. It made Joan shiver. She had no touch Joan where she stood in the centre of her dingy room beneath the cheap electric globe of electric lights.

The crushed shade over the window socked in and out with the draft. Somewhere in the house a baby cried . . . such a thin dispirited wail! A board creaked in the hall as though a heavy body lay. The night was furtive—hideous. That this same blanket could hold those fragrant, star-filled nights of Dorcyville! That this same room . . . and love. . . .

The rest of the week told the same story only now there was nothing desperate in Joan's search. Her small store of money in the secret vanished but it was not this alone which was breaking her spirit. Somehow, without realizing it, she suffered acutely from the dismal house, where the dingy hallway pressed about her each night as she lay her pride-pad on the lumpy couch, where each morning she took a sense of leaden defeat with her as she went trailing into a Sargasso Sea of decay, which would hold her in its grip, and become colorless and hopeless. Was this to be Joan's life? Was Dorcyville to be Joan's scarring golden finger and left burned out—discarded by the many "Many" country?

The climax came on a day when Joan had answered a boy's advertisement which led her in a shabby little office in a furtive building. He reminded her of the section-hands who worked on the railroad at home, a swarthy, indeterminate nationality which, Dorcyville vaguely spoke of as foreigners.

His rambling, evasive talk at first bewildered the girl, but in the end her she realized he was making stealthy love to her. There was no sense, no brief but unpleasant, then she found herself racing down the sadly impressed hall of the building—flying down the stairs to the street.

Among the crowds it was dreamlike, ridiculous, like the melodramatic goings which happen in cheap films. Joan told herself. But it had stopped her confidence and it had left her feeling smirched.

Joan wandered up a hill and leaned on a fence edging a vacant lot, looking over the city which was chilled and bewildered. The deepening twilight prodded her to activity. The long days depleted room—her only refuge—even into her mind. A revulsion of feeling shook her and in its wake came sudden and complete surrender.

Back in the dismal house Joan's house Joan hunted writing paper from her suitcase and began stopping frequently to brush away the tears which would spill on the paper making on her clothes and failing to blister the paper.

"—Darling, darling Hugh!

Come down and get me. I can't stand this. I'll do—what you want—anything. I can't live any longer without you. I'm so unhappy and afraid. Oh, darling, hurry up and come down here to me.

Joan."

SUSPENSE

CHAPTER NINE

Joan ran down the shabby staircase, the letter smuggled under her coat as though it were a guilty thing. When it dropped in the box she gave a little nervous gasp, but her eyes were defiant. One thing she had learned in this terrible week—that little Joan Ormond mattered in the world. Why should not she be happy in her own way? Let the self-righteous world look askance! It would not help her. It did not care how she suffered. Why should it matter to anyone how she stole her happiness?

Joan could not go back to her room; its grimness was depressing—and there was the serene and thankful face of her mother looking down from the silver frame on the wall.

She walked to a district of lowering apartment houses and stood looking up at their myriad squares of lighted windows. So many of them, though Joan watched, seemed them there must be a hiding place for her with Hugh and herself . . . small hiding place . . . a living room—with low lamps, and a place where Hugh could stretch out and listen to her softly playing in the evening. She would give him the home his wife had failed to give him. After all, would not such a union be holy in God's eyes? And her mother—if her mother could see and know—wouldn't she realize that this was more of a true marriage than the one her father would have forced her into with Elmer Parcher?

All Joan's bitterness against Hugh had faded when she wrote the letter and her surrender was complete.

Before she went to sleep that night she took down the picture of her mother and put it gently face downward in her suitcase. There was something about the candid eyes which hurt . . . . .

The next morning Joan washed her hair in the dirty and evil smelling washroom at the end of the hall. As she was drying it, she sang. Her voice rose floating against the walls of the room in a sweet high ecstasy that until now have caused a slow surprise to creep over the plaster hearts. How long since anything young and vivid had sung in this dreary room!

Joan took a long walk in the sunshine, exhilarating, that seemed to look for work today —and her mood lifted like a cloud of white butterflies before her eyes. Now —now—Hugh was getting her letter. Hugh's grey eyes would shine, and his white teeth gleam in a smile of tenderness.

She wondered what Dorcyville was saying of her; somehow it didn't matter now—nothing mattered but Hugh. She had figured, Joan knew, would take her flight, receive the letter; the time it would take him to reach the city, where the hour came she was taut as a wire, blown by her emotions like a leaf in the wind. She had put on the orchid dress and—in that drab room beneath the cosmic power strayed into a prison.

Gallant defiance . . . a sudden shy shame . . . a yearning tenderness . . . they swept her in turn, as she paced the room—noting in the street. Leaden silence outside . . . the footsteps of her own watch . . . . and over her heart a shadow spreading.

She made excuses for him. Her letter had been delayed or he could not get away last night. He had taken this morning's train. He would be here tonight.

All day Joan remained indoors lest by some chance he had driven to the house during the time unexpectedly. The room was close but Joan feared she opened the window for relief the draft rushed in, bringing with it the sounds of passing traffic, setting the dishes on the rickety shelves to clicking against each other. Her joyful expectation had a strained quality. She was conscious of her heart trying to tear out of her mind.

Something had happened, her heart insisted hysterically. Hugh could not get away—he was that. Or he had come to the house. He would be here tomorrow.

Joan's mother had once told in the room but Joan did not dare go out lest she miss Hugh. Long after the last train left there, Joan pressed, moist palm to moist palm, and fed her heart a pain growth. Then suddenly she knew. knew with cruel certainty that Hugh would not come; that he would never come.

Automatically, Joan went out and bought bread in the shabby corner store: a single can of butter, two eggs, half a dozen eggs—patiently waiting for them to be served. She did it matter that there were four people before her? There was nothing to hurry for now.

As Joan returned to the house she heard a voice raised in the dismal panels of red glass, she saw the spatchiest landlady's daughter standing on the stairs. Joan started to pass without speaking. Her lips moved, but no sound issued—she hadn't spoken.

"Your mother's woman was talking . . . her words slowly trickling through to Joan's consciousness.

"She was asking for you. I sent him up to your room. I thought you'd like to be very best because you didn't wear your hat and coat.

Hugh had come! Oh—dear God —he was here.

Joan felt like a streak up the dark stairway, clasping the eggs to her breast in a feverish embrace which took no heed of the breaking crackle. She burst in the door, and a voice burr exclamation.

"Oh—darling—darling!"

Then . . . the sight of stumbling horrible diabolic. Not Hugh! Elmer Parcher—his outstanding ears—big knobbed gloves—two wrists dangling from his cuffs—Elmer Parcher of Dorcyville.

Elmer was walking toward her. He had closed the door behind her. He was taking Joan's limp, cold hands in his.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Girl of the Wood

By Clarissa Mackie

"Of all the impossible situations," she groaned. "To think that my father's daughter, brought up in luxury, should be spending her days in a horrible stuffy office and her nights in this pen—and worst of all, I cannot make my salary meet my expenses and Mrs. Leeds threatens to put me out tomorrow!"

She paused over the words and then the memory of the old home, now closed and later to be torn down, haunted her. "I could go there. No one would know it, and I could come in on the trolley. Lady I will get a better position—"

Deprived of Robin's fascinating love case, all in one year, Robin Page did not know how she had longed for the old place until the next day when she crept into the house and revisited beloved spots.

There as a fireplace with a grate. The house stood apart from the road among thick trees and there would be little danger of discovery, she decided that for the present she would use a kerosene stove and lamp, and when it rained she might have a fire at night in the chimney.

She worked like a beaver all that Sunday. From all over the house she brought many stray articles, thrown from the rooms, things which had been left for the salvman, but which were very precious to this bold pioneer.

Weeks passed by and no one discovered Robin's hiding place. The girl grew rosy and her eyes recovered their old hope and humor. She found another and better position and was saving a little money against the day when the house should be demolished and she would be homeless again. She was determined never to be without a home of some sort in the future, something of her own, and not the stark, forlorn boarding house substitute. Of course there was the danger of momentary discovery of her retreat and hasty eviction, but she had schooled herself to meet that and she was glad that the old Arthurs place near door, whose chimney tops she could not even see through the trees, was also closed, as the owner, Tommy Arthurs, her old playmate, was travelling in India.

"It is good to be home again," declared Tommy Arthurs, on the first night of his arrival from abroad. He had brought his friend, Waldo Kent, out to spend the week-end with him and to decide what repairs the fine mansion needed. "I've got the Page property on my hands," remarked Kent as he lighted a cigarette after dinner. "I thought of tearing it down and putting some bungalows there, but you're next door and it might not suit you to have cottagers."

"I wouldn't," said Tommy gruffly. "I'll buy the old place from you, Wally. I used to know the Page, and we had fine times growing up together—they're all gone now, save pretty Robin, and I don't know where she is—I must hunt her up."

"We might go over and look at the outside of it now. Though I have the keys, we wouldn't be able to see inside," suggested Waldo.

They entered the grounds and explored a little bit in the faint moonlight. Suddenly Waldo clutched his friend's arm. "There's a light up there on the second floor, Tommy. It isn't fire, either."

"Maybe. Want to come along and investigate?"

Presently they were before the door of the room, where a crack of light ran along the sill. A girl's voice was singing cheerily to some one.

"Now, old gray cat, you have had your supper and I've had mine and we are both going to sit down in this comfy chair and read!" Tommy's heart quickened, for he believed he knew who belonged to that delightful voice.

It was Waldo Kent who entered without knocking. He simply put his big shoulder to the door and the ancient lock strained and gave way. So they burst in upon Robin and the cat, who had come to live with her. The frightened girl jumped up and then clutched the back of her chair. Three healthy young men were not lawbreakers and one face was dearly familiar. With a little cry she ran and put her arms around Tommy Arthurs. "Oh, Tommy, Tommy, it's good to see some of the home folks again," she sobbed. Tommy tapped his free hand at the ceasing Waldo. "I'll see you later, Wally. Go and look at the moon, that's a good fellow."

Waldo stayed one hour and when he came back the two who had been reunited had only reached the point where Tommy was fitting his mother's engagement ring upon Robin's slim finger.

"We missed each other a lot," explained Tommy, "but we never knew it till just this minute!"

"Is this home for sale?" asked the real estate man.

"Never," cried Tommy and Robin together.

LONSDALE

The community welcome Mr. and Mrs. Howard Haight and son Angus to the village. They have moved in just recently and just before leaving their former residence they gave a party to a large number of friends and acquaintances, who enjoyed the evening immensely and a dainty luncheon was served. Good music and dancing also card playing for any who wished to play. It was the wee small hours of the next morning when the party was broken up with the song on the tongues "For they are Jolly Good Fellows, we are leaving you only for a short time". TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)
Tarzan's keen ears caught the sound of stealthy footsteps. "They come!" he whispered to Nkima. The monkey crept to the doorway and saw the pygmy warriors creeping up to kill their prisoner. "The little men come!" he screamed in terror. Then he fled precipitately.
The puzzled Beletes glimpsed the scurrying Nkima. The white demon has changed himself into a monkey and escaped!" a warrior cried. Nyalwa, who was afraid the captive, seized eagerly upon the suggestion. "Then we can go back. If he has gone, we cannot kill him."
"We should look inside," urged a warrior who was jealous of Nyalwa's leadership. "He may be hiding still! You cannot go into the hut standing still."
While the pygmy warriors argued and worked up courage to slay the captive, Nkima scaled the palisade and raced through the forest. The little monkey was afraid, but his fear was submerged by the excitement of his undertaking. Nkima had a mission to perform.

IMPORTANT APPOINTMENTS TO C.N.R. MANAGEMENT

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The majority of stocks are today selling on a "future" basis and consequently when the price of any security is considered in the light of a purchase, the earnings possibilities over the next year or two should be taken as the basis for estimating its value. Most stocks are today selling too high when considered on a current earnings basis, but ascending market operation depends in large measure on reasonably estimating prospective earnings.

One of the chief essentials in successful market operations is patience. The unlimited trader would like to purchase a stock today and sell it tomorrow at a profit. This develops occasionally, but over a period, such a policy is bound to result in losses, as no one can pick correctly the day to day fluctuations. The acquisition of a stock where the earnings trend is ascending should, in the ordinary course of events, result in profits, but as previously stated patience is a necessary virtue.

The visit of President Roosevelt to South America is expected in some quarters to have constructive effects upon economic conditions, and consequently on the exchange situation, in Brazil and other South American republics. The Argentine is much more closely associated, both economically and financially with Great Britain, hence Brazil may be selected to be the most important beneficiary from any favorable results of the goodwill trip.

Brewing Corp. To Show Earnings of About 50c a Share on Stock

Although the annual report of Brewing Corporation of Canada will not make its appearance until some time in January, the figures given in the latest unaudited quarterly statement give quite an accurate idea of what will be shown. Net profits after all charges including depreciation, but before income taxes, totalled $117,111. In the nine months ended Sept. 31, 1936, as compared with $222,446 the previous year. Deducting estimated income taxes, the balance should be equivalent to about 50 cents a share on Preferred as compared with $1.02 shown the previous year, and definite in 1934, 1933 and 1932.

Indications are that the current rate of dividend on the preferred will be maintained. It will be recalled that in January, 1935, the dividend was reduced from $3.00 to $1.50 per annum, so that arrears now total $2.00 a share.

According to information at hand, results from the quarter ended January 31st show a profit as compared with deficits which have previously been the rule for the period as the winter months are naturally the season of smallest earnings for the brewing company. The company has recently effected savings by reducing the number of operating plants from nine to six.

Royalite's Sterling Pacific No. 1 Well Is Good Producer With Rise of By The Week-End

Small diameter tubing was being installed in Royalite Sterling Pacific No. 3 well on Wednesday in an effort to clear the water standing in the well out from the hole and bring the well into production under natural pressure. Initial flow was expected, would take two days, allowing for the shut-in of the well and oil before the week-end. Only a small amount of the original 1,000 barrels of water initiating bailing indicated a gas pressure, but not sufficient to lift the liquid plug of mud.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK

Of late it has been designated for use as a force to suppress communism in North China.

In Moscow the government press declared Soviet Russia was involved in the revolt in China, and hinted Marshal Chang actually was the tool of "Japanese provocateurs", despite the fact he is descending war clouds in formal letters to the Nanking government.

Soviet Told Leader Alive.

Berlin, Dec. 14 (AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, held by mutinous rebels in North China, is positively alive, his 30-year-old son was informed early tonight.

The military overlord's son was Chiang Wei-Kuo — a student at the University of Berlin.

Edward's Associates Flayed by Archbishop In a Stirring Sermon

London, Dec. 14 (AP)—The head of the Church of England called upon the nation to reconsecrate itself today as the Empire's new monarch took up his duties as king.

The occasion was a remind of his belief in the Christian life, asserted the Archbishop of Canterbury. He referred with sorrow to former King Edward as a man who "disappointed his people so high and abandoned a trust so great."

Today was King George's fortyfirst birthday but by royal command there was no official observance beyond the firing of the customary royal salutes—one round for each year of the monarch's life—in Hyde Park and at the Tower of London.

New King At Work.

The condition of Queen Elizabeth this morning was reported "about the same."

Court officials said her condition was not serious but it was advisable for her to remain indoors a few days. She was not confined to bed.

"Let the pity of it" exclaimed the Archbishop in a Sunday broadcast commending the former king to the care of God.

High Hopes Shattered.

"What pathos nay what tragedy surrounds the central figure of these swiftly moving scenes," he declared, reviewing the eventful days climaxed by the former sovereign's decision to quit his throne because he could not remain ruler and marry the twice-divorced American woman.

"How can we forget the high hopes and the promise of his youth," he continued.

"To the infinite mercy and protecting care of God we commit him now wherever he may be."

"It is strange and sad," added the archbishop, "that for such a man however strongly it was pressed upon him, duty alone should have disappointed hopes so high and abandoned a trust so great.

"From more strange and sad it is that he should have sought his happiness in a marriage inconsistent with the Christian principles of marriage and within a social circle whose standards and ways of life are alien to all the best instincts and traditions of the English people.

Associates Rebuked.

This reference to Edwards associates at home and abroad was the occasion for voiced public rebuke by any British pulpit or platform.

"Let those who belong to this circle know that today they stand rebuked by the judgment of a court which had loved King Edward," he added. "I have shrunk from saying this in public, but I have prayed God for the sake of sincerity and truth to say them."

Two weeks hence, the archbishop disclosed, he again will broadcast, praying that "God will help him to make the nation a somewhat solemn recall to religion."

Hopes For Future.

"We still call ourselves a Christian nation," he declared. "But if this is to be a reality and not a mere phrase, there must be a renewal in our midst of definite and deliberate allegiance to Christ—to His standards of life, to the principles of His kingship."

Concluding, he said:

"So much for the past. And now for the future. The darkness of an anxious time is over. A new morning has dawned. A new reign has begun. George VI is King."

"A king has gone. God bless him, keep him, guide him now and ever."

The Dean of Exeter, Dr. H. W. Carpenter, was outspoken in his Sunday sermon. He said:

"The Church is relieved and happy at the passing of scandal which would have shattered the unity of action, would have poisoned its sacred ease, and would have robbed cities and village of the simple happiness with which they were prepared to greet it."

Members of the House of Commons and the House of Lords continued taking the oath of allegiance to the new monarch, awaiting a message from George VI later in the day.

Canadian Markets closed today—King's Birthday.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—Utilities swarmed over the stock market ticker list for a while today, posting gains of fractions to around a point or more following a Supreme Court ruling in the Duke Power case.

Specialists, however, led the forward march in other proceedings, although a few of the motors, steels, rails, aircrafts, amusements, coppers and farm implements gave a good account of themselves. Selling was encountered at intervals.

It was not overlooked that the United States Supreme Court decision failed to rule on the constitutionality of Tennessee Valley Administration lending to Municipal Power systems. The court merely turned the case to the Lower Court for retrial. Power issue lost some of their spirit later when it was realized the main argument in the case had not been ruled on.

Bonds improved and wheat at Chicago advanced briskly. Mining issues felt better as the price of lead was given another boost. Foreign exchanges moved forward in terms of the United States dollar.

Among Canadian stocks, International Nickel and Hollinger were conspicuous gainers slightly while Dome and Canadian Malartic suffered slight losses. On the Curb, Lake Shore yielded a small fraction. Dominion Bridge, Standard Gas, American Telephone, U.S. Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, Westinghouse, DuPont, Goodyear and Goodrich.

Ontario County Farmer Gets Big Game at Home

Uxbridge Ont., Dec. 14 (CP) — If anyone offered Joseph Wright of Scarboro, Ontario County, a trip to Africa to shoot big game he would probably say "I'll take Uxbridge Township." He has got right at home.

Wright, a blacksmith district farm, Wright took part in a hunt in the Uxbridge Township area, which netted several hunters blazed away when they sighted the animal and, maddened with pain, it dashed into a clearing where Wright stood.

Wright fired once, dropped his gun and ran as the belter charged down on him. The animal, hit, collapsed at the foot of it.

Marmora and District

Marmora.—The monthly meeting of the Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. F. R. Wells. A goodly number was present with Mrs. Gordon Jarvis, president in the chair. The roll call was a gift suggestion, resulting in a shower being held for the Institute Christmas Cheer Fund. A report was given by the Relief Committee concerning a needy family which had been helped by the Branch. Mrs. E. C. Prentice gave an excellent paper on Health. It being a survey of sanitary conditions and regulations since the days of the cavemen. Mrs. H. P. Nayler gave Current Events after which the committee in charge of the program put on a Mock Auction Sale. Mrs. H. Penner won the prize with a song rendered in French. Next came a spelling match with honors going to Mrs. H. P. Nayler. Lunch was then served before adjournment the national anthem was sung.

The weekly card party given by the ladies of the Sacred Heart congregation was held in the Separate School on Thursday evening with a large attendance. Mrs. L. Hughes was winner of the gentlemen's prize and Mrs. H. Brady and Mrs. Mehan tied for the lady's prize. The resulting honors went to Mrs. Brady after the tie was broken. After a delightful luncheon was served by the ladies downstairs the young people commenced dancing.

Nominations for two councillors to complete Marmora Village Council were received on Friday evening by E. G. Prentice as follows: Herbert Smith, proposer, W. Anderson, seconder. W. R. Linn; Ralph H. Neal, proposer, T. R. Warren, seconder. J. Burns.

The clerk announced that if the two nominees qualified they would be acclaimed as completing the council. H. B. Smith, however, has said that he was a newcomer to the village at the election time and could be of service to the village, he would do his best. R. E. Neal said that someone had to offer himself for service and he was willing to cooperate with the others elected for the general good of the village. The meeting which was very brief, adjourned and the two members qualified.

Marmora Council for 1937 will be:

DUKE OF WINDSOR

In London, guards paced back and forth in front of the royal residence of George VI, new ruler of the empire. But there was no royal guard for the duke, now a private citizen. He sought privacy, however, in the location of the grounds. A few police were on duty.

The Austrian press welcomed the king, saying it hoped he would stay there.

The public, more curious than anything, was restrained. It remembered him as a frequent visitor to the country.

Not a Stranger In Austria.

If he becomes an out-and-out "Wienerwald resident," meaning an enthusiastic leather-trousered hunter, hiker and skier, it was certain Austria would make room in their heart.

Official Austria welcomed him as a private individual.

The duke is not a stranger at Kenefield. Each summer during his Dalmatian vacation he was a guest of the Baron whose wife is the former Kathleen Wolg of Philadelphia.

The former monarch found several things in Austria to please him in his favorite sports and the native food. He brought skis for exercise on snow-covered Alps. The Baron's estate has a private golf course but winter sports are more in order.

Records at railroad stations got a few glimpses of the visitor. Curious onlookers peering through the train windows at Innsbruck saw him adjusting his necktie. Ruthful, the former monarch turned aside.

Women littered at the antics of "slippers", the duke's favorite Cairn terrier, when he alighted at Salzburg with the animal under his arm. Unmindful, he walked up and down the platform exercising his pet until the train resumed its journey.

Edward Plays Golf.

The former king began his day at 7 a.m. at the rambling, red roofed castle. The weather was cloudy and cold.

Edward had a light breakfast and played golf with a friend on the private golf course. Then he returned for a "fork breakfast", after which he motored to Vienna for his daily call.

There were twenty gendarmes and detectives on guard at the front gates, and it was estimated 120 others were deployed about the grounds.

Quantities of mail and telegrams were going to and from Kenefield, among them, presumably, a message from the Duke of Windsor to King George VI.

There also were two long distance telephone calls from the castle during the morning.

Livestock

Montreal, Dec. 14.—(CP)—Hogs were higher on the early dealings today on livestock markets while cattle moved slowly and calves showed a little weak. Sheep prices remained steady.

Medium cows sold at $2.75 to $3.25 good $3.50 to $3.75, canners and cutters $1.50 to $2. A few fed calves at $7.50 to $8. Good medium and good heifers $4 to $4.50. Culls ranged from $2.50 to $3.50.

Steers $4.50 to $5.50, dinkers $4.50 to $7, common grades $3.50 to $4.

Good ewes and wethers brought $4.50 to $5.75 with most lambs were sold on a flat basis at $7 to $7.50. Sheep were $2 to $3.50.

Hogs were also up about 25 cents at $8.25 for bacon, fed and watered at country points. Butchers, sows and heavies were $7.75, extra heavies $7.75.

Toronto, Dec. 14—(CP)— Lamb prices moved $1 higher at the opening of the Toronto livestock market today. Trade was generally slow with cattle prices near yesterday's levels. Calves opened steady to firm. The hog and sheep markets were on an even-covered Alps. The Baron's estate has a private golf course but winter sports are more in order.

Records at railroad stations got a few glimpses of the visitor. Curious onlookers peering through the train windows at Innsbruck saw him adjusting his necktie. Ruthful, the former monarch turned aside.

Women littered at the antics of "slippers", the duke's favorite Cairn terrier, when he alighted at Salzburg with the animal under his arm. Unmindful, he walked up and down the platform exercising his pet until the train resumed its journey.

Lambs were $1 cwt. higher at $9 to $9.25 for good ewes and wethers. Several loads of westerns went at this price. Some small lots were as high as $9.50. Other grades moved between $7 to $8.25. Sheep prices were unsettled at the opening but market gone was stronger.

Calves: Good and choice $9 to $10; common and medium $5 to $8.50; grassers $3.50 to $4.

Lambs: Good $9 to $9.50; medium $8 to $8.75; bucks $7 to $8.25; culls $6.50 to $7.

RADIO STATION NOT PIRATING

Court Orders Dismissal of Litigation Brought by Newspaper

Washington, Dec. 14—(AP)— The United State Supreme Court today ordered dismissal of litigation in which the Associated Press sought an injunction to restrain radio station KVOS of Bellingham, Wash., from broadcasting the Press Association's news.

The Associated Press, which filed the original action contended the station was "pirating" news dispatches from the Bellingham Herald. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer and The Seattle Times, all members of the Co-operative Press Association.

John W. Davis, New York Attorney for the Associated Press, contended the news was the property of the Press Association as long as it has commercial value. This was disputed by William H. Pemberton, Olympic, Washington, attorney for the radio station. He asserted his station had a right to broadcast the news as soon as it was published in a newspaper.

Spacious Suite in Castle is Undergoing Redecoration

(By A. W. Stefferud)

(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rosnfeld, Austria, Dec. 15. (AP)—The intensive strain of the past weeks kept former King Edward VIII in bed with a headache today at the Chateau where he began his self-imposed exile. Medicines were obtained hurriedly.

Meanwhile a spacious suite in the Chateau of Baron Eugene de Rothschild, his host, was being redecorated in yellow, blue and gold. An attendant hinted Mrs. Wallis Simpson, for whose love Edward gave up the throne, might soon occupy it.

This correspondent reached the door of the chateau past heavy cordons of detectives, police and gendarmes whose numbers were greatly increased today.

The servant who answered the bronze gold fleur-de-lis gate was Baron Rothschild and added "the Duke of Windsor is indisposed and is still in bed."

The Rothschild chauffeur was hastily dispatched a nearby village to get what was described as a painkiller for nerves and salve for the ears.

Windsor was said to be suffering from a severe headache but it was impossible to ascertain the exact nature of his ailment or whether doctors were in attendance.

WM. G. OLDFIELD ESSEX KILLED

Switchman Shunting Cars Hit by Passenger Train

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP)—William O. Oldfield, 40, of Essex, a member of the Canadian National Railway switching crew of Windsor, was killed when shunting cars on the industrial spur in the railyards of the railway. He was struck by the engine of an eastbound passenger train.

The Windsor crew were in the act of moving cars from the British Leaf Tobacco plant over the industrial spur. Oldfield was riding on the ladder of the second car, according to eye-witnesses, and, as he reached the switch, jumped to the ground. It is thought that that being intent on his work he failed to hear the approaching passenger train over the noise of the switching freight.

Conductor Forbes was in charge of the crew, which had W. Gray as brakeman and Engineer Mitchell on the locomotive. Edgar Little of London was fireman. Brindle of the eastbound passenger train in charge of Conductor Hamil.

Pair Ride in Buggy To Their Wedding

Leamington, Ont., Dec. 15.—(CP)—Half a century ago, say, young, John L. Jackson and blushing Miss Josephine Tourangeau traveled the narrow road from Harrow to Chatham by horse and buggy, and were married.

Last night in the little United Church at Alburn, six miles northwest of here, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson received congratulations and best wishes from more than sixty relatives at the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary. Members of the Jackson family from as far east as Simcoe and west as Detroit joined in the festivities. Mr. Jackson is 68 years old. His wife is seventy-one.

King George VI Cables Canada Appreciation of Messages

Ottawa, Dec. 15 (CP)—King George VI today cabled Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, and Prime Minister Mackenzie King expressions of appreciation for messages of greeting on behalf of the government and people of Canada, sent His Majesty on the occasion of his 41st birthday.

The message to the Governor-General was as follows:

"Please express to the people of Canada, for whose prayers and their kind message of congratulations on my birthday, which I greatly appreciate, George R.I.".

To the Prime Minister the King cabled:

"I sincerely thank you and the members of my government in Canada for your kind congratulations on my birthday. George R.I."

Girl Escapes Man on Hillside, Jumps and Lands in Chimney

Falls Plump Into Chimney of Ann Hocking's House

RAISED WITH WIRES

Hollywood, Dec. 15.—(AP)— A 13-year-old girl who told police she was terrorized by a man's attempt to attack her leaped from a hillside trail and landed in the chimney of Ann Harding's home early today.

Policemen answered a burglary alarm at the screen star's residence found young Bonnie Wrankle and took her to Hollywood Receiving Hospital where she was treated for severe lacerations.

When the girl tumbled on the roof, Mr. and Mrs. George Seaton, caretakers at the Harding residence during the actress' absence in Europe, thought burglars were forcing their way in. They said they saw a man leave the ground and heard an automobile drive away.

The girl said she went riding last night with a man she had never met. Five minutes, On a lonely foothill road, she asserted, he made improper advances and pursued her when she fled.

29 MEN UNAWARE CHARGES DROPPED

Toronto, Dec. 15.—(CP)—Ignorant that unlawful assembly charges against them had been dropped, 29 York and Etobicoke men milled outside a Toronto courthouse today. They headed back home, however, when a lawyer told them Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck had withdrawn the charges.

Relief restigning, the men were prosecuted as a result of township relief disturbances. Some were charged with "forcibly confining" officials.

Plot to Steal Stone of Scone Revealed in Church Book

Latest Conspiracy to Take 'Stone of Fate' From Abbey 2 Years Ago

AUTHORITIES SILENT

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 15 (CP Cable)—An obscure footnote in that excellent but rather prosaic publication, the official Yearbook of the Church of England, revealed today that a plot was devised two or three years ago to steal from Westminster Abbey the "Stone of Fate," The Yearbook was published today.

The footnote occurs in an article by Dean Foxley Norris on the Coronation.

"Many plots have been made to take back the Stone of Scone to Scotland," it says. "The latest, known to police but to few others, was only two or three years ago." No details were given. Police and Abbey officials were reticent to elaborate.

Tradition says that it is the stone on which Jacob slept at Bethel. It is supposed to have been taken by Gathelus, husband of a daughter of one of Pharaohs of Egypt, and carried from there to Ireland. It was used for many years there in Coronations on Tara Hill. In 500 B.C. it was taken to Scotland, reportedly as a present to England first in 1296 by Edward I.

The earlier part of the tradition certainly is mythical, for the stone consists of reddish West Scotland sandstone. More probably it was St. Columba's pillow in the island of Iona, off England's north-east coast, and was removed from there to Scone in 840 A.D.

DESPERADO TAKEN WIFE IS WOUNDED IN GUN BATTLE

45 MINUTE SIEGE

Woman Hit in Back But Wound Not Serious

New York, Dec. 15.—(AP)— Federal agents blasted an upper-story side apartment with a 45-minute siege of gunfire early today, capturing Harry Brunette, 25-year-old desperado, and wounding his wife.

J. Edgar Hoover, Chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who led the attack, said Brunette was wanted for the kidnapping of a New Jersey State Trooper and for a number of bank robberies in the middle west.

Brunette's wife, with a bullet wound in the back, was taken to Bellevue hospital where her condition was reported not to be serious.

An area just off Riverside Drive was thrown into a panic by the gun battle as Brunette fought back against the surprise raid with two pistols, one of which was engraved "George 'Z' Zealh, Sheriff Macomb County, 1933."

Hoover said he believed the woman was one of those removed from three members of the sheriff's office at Mount Clemens, Mich., in a roadside holdup last July 30. The other pistol was a United States army automatic.

CLAIMS GERMANS LEAD SPANIARDS

Socialist Command Charges German Troops Are With Fascists

Madrid, Dec. 15 (AP)—German troops led Spanish Fascists in renewed attacks on government positions near suburban Boadilla Del Monte, the Socialist high command charged today.

The roar of a distant battle, apparently centered on the western side of Casa Del Campo Park, penetrated to the centre of the capital.

Government commanders, using binoculars, observed troop movements. The officers asserted later the presence of the German soldiers had been "duly checked."

An earlier assault by Fascist General Francisco Franco's rebel guard was reported repulsed and the insurgent column "destroyed."

PULPITS, PRESS HEAP CRITICISM ON ARCHBISHOP

Indications Radio Address Would be Debated in Commons

EDITORIALS APPEAR

Daily Express Calls Upon Archbishop to Name Persons Accused

London, Dec. 15—(AP)—Criticism from the pulpit and the press was heaped upon the Archbishop of Canterbury today for his vertal attack on ex-King Edward VIII.

Indications were the matter would reach the floor of the House of Commons Thursday.

The latest repercussions of the abdication of King Edward sprang up to embarrass an officialdom striving to smooth the path for George VI, his successor.

The Archbishop, spiritual leader of the Empire, in an broadcast Sunday sternly lectured the former ruler for his desire to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson in violation of the "Christian principles of marriage."

The head of the Church of England, a great part of the throne of the King's conduct at the foot of his social friends, "whose standards and ways of life are alien to all the best interests of his people."

Coupled with this the Venerable Archbishop's statements came today from distinguished sources, reflected in editorial comment and letters from the public to newspapers.

Josiah Wedgwood, Labor Member of Parliament, said he hoped to open the question to debate in the House of Commons Thursday.

MILLION TO LOSE LIVES IN SPAIN

Primate of Spain Sees Terrible Losses in Fury of Civil War

Rome, Dec. 15 (AP)—The civil war in Spain may cost 1,000,000 human lives, Cardinal Isidro Gomez, Archbishop of Toledo and primate of Spain, said today in the Catholic newspaper Avvenire D'Italia.

The published interview aroused keen interest, since it was assured the primate's opinions were those now conveyed to Pope Pius during a recent audience. Prelates said the Cardinal would not have so granted such an interview unless he had obtained Vatican consent. Avvenire D'Italia is the official organ of the Catholic action organization founded.

"Never in history has there been so barbarous a war," the newspaper quoted his eminence. "The atrocities committed are incredible.

"Precious art treasures have been destroyed. Unheard-of violence has been directed against churches.

"Two women were brought to me in one place. One boasted she had killed six priests; the other 19.

"It is not a political conflict in the strict sense of the word. It is a war of principle, of principles of one concept of life and society against another, of civilization against another."

The Fascist insurrection, he added, barely started off a Communist coup d'etat. The latter, he said had been planned for five years.

KINGSTON SHOP ROBBED

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 15.—(CP)—Stanton's Specialty Shop here, dealing in women's wear, was robbed during the night when $700 was stolen. Entrance was made through a cellar window and the cash register smashed open.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

London, Dec. 15 (AP) — Elisabeth Bergner received a dozen curtain calls last night in the London premiere of Sir James Barrie's new play, "The Boy David."

A distinguished audience at his Majesty's theatre received the play enthusiastically. It was produced by Charles B. Cochran and opened here after tryout performances in Edinburgh last month.

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP) —Members of the public schools committee of the Board of Education have voted against a plan to abolish afternoon recess in schools here and end afternoon classes earlier. Fifty-eight per cent of St. Thomas parents had voted in favor of the change.

White, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP)— Mrs. T. D. Cox is glad her husband fought in the trenches. A shell from his hunting jacket, which hung in the kitchen, fell to the closet. The exploding shells awakened Mrs. Cox, who was in the room upstairs. They escaped just before the stairway collapsed.

Lancaster, Mo., Dec. 15 (CP)— W. T. Easter on a cold night is catch an icebox thief. He insists life is what he says.

A clerk was awakened into his store-room, jumped up and grabbed with his teeth a foil fencing strip at the top of the refrigerator door. Then the animal pulled itself up until its hind feet could find the hook handle. The door swung open by itself.

Montreal, Dec. 15. (CP)— The editor of the newspaper organ of the Montreal University, said today there was a resolution being sent to 19 Canadian universities declared "the weekend conferences throughout the Dominion concerning the basis of peace in Spain" do not express what the majority of students expressed in resolution form at the conference in Canada, Sherbrooke, Shenal, Sulyuan and Ninghia borders.

Archers Story Early

The rebel Marshal's declaration came on the heels of direct advices from Nanking in which W. H. Donald, adviser to the Central government, declared he had personally seen the military records and found him in good health and spirits.

(Donald's report, however, did not state the exact date he had seen Chang nor did it tell exactly when his information to Nanking officials had been received from the interior).

Other reports from Sian-Fu, Shensi provincial capital, Marshal Chang also declared several other generals, in addition to the four he named had been put to death. He did not give their names, however.

Proposals to End Slaughter Drafted by Britain and France

Concrete Plans Will Be Ready by End of Week

VOLUNTEER QUESTION

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 15.—(CP Cable)— British and French governments were drafting concrete proposals designed to end the slaughter in Spain.

By the end of the week it is expected they will be ready to submit the proposals to both sides in Spain's civil war, and to the governments of Germany, Italy, Russia and Portugal.

British government experts at the same time are considering application of the non-intervention Italian Act of 1870 to the current conflict. This would prevent Britons from volunteering.

German and Italian Answers

Both the British and French governments feel that the replies received from Germany, Italy, Russia and Portugal to their previous non-intervention proposals, while not constituting complete acceptance are yet sufficiently encouraging to justify a step further. Therefore they are working on a draft to cover the question of non-intervention in Spain; 2. Extension of non-intervention to include a ban on volunteers; 3. A definite scheme to end the civil war.

If an agreement is reached to forbid volunteers, Britain will apply the law provided under the Foreign Enlistment Act. The Act, if necessary, will be extended. Passed during the Franco-German war of 1870, it forbids enlistment in foreign wars under heavy penalties.

Volunteers May Be Liable

There is considerable doubt, however, whether it applies in such cases as the Spanish civil war, especially where the British government has not recognized either side as belligerents. That point is now before the government for legal experts.

If it does apply, then all volunteers from the United Kingdom fighting on either side are liable to penalty. In any event, officials in British official circles apparently is moving in favor of a ban on volunteering, even if no international agreement is reached or not.

A ban on volunteers imposed by the British government of course would not apply to refugees from the Spanish fray.

The Communist "Daily Worker" published a dispatch today announcing that the four anti-fascist volunteers had reached Madrid to join the international defence brigade.

Feeling Grows in Japan That Intervention May be Necessary

Nanking, China, Dec. 15 (AP)— Martial law throughout China was proclaimed today by the Nanking government shortly after rebellious Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang announced the killing of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and at least three other military leaders.

The central administration laid down a mass prohibition against all demonstrations and political movements.

Government officials gave as the reason for their drastic order the grave situation arising from multiple assassinations."

Broadcast Killings

Shanghai, Dec. 16 (Wednesday) (AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and several other Chinese military leaders were killed at Sian-Fu after mutinous troops had rebelled, Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang announced by radio today.

Cold-miocedly and with equanimity, the rebellious northern Marshal told an anxious China of the slaying of the head of state.

He statement brought to an end intense hopes for the Premier's safety, who last Friday was detained during a military rebellion in the inner provincial capital.

Marshal Chang announced three others were killed: General Chiang Pei-Tien, former Chinese Ambassador to Tokyo, General Chiang Fang-Chun, and General Chen Cheng, commander of bandit suppression forces on the Kiangsi-Shenal, Suiyuan and Ninghia borders.

Archers Story Early

The rebel Marshal's declaration came on the heels of direct advices from Nanking in which W. H. Donald, adviser to the Central government, declared he had personally seen the military records and found him in good health and spirits.

CROWDS THRONG CANNES STREETS

Police Escort Guides Mrs. Simpson Through Curious Spectators

Cannes, France, Dec. 15.—(AP)— Detectives were summoned late today to escort Mrs. Wallis Simpson through a curious crowd which gathered about her after she had started a shopping trip along La Croisette, Cannes' fashionable waterfront promenade.

Mrs. Simpson, accompanied by a bodyguard and by her hosts and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, had entered a shop upon her return from Nice, where the party had stopped at the American Consulate.

Word spread rapidly through the village that "Madame Simpson" was in town, and within a few minutes more than 100 persons had surrounded the shop.

Her chauffeur sped back to the villa Lou Viel, where Mrs. Simpson is staying, picked up several Sureté General detectives, brought them back to the shop where Mrs. Simpson, Rogers and Mrs. Rogers waited in the back room.

The detectives elbowed their way into the shop and came out with Mrs. Simpson and Rogers between them. Then they pushed the crowd aside to clear a path to the motor car.

Mrs. Simpson hurried across the sidewalk in a slight rain and entered the car. She wore a dark green hat, a dark fur coat, and held an open umbrella before her face.

The car then sped off to the villa.

At Nice, Mrs. Simpson remained secluded in the chancery of the American Consulate while the Consul, Paul Chapin Squire, emerged. He entered the car and talked to her briefly.

Squire and Mrs. Rogers then entered the consulate carrying a sheaf of papers which Squire later Mrs. Rogers joined the others in the car and they returned to Cannes.

Pictures Are Banned in Press of Germany

Berlin, Dec. 15. (AP)— Pictures of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Simpson may appear in German newspapers under official regulation instructed editors today.

The ban on publication of the American woman's photograph, in effect since before ex-King Edward's abdication, was extended today to include the Duke.

Editors were warned not to print stories concerning the Duke's stay in Austria.

FIRST ICE BOATING OF SEASON ENJOYED

Though ice on the bay has not formed in sufficient thickness to make the sport absolutely safe, circling the past few days the first ice boating of the season is now being enjoyed by waterfront residents. Due to the continued mild weather, large cracks and slowholes have developed in the ice of the bay and Sandoe, but despite the fact skaters and hockey enthusiasts have been making daily use lightly in the vicinity of the government dock.

CHILDREN WARNED TO KEEP OFF RIVER

Boys taking chances while crossing the Moira River upon the loose ice have resulted in numerous complaints being made to the local police of late. Yesterday at the rear of the Fruit Machinery Company premises, Front St., two small boys were halted in their efforts to cross the river when the ice was reported to be very unsafe. "Apparently these lads-age boys do not realize its danger they are encouraging. W. have received many calls from the vicinity of the river from parents and interested citizens who inform us they have tried to impress upon the attention to them they in turn have called upon the police to assist in the discontinuation of this practice," stated Chief Kidd as he requested the assistance of the local citizens to warn children to keep off the ice of the river, especially now that a mild spell is in evidence.

LATE MRS. ISABELLA E. VALLANCE

The funeral of Mrs. Isabella Edna Vallance, widow of William H. Vallance, took place Monday afternoon from her late residence, 13 Highland Avenue and many friends were present at the service which was conducted in the home by the Rev. A. L. Geen.

Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery; the service at the graveside was conducted by the same minister.

The bearers were Messrs. Lawrence Burke, Fred Payne, Alfred Wessels, Samuel Taylor, William Taylor and Percy Kendrick.

MRS. A. E. BROWN (Calgary)

Mrs. Hattie Kiens Brown, 53 years of age, wife of Albert E. Brown, 1758 Nine-a street west, Calgary, Alberta, died in a hospital in that city on Sunday, December 7th., following a long illness.

Born in Tyrconnell, Ont., she took up residence at Calgary six years ago. Besides her husband, she is survived by three sons, Lorne, Vancouver, and Howard and Jack in Calgary; a daughter, Mrs. Leonard Marshall, and a brother in New York State.

Funeral services conducted by Rev. Dr. Gordon Wragge of First Memorial Chapel Wednesday afternoon at 3.46 o'clock. Interment was in Burnsland Cemetery. Friends of the late Mrs. Brown of Trenton and Belleville will regret to learn of her death.

MRS. AMANDA MACAULAY (Frankford)

Frankford, Dec. 14 (Special)—Mrs. Amanda Macaulay, lifelong resident in Frankford district, died in Kingston on Monday after a short illness. She was a member of the Methodist Church here and leaves to mourn, one daughter Miss Kathleen at home. Her husband predeceased her a few years ago. The funeral will be held in Frankford on Wednesday.

MRS. HATTIE DANCEY (Calgary)

The death occurred at Calgary, Alberta, on Thursday last of Mrs. Hattie Dancey, widow of Thomas H. Dancey, formerly of Picton, Ont.

MRS. MERRIT SINE (Madoc)

Madoc, Dec. 15 (Special) — Mr. Will Sinclair received word Monday afternoon of the passing of his sister, Mrs. Merrit Sine at the home of her son Kenneth Sine at Peterboro.

Mrs. Sine formerly Mary Sinclair was the oldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sinclair of Madoc, and was in her 87th year. She was about seventy-five years ago. For a time she lived on the farm now resided in Stirling. She was a very devoted member of the Methodist Church at Stirling; a member of the Women's Institute and the Women's Auxiliary. Her husband Mr. Merrit Sine died some years ago. She is survived by one son Kenneth and four grandchildren Lawrence Sine of Toronto Will of Madoc, John of British Columbia, and one sister Mrs. (Rev.) John McCoy of Vancouver, also Mrs. McCaffrey, Mr. Geo. Wright and Mrs. Peter Sinclair of Madoc are cousins of the deceased.

MRS. FRED LLOYD (Eldorado)

Eldorado (Special)—A deep gloom was cast over this district and Lake Ado on Friday morning when it became known that Mrs. Fred Lloyd of Canoe Lake had passed away after a few months' illness. The late The porker was a popular figure and Miss Dell Empey, daughter of Mr. Orvin Empey and the late Mrs. Empey, of Eldorado, and had spent all her life but the past few years in the community in which she was at years of age. Before her marriage she was an efficient school teacher and taught in the local schools here.

About eight years ago she was united in marriage to Fred Lloyd of Bancroftburn who with her sorrowing father, Mr. Orvin Empey, Jackie are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother, also her aged father, Mr. Wm. Dunkley, one sister, Margaret, who resides in Bermuda, Mrs. Dewhurst, Mrs. Empey, of Belleville and Charles Empey of Eldorado.

A large crowd had assembled at the Eldorado United Church to pay their last tribute to the dead and held in very high esteem by all who knew her. The hymns, "Nearer My God To Thee" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" were sung, both special favorites of the deceased. Rev. Mr. MacPee spoke very comforting words to the bereaved from Matthew 25, 19th verse. Mr. Ward Wartman rendered a beautiful solo, "Beyond the Sunset" with lovely floral tributes.

The bearers were: Messrs. Ted Allore, Milton Dunn, Murrell Skinner, Burnis Wannemaker, Bruce Storms and Orville Alkenbrack, all of Camden East. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family.

WILSON McCUE, K.C. (Smith's Falls)

Smith's Falls, Dec. 15.—Wilson McCue, K.C., President of the Lanark County Bar Association and one of Smith's Falls' most prominent citizens, died suddenly at his home here Sunday morning. He had been ill for only a few weeks.

Born in Drummond Township, a son of the late John and Sarah McCue, pioneer settlers, he obtained his early education at the Carson and Carleton Place, later attending model school at Perth. After teaching school for a year he was articled as a student-at-law with the late J. F. Wood, of Brockville, and subsequently graduated with high honors from Osgoode Hall, being called to the Bar at the age of 22. He practiced in Carleton Place for seven years, and moved to Smith's Falls more than a score of years ago. He was solicitor for the Town of Smith's Falls and for the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Long prominent in the civic and and social life of Smith's Falls, he served as a former member of the Board of Education, the Board of Governors of Chamberlain Memorial Hospital, as President of the Smiths Falls Art Gallery, President of the Smith's Falls Hockey Club, President of the Chamber of Commerce and as a member of the Board of Health. For the past two years he had held the Presidency of the Lanark County Bar Association.

In addition he was a Past Deputy Master of L.O.L. No. 88, and R.R.F. No. 136, and a member of the Canadian Order of Forester. He had been active in the affairs of St. John's Anglican Church.

Surviving are his widow, formerly Mary Stuart Moag; two sons, Dr. J. Arthur and James W., all of Smith's Falls, and one brother, Harvey J. McCue of Windsor.

OFFICIALS TAKE ALLEGIANCE OATH

City Police Sworn But Provincial Police Will Be Sworn Later

Many local public officials today swore their oath of allegiance to King Majesty, King George the Sixth. On Saturday last S. C. Dornan, K.C., local Crown Attorney and Deputy Judge for the County of Hastings, took his oath of allegiance before His Honor Judge Deroche and today administered the same oath to His Worship, Magistrate John L. Lloyd and H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace.

Immediately following his swearing of allegiance to the new Sovereign, Magistrate Lloyd returned to the police court where he administered the oath of allegiance from the members of the Belleville Police Department. In full dress uniform the local police constabulary swore their allegiance a few minutes prior to the opening of today's local police court. Chief Kidd was the first officer to swear his allegiance, followed by the two city sergeants and the constables in order of seniority.

Other public officials at the County Court House will swear their allegiance before Deputy Judge S. C. Dornan, K.C., at a later hour today.

Inspector Frank Gardner, in charge of District No. 8 of the Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville, stated today the officers of his district would take the oath of allegiance at a later date. No word of appointment was received instructions, Commissioner Williams, O. P. P. Headquarters in Toronto, to expect instructions to have our officers take their oath of allegiance in the near future, however," stated Inspector Gardner today."

The oath taken by the members of the Belleville Police Department, today, read as follows:—"I, (name of person taking the oath) do sincerely promise and swear, that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to His Majesty King George VI as lawful King of this Great Britain, Ireland and the Dominions beyond the Seas, and that I will not make or enter into, nor have part in, any oath, bond, engagement or vow, or any combination, or any secret promise, whatsoever, that may be made against His Person, Crown and Dignity, and that I will do my utmost endeavor to disclose, and make known to His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, all treasons or traitorous conspiracies and attempts which I may know to be against Him or any of them;—and all this I do swear without equivocation, mental evasion or secret reservation; so help me God."

Shop-Lifting Confronts Belleville Merchants

Despite warnings and many prosecutions recently enforced by local merchants, shop-lifting still confronts Belleville store-keepers, it was revealed in police court today. Yesterday afternoon four teenage girls were charged with shop-lifting from a local department store, Plaintiffs in the case were the store manager and upon questioning the boys, discovered they were in possession of articles of jewellry, upon the larger department stores and in the vicinity of the wedding ring carried. The boys were caching their loot in an old barn situated near the bank of the Moira River at the upper end of Front St. The officer in charge found all of the loot at exactly where the youth stated they had cached the goods taken. The lads with regard to the police station before Chief Kidd directly after leaving the store, and confessed when the matter will be further discussed.

POLICE BLOTTER

Three local youths were apprehended in the act of stealing Christmas trees in the vicinity of the second concession of Thurlow by Provincial Constable Wm. McGinn. The youths, ranging in the three teen-aged youths was the sequel to a complaint received from residents of that district regarding the wholesale destruction of fir trees in that community. The lads were permitted to return to their homes with regard to the police court of subsequent offences of a similar nature. Provincial Police authorities announced today.

Harry Wardaugh, 36 Geddes St. reported the theft of a valuable leather coat to the local police Tuesday evening. Mr. Wardaugh informed the authorities that person unknown had entered his home during the absence of his family and had removed the coat some time yesterday afternoon.

One inebriate and seven transients shared the sleeping quarters in the police station last night, the transients were permitted their liberty early today, but the "drunk" was arraigned in police court charged under the L.C.A.

STIRLING YOUTH GIVEN 3 MONTHS

Pleads Guilty to Two Charges of Forgery

"Apparently you did not appreciate the leniency shown you previously when found guilty of a similar charge and as a result I'll have to sentence you to serve three months in the common jail", said Magistrate J. L. Lolyd to Arthur Hagerman, 18 year old Stirling youth, who pleaded guilty in two charges of forgery in today's local police court.

Hagerman pleaded guilty to the charges without making comment. "The amount involved was $61.00, but the Provincial Police have recovered and made restitution of all the money obtained except $6.00?" interrupted H. G. Dornan, K.C., County Crown Attorney, who prosecuted the case, Mr. Dornan added, however, that charges were laid at different intervals, one having been made in December, 1935, and the other on December 2nd of this year.

"This man was given a two year suspended sentence by Magistrate Butler and June and found guilty to charges of forgery and theft," added Mr. Dornan.

"Apparently you have an idea you can continue this sort of thing, so will be given a three months' sentence so will teach you differently", said His Worship. It was learned that the word has been uttered from the Bench, Hagerman spoke very little about the time T have already served in jail on remand being applied to his sentence?" he asked. "Oh, all right I guess", smilingly added His Worship.

A local operator of a slot machine was fined by the city's Magistrate to the extent of ten dollars and costs, when a Chinese restaurant proprietor was fined $5.00 for operating the machine without the necessary city license. Third victim was fined by the city crackpot after pleading guilty to charges of keeping a gaming house and paying the sum of $49.05, including three fines and the costs thereof.

A DIE, 12 MISSING CHANNEL SWEPT

Small Boats Scurry For Shelter Before Winds Abate

London, Dec. 15 (AP)—Four persons were known today to have died and 12 were missing at sea after a two-day storm which swept the English Channel.

Small boats scurried for shelter when the gales subsided but between England and France was disrupted before the winds abated today.

Hope was abandoned for the crew of 12 aboard the fishing trawler Lowestoft, which was reported missing Nov. 27 off the west coast of Scotland.

REBEL MARSHAL

NANKING, China, Dec. 15.—(AP) Rumors of a split within the Chinese Government, telegraphed from Shanghai today, that had Nanking officials today hastened to personally seek reconciliation during Kai-Shek at Sian-Fu and Chang Hsueh-Liang, rebel leader, spirits.

The Australian-born adviser declared, however, "intensive negotiations will be essential before the crisis is relieved" and that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek will be released from custody of rebellious Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang.

Donald's report brought great relief to worried official circles.

Efforts to Secure Release

He indicated he intended to return to the Shensi Provincial capital today to continue further efforts to effect the military Overlord's release and settle the demands of the rebellious army commander.

Informed sources in Nanking predicted Madame Chiang would probably leave the capital to go to Loyang, in Honan Province, the seat of Shensi, to participate in the negotiations.

Central Government authorities denied they had been in direct communication with Generalissimo Chiang but did state Foreign Minister Chang Ohiu had received a communication from Marshal Chang.

Questions of Terms

The advice from rebel headquarters, it was declared, dealt with terms which the Marshal demands the Generalissimo accept before Chiang's release but did not state specific details. These exact terms were not indicated, it was reported at any time.

The adviser's report injected optimism into grave conferences of government officials whose principal fear today was that the life of Chiang was detained Friday had been almost undivided since the arrest of all factions in the National Government.

Nanking, China, Dec. 15.—(AP)—The Nanking national government resolved unanimously tonight to crush subversive and rebellious force of the north, whether Chiang Kai-Shek, China's captured Chief of State, is dead or alive.

The National Executive Yuan met for the first formal session under the chairmanship of H. H. K. Kung, temporarily replacing the Generalissimo. It decided without dissent to:

1. Carry out Chiang Kai-Shek's domestic and foreign policies.
2. Carry out the bandit suppression campaign in Shen-Si.
3. "Never relax" operations against subversive elements in Sinkyan and other districts.

Loyalty Pledged

This seeming spirit of no compromise with the Communist-supported "Young Marshal", Chang Hsueh-Liang, who seized the Generalissimo at Sian-Fu last Friday coincided with overwhelming pledges of loyalty and military assistance to the National Government from nearly every province of the republic.

Moreover, vast government forces of fighting men were reported marching on Sian-Fu, the rebel capital, from three separate directions.

They marched from Honan, from Kansu, from Hupeh, steadily tightening their encircling lines.

"Young Marshal" Chang, said reports reaching Shanghai, has failed to receive the support of other important factions and is being deserted even by his own lieutenants.

When he seized Chiang last week, he demanded of the National Government that it make war on Japan, that it get back Manchuria and that it recognize Communism. The "Young Marshal" once was warlord of what now is Manchoukuo.

Observers said the "Young Marshal" has failed to uphold his cause with effective measures and has met many difficulties. Belief grew Nanking ultimately would retain and even increase its former power.

Tokyo, Dec. 15 (AP)—Fears grew today Japan may be forced to take a hand in the Chinese crisis. Premier Hirota declared the Japanese Foreign Minister had informed the Cabinet he believed China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek was slain sometime between sundown last Friday and dawn Saturday. On Monday an erroneous report stated that Chiang had been returned by his captors unharmed.

The Japanese Foreign Minister told the Cabinet he based his belief on the fact Dr. King took over the Generalissimo's position as Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek almost immediately after word was received of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang's mutiny against the Central Government and capture of Chiang at Sian-Fu.

Rome-Japanese Relations

Moscow, Dec. 15 (AP)—Relations between the Soviet Union and Japan, aggravated by the German-Japanese Anti-Comintern Pact, were believed today to be nearing a critical state.

While attention in the capital turned to the rebellion of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang against the Central Chinese Government which Japanese newspapers had charged Communist backing, the Soviet refused to sign the Atlantic Fishing Convention, of vital economic importance to Japan as it allows her to fish in Siberian waters.

Corporation and two Archbishops. (The reference was to the two ranking Archbishops, Canterbury and York).

"I do not like it."

Leading newspapers criticised the Canterbury radio sermon. One writer said, "His words uttered at this moment, suggest the hitting of a man, when he is down."

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express commented editorially:

"After the Archbishop of Canterbury comes Archdeacon Lamble of Australia, bravely firing the artillery of the church against a position already evacuated."

(Archdeacon Lamble in a speech in Melbourne had said Edward appeared to lack "appreciation of the reality of God and responsibility to him.")

"They kept their thunder silent, while the lines still were manned," continued the Express. "Now the Archbishop launches an attack against Edward's friends. The Archdeacon blesses the exodus entourage of the former King.

Specification Demanded

The clergy should specify the persons they denounce or else show some of the restraint they preach about."

The News, Chronicle editorially mentioned its "posting contains many before accepting that the Primate's (the Archbishop of Canterbury's) broadcast criticism of King Edward on Sunday night was untimely and even unchristian."

The editorial concluded:

"Edward VIII has gone. To pursue the campaign can bring no benefit to the cause of the monarch or Christian charity. The thing is finished."

Comment in the House of Commons led to the belief not only the Archbishop's remarks but Edward's radio farewell to the nation Friday would be raised in parliament. Two questions likely will be asked:

1. Whether the church head's broadcast was made with the Cabinet's approval.

2. Whether any Cabinet Minister read the speech before it was delivered.

The opportunity will arise during discussion of the British Broadcasting Corporation's charter, which comes up for review Thursday.

Some members of parliament also expected the question to arise whether Edward's farewell had received prior ministerial approval. There was a widespread impression none of the cabinet knew its contents beforehand although others insisted Prime Minister Baldwin undoubtedly had examined it closely.

DUKE OF WINDSOR

Specified May Call

It was learned Dr. Heinrich Neumann may be called to the chateau to attend Edward. The Vienna specialist has treated the former King for a long standing ear affliction on previous visits to Austria.

While watchmen redoubled their efforts to preserve quiet about the estate extensive remodeling was going on inside. A crew of painters was hard at work redecorating one part of the chateau. They were expected to finish their work Thursday.

Consignments of new furniture of light-colored upholstery and more graceful lines arrived to replace the sombre, massive chairs, beds and wardrobes with which the chateau was filled.

A pile of packages filled the village post office addressed to Windsor. Among them were two samples of coffee, a large parcel from Cannes, where Mrs. Simpson is staying and a skiing outfit from Vienna.

Three long distance calls came to the chateau, one from Cannes, the other two from London. It was reliably learned Edward did not talk on any of the connections.

The Vienna newspaper Telegraf said Windsor talked to Cannes last midnight.

The Archduke Anton of Austria at Sonnburg Castle near Vienna, denied reports Mrs. Simpson was a prospective guest there.

"Mrs. Simpson is not an acquaintance of the family, hence the reports, she is coming here are nonsense," the Archduke said.

May Rent Villa

It was reported at the Tyrolean resort of Kitzbuehel negotiations were underway on Windsor's behalf to rent a chateau for a month after Christmas.

The building is a former farm house which has been made over into an attractive modern villa, which Windsor admired on a visit in 1933, expressing a wish to live there if he ever returned to Kitzbuehel.

At Enzesfeld, however, indications were Edward had settled down for an extended stay.

Rooms were being prepared for additional visitors at the chateau, it, was learned.

Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting to the former Monarch, was expected, but there was no hint of the identity of the other prospective guests.

Home Closely Guarded

Gendarmes kept a night-long vigil at the estate where the Duke spent his first day playing golf and bowling. He chatted briefly with old friends after dinner and then retired early.

The Ex-sovereign already has won the admiration of the 1,500 villagers of Enzesfeld whose greatest interest now lies in arranging a Christmas party at their parish church.

A municipal problem arose when a chateau servant brought word Edward had contributed to the church funds. The parishioners wanted to show their appreciation with a parade or similar demonstration to honor their distinguished visitor but wondered whether such a show of affection would be appreciated.

Plan Abandoned

Finally, the plan was abandoned after the Burgo Master had been consulted.

The villagers, however, hoped the Duke would attend their Christmas party. This startling possibility brought a last minute change in plans.

The parish priest had selected for the musical program a selection favored in Austria, "Our Coronation March." Reluctantly, it was discarded as it was felt the title might not be exactly tactful.

The Vienna press quoted the Duke as saying he would only two days of rest, indicating he might not withdraw into strict seclusion at the chateau. Night club owners and restaurant proprietors, who entertained him on his three previous visits hoped to see him soon.

Aristocracy Invited

Authentic reports said Austrian aristocracy was a trifle irritated because the Royal visitor had taken no notice of them to date.

Catholic circles, unable to reconcile the prospective marriage of the Duke to a twice divorced woman, were under him on Edward's previous visits.

A man, who came from the country home said the evening had been spent quietly, the Duke himself voicing a suggestion he accompany a party to the government gambling casino at Baden-Baden.

The visitor was quoted as saying his hands were tired from the golf and bowling.

The usually well-informed newspaper Weltblatt, discussing Edward's possible plans, said he may go to the Tyrol for Christmas, after which he might visit Budapest and Corfu, where the newspaper said it understands he want to rent a villa.

MRS. SIMPSON TO GRACE GATHERING

Will Enter Social Life on Riviera if Not Annoyed

Cannes, France, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson made plans today to enter into the social life of the Riviera if the curious do not annoy her.

Mrs. Herman Rogers of New York, she made known she would like to set forth to enjoy the Cote D'Azur again now the crisis in England has ended with the abdication of King Edward VIII, who left his throne so he could marry her.

Mrs. Rogers indicated her guest will play golf and attend teas, concerts, the Casino and bridge parties, once the crowds quit gathering outside their villa and cease following her every time she appears.

Mrs. Simpson as far as is known has not heard from Edward since he began his voluntary exile at Enzesfeld, Austria.

"Whether Mrs. Simpson will enter into the social life during her stay at our villa," Mrs. Rogers said, "depends on circumstances, chiefly the amount of tranquility accorded her."

Plans to Remain

It is understood the American woman, twice-divorced and now waiting to marry the former British King, had been offered refuge at the chateau or villas of several friends and acquaintances in other parts of Europe. She plans to remain here for the present, however, said sources close to her.

Reports from Enzesfeld said the Chateau of Baron Eugene de Rothschild where Edward is guest was being prepared for other visitors. There were no indications here Mrs. Simpson might be one of them.

The Villa Les Vils, haven of Mrs. Simpson, will have another guest soon. Mr. Rogers said Mrs. W. W. Merryman of Washington,—Mrs. Simpson's "Aunt Bessie" and her closest confidante—would spend Christmas here. The date of her arrival has not been set.

Mrs. Merryman has been in London where she arrived a short time before the crisis was brought into the open, December 1, by a speech of the British Premier Bradford.

MADOC JCT.

Madoc Junction, Dec. 15—Mr. Thomas Eggleton of Leslie, Sask., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Clarence Pitchett and renewing acquaintance with relatives and friends in the home community.

On Tuesday afternoon Dec. 8th the members of Eggleton W.M.S. and W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Warren Harlow, with a fair number in attendance. The president opened the meeting with hymn 206, Then Rev. H. A. Turner led in prayer.

Scripture lesson was read alternately. Minutes and Roll Call were taken by Miss Leona Shapley.

A letter of thanks for cards was read from Mrs. Raymond Chambers, also a letter on Baby Band work from Mrs. R. Ferris of Napanee. The treasurer gave an encouraging report of year's work. Miss Marion McMullen gave a reading. Poems were read by Mrs. O. Pitchett and Mrs. G. Pidgeon. Mite boxes and holiday bags were handed in, also collection taken up.

President: Mrs. O. Pitchett.

Vice President: Mrs. W. Harlow.

2nd Vice President: Mrs. O. Shapley.

Secretary: Miss L. Shapley.

Treasurer: Mrs. H. Clarke.

Corresponding Secretary: Mrs. O. Pitchett.

Press Secretaries: Mrs. O. Shapley and Mrs. O. Pitchett.

Organist: Mrs. Russell Shapley.

Temperance Secretary: Mrs. O. Shapley.

Secretary for Missionary Monthly and Literature: Mrs. W. Harlow.

Supply Secretary: Mrs. Clyver Shapley.

Superintendent of Baby Band: Mrs. R. Chambers.

Superintendent of Mission Band: Miss Marion McMullen.

Assistant Superintendent: Miss D. Pidgeon.

President for W.A.: Mrs. Harlow.

Treasurer for W.A.: Mrs. Danford.

Mrs. Harlow and Mrs. Pitchett were appointed on the program committee. Hymn 904 was sung and meeting closed with all repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

Mrs. Harlow then served a delightful lunch and a social hour was enjoyed.

ARTIST FOUND DEAD DOWN TO LAST DIM

Chicago, Dec. 15—(AP)—Le Hermant, 63, once a noted French artist, Chevalier of the Legion of Honor and Chairman of the French Committee on Nationalities, during the Chicago World's Fair, was found dead in a modest studio yesterday. His was down to his last dime. In the room were two $1 pawnshop tickets and a single 10-cent piece and a federal relief-project committee calling for a sculpturing project in Indiana.

HISTORIES IN DEMAND

History texts are being eagerly sought since the recent events in England turned the attention upon the background of England and the history of great men and women who have made the nation. The recent crisis has shown to men and women of today that men are much alike in all ages of history and that history can be read best by the light of other figures of the age who will live in history.

It is a safe venture that the swing to history is largely to British history, which is more interesting than a novel.

History's appeal is not be wondered at for it is a written record of men and women, of class and class. Back of the laws and the institutions are men and women, both kings and people, all through the ages very much as those of today though conditions differ.

PIRANDELLO DEAD

Luigi Pirandello, Italian novelist, and creator of a strange modern theatre embodying an odd philosophy of the mystery of human personality, is dead, after two days' illness of pneumonia. A man of sixty-nine, he was known to the United States theatre for only fourteen years when he "arrived" with "Six Characters in Search of an Author." Since that day his 25 dramas have been translated into fifteen different tongues.

He was forty-five years of age before he turned to the stage in his player he visualised metaphysics through the medium of human character. His philosophic training he received in Germany.

It was a queer mad world he portrayed. When he said that the people were tired of the old theatre and wanted a new type, he set to work to people his stage with strange forms.

He is the writer of disillusion, cynicism, nihilism itself. And strange to say it was not the disillusioned world or the world-weary that took him to its heart but the normal people to whom he gave a thrill.

THAT CHRISTMAS FEELING

It is possible to be sentimental about great many things and yet not have any very strong and conduct-moving convictions about them. We may have a nice glowing feeling of good-will about Christmas time and enter into the spirit of the occasion with a show of reality and naturalness, and yet nothing very practical or helpful come of it all. A glow that just fades away without really warning any one is an idle thing and, not doing any one any good, may have effects not far from hurtful.

The psychologists are telling us that sentiments and impulses toward unselfish and helpful action that are allowed to wander off into the desert and lose themselves in the sands of aimless wishes may have the effect of weakening the will and making positive purposing less possible. One thing is certain, if all the impulses toward good-will and the friendly and kindly spirit that are floating around through the air at this season were somehow given body and reality in changed attitudes and relationships and policies, our world would know a new and more Christian and much more satisfactory day.

It does seem a shame that we cannot make a real beginning at being and doing, in the actual opportunity and duty of every day, the things we have been thinking and dreaming about for so long. It does seem too bad that all the fine and beautiful sentiment of the Christmas season should so largely waste itself for want of incarnation in the actual lives and deeds of men and women. Perhaps we get too much satisfaction out of talking about these things, and in feeling the grow of thinking about them, to have patience for the more prosaic yet heroic task of living them. And yet all fine sentiment must have its proving in deeds,if it is to have it at all.—New Outlook.

There are three requisites to the proper enjoyment of earth's blessings; a thankful reflection on the goodness of the giver; a deep sense of our own unworthiness; and a recollection of the uncertainty of our long possessing them. The first will make us grateful; the second, humble; and the third, moderate.—Hannah More.

The greatest happiness of life is the conviction that we are loved, loved for ourselves, or rather loved in spite of ourselves.—Victor Hugo.

If I ever reach heaven I expect to find three wonders there: first, to meet some I had not thought to see there; second, to miss some I had expected to see there; and third, the greatest wonder of all, to find myself there.—Newton.

HARBOUR
Kingston, Jamaica, B.W.I.

Here where immortal Nelson dwelt awhile,
Prescient, perchance, of glory that would be;
Whence daring Morgan raided isle on isle
Until the last bold pirate paid his fee;

Still lift the hills above the surging town
Height over height, God's stairway to His stars;
Still droop the palms their long thick lashes down

Gone is the Arawak Columbus knew;
Gone, too, the galleons and the slave's wild cry;
But still poinsettias paint your sunset hue,
Still orchids tremble down your dawn-blushed sky
As safe within the Palisadoes' arm
You dream, lulled by your immemorial psalm.

TWO HUNDRED FRED SMITHS MET AROUND THE FESTIVE BOARD IN NEW YORK CITY recently. A New Yorker named Fred Smith, having nothing better to do at the moment thought it would be a good idea to get all the Fred Smiths together in a club. He did and the banquet resulted. The reporters said it was a dandy banquet in the best Smith manner and the list of guests could be summarized thusly, FRED SMITH. Belleville wasn't represented. Too soon after the hunting season.

"THE HIGH COST OF CITY PLANNING IS, in not planning." So said H. L. Brittain, of Citizens Research Bureau of Canada. He has found there has been but little long term planning of projects in Canadian cities. There has been a haphazard method of embarking on capital works, combined with too much native optimism," that has been very costly. Unfortunately also, "there have been no efficiency experts brought into municipal business."

AND DARKNESS SHALL COVER THE EARTH and gross darkness the people,—so spake the ancient prophet who no doubt peered into the misty future and beheld the amazing spectacle of a Belleville Christmas without special Christmas lighting in the business section. Folks can put up with semi-darkness most of the year but Christmas should be a joyous season with the city just flooded with light, especially in the business section. In past years the Special Christmas lighting attracted many visitors who did their Christmas shopping here and thus added to the general prosperity of the city. Every progressive community between Windsor and Montreal will be a blaze of colored lights from now until after Christmas—except—surely not Belleville.

SMART BUSINESS

A motorist ran over a dog in the Highlands. Soon the owner appeared and the motorist, although by no means certain that the accident had been his fault, offered him $15.

The owner looked at him dourly and then at the dog, saying, in a Highland accent: "He was a very fine dog."

"Well," came the further offer, "I'll give you $20."

Still the other's expression was dour, and this time he answered: "But you've spoiled my shooting."

The offer was increased, "I'll give you $25, and that's twice as much as the dog's worth."

This satisfied the dog-owner, who pocketed the money and turned away.

That would have been the end of the matter, had not the motorist remembered the date. "Hi!" he shouted, "What were you going o shoot at this time of the year?"

"Oh," came the answer. "I was just going up the hill to shoot the dog."

LOOKING BACKWARD
GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
December 15th., 1916

Mr. W. Welsh of Motra was a visitor in the city today. He motored in and reports the roads to be excellent all the way.

The Rev. Dr. Dyer, of Toronto, formerly of Albert College, is spending a few days here with his brother, Mr. James Dyer, Commercial Street.

Mr. Clarence Burgess spent yesterday at Toronto.

Mrs. J. E. Thompson and daughter of Winnipeg are visiting Mrs. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Price, William Street.

Mr. Nelson Parliament, M. P. P., Prince Edward County, was in the city last evening on his way to Brockville where he will attend a Liberal convention.

Mr. George Graham of the Lodge Room neighborhood, Thurlow, was in the city today and favored the Ontario with a call.

30 YEARS AGO
December 15th., 1906

The Rev. Dr. Ebey of Kingston is the guest of Mr. W. H. Phillips, Commercial Street.

Mrs. George Byron of Kingston has returned home after visiting relatives here for several weeks.

Messrs. Rogers & Quirk who had the contract with the G. T. R. for the construction of the branch line from the main lines to the bay near Point Anne, the same to be used by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company, have completed their contract, the last part of the work having been finished on Saturday. Now that the grading is completed, the railway company is pushing the putting down of the track.

Mr. Charles Corby of Chicago is spending a few days here with friends.

Mr. Percy W. Geen of this city has passed with honors his examinations at the College of Pharmacy, Toronto. Congratulations.

40 YEARS AGO
December 15th., 1896

The bay is again frozen over and the boys were skating on the ice in the harbor today.

The shooting season ended last night. It was, on the whole, a very successful one.

The following have been appointed by the city council to act as Deputy Returning Officers at the coming Municipal elections: Ward One, William Bland; Ward Two, Samson Ward, J. C. Keith; Ketcheson Ward, A. R. Walker; Baldwin Ward, J. Macoun; Bleecker Ward, George Walton; Coleman Ward, A. Pringle; Murney Ward, No. 7, A. M. Ketcheson; Murney Ward, No.8, W. Lester.

Mr. Frank Foster has secured the agency for the Columbia Bicycle for the year 1897.

The Sergeants' Mess of the 15th Battalion gave a very enjoyable progressive pedro and euchre in their well-appointed quarters at the drill shed last evening.

50 YEARS AGO
December 15th., 1886

We have snow, but not sufficient to make good sleighing.

The city Ministers will observe the week of prayer commencing January 2nd.

At the request of the congregation of the Albert Church, the young men who are preparing for the Ministry at Albert College, have undertaken to supply them with regular preaching during the winter.

The bachelors in the city will give a ball in the Odd-fellows' Assembly Hall on the night of December 21st.

Judge Prinkett returned from the North today with three deer. The season closed today.

The pupils at the high school will give a concert at the city hall on the evening of December 17th. The proceeds will go towards the purchase of a piano for the school.

Mr. John M. Lazier is a candidate for alderman in Ketcheson Ward. He would make a creditable representative.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was tawking around pushing crooked things strate and strate things crooked and pop was reeding the newspaper, saying, By golies I never read a better article on the international money situation. You awt to reed it, you mite surpries yourself by enjoying it, he said.

I mite knock myself over with a feather by actually understanding it, hee hee, ma said. But seriously, Willyum, if you explained it to me I mite be more apt to grasp it than if I read the actual words with my mind wandering elsewhere, she said, and pop said, There isn't anything terrificlly difficult about it. The feral essential is, the various currencies of the different countries should have the same value in proportion to gold, he said.

Their gold value, in other words, ma said, and pop said, Why, then after they're able to pay each other in their own coin, or the equivalent, it would be simple thing to extend credit to one another and lower their tariff walls and thus bring back the good old days of international trade. The life of trade is credit, and how are you going to extend or, receive credit when currency and statistics dont tawk the same languags? he said.

Why Willyum I think it's perfickly marvellous how clear you make it, especially that part about credit being the life, ma said. I've been thinking seriously of opening a charge account at Birtcher Brothers, and your little tawk has just decided me in the affirmmative. If you have a charge at those fashionable stores you can just return anything at all if you change your mind about it, but if you're on a cash basis they just greet you like a poor relation when you try to take anything back, especially if you've worn it one or 2 times, she said.

It's a woman's world and dont eat me to explain the sports page to you, pop said.

And he opened to it and got behind it.

CHARGED AS SMUGGLER

Suffering from an illness which has twice postponed proceedings, Maria Wendl, comely 22-year-old Hungarian, suspected cocaine figure in an international dope smuggling plot, is shown as she was wheeled into court at Los Angeles for trial. She is charged with smuggling $100,000 worth of heroin into the United States from Shanghai. Escaping from Pacific coast authorities after her arrest, she was recaptured in New York as she attempted to board an outbound liner. Two men, also sought in the plot, committed suicide rather than face questioning.

FORMER MONARCH MAY SETTLE ON HIS CANADA N RANCH

H.R.H. the Duke of Windsor, formerly King Edward VIII, may settle on his Canadian ranch near High Bluff, Alberta, 90 miles from Calgary after the political furore created by his abdication has died down. It is considered improbable that he will return to England for many years. But Mare's Nest Ranch, that would legally bar him from riding in Canada. It is pointed out hands and neighbors, who liked him for his willingness to "mix". He is shown on a visit riding one of the ranch ponies outside a bunkhouse. SPORT WORLD IS FINELY PAINTED

Elwood C. Hughes, Manager of C. N. E. Speaks at Rotary

One of the most colorful pictures in the realm of sportiana was painted by a master painter at the Hotel Quinte yesterday, when Elwood C. Hughes, General Manager of the Canadian National Exhibition gave a brilliant descriptive address before the Belleville Rotary Club on the occasion of their weekly luncheon.

In simple yet brilliantly descriptive eloquence, characteristic of the modesty of the speaker, Mr. Hughes reviewed the important events of twenty-odd years in the realm of sportdom, relating in biographical terms the many colorful highlights, which attended some of the major events which it has been his privilege to witness. Belleville Rotary sat in rapt attention as the colorful panorama from the time the speaker saw his first fight in Buffalo in 1910 until the last fistic classic between Louis and Schmeling unfolded.

Highlights humorous and dramatic, personal peeps into the scenes behind the limelight lights, while the sports public threw on the stage of the ostentatious events of this nature; personal sketches of world's champions at the peak of their athletic fame and an intimate knowledge of the subject dearest to the speaker's heart rounded out an address, which stood out with its clarity of description and sincerity of purpose.

Many Events Described

For instance there was the description of the four million dollar stadium erected in Athens of white marble with the attendance of a quarter million people at the Olympic games in the early days; the interest taken in the Canadian contingent by the late King Edward VII and Billy Sherring's remarkable victory in the historic Marathon race from the Marathon Hills to Athens; Sherring's dramatic action pulling a Union Jack from his shirt and waving it at the Royal Box as he passed on his way to victory; the reaction of the stodgy British sports public at the Hatton-Sporting Club in London, when dressed in evening attire they arose without a sound and slowly filed out of the building when they thought the referee had given wrong decision and Jack Johnson's famous speech at Reno previous to his fight with Jeffries, when he had knocked out an amateur champion who had professional aspirations contrary to his father's wishes. "You've killed him," chuckled Johnson as he saw his boy stretched on the canvas, "Pll sah, he's grinned Johnson, "but Ah has sure tread him."

Vivid descriptions of the Dempsey-Tunney, - Dempsey-Firpo and other historic championship fights were given by Mr. Hughes. "Dempsey originated the fighting 'long count', he said, "and he had no one to blame but himself, for what happened in Soldiers Field in Chicago."

The most dramatic moment of any fight took place in New York" continued the speaker, "when Firpo knocked Dempsey through the ropes, I sat six rows behind the ring and jumped on the floor after the terrific turmoil, which occurred after Dempsey had been helped back to the ring."

Louis Has Courage

Referring to the Schmeling-Louis fight Mr. Hughes stated that it was in reality a fight, what a clear-thinking fighter could do to an ordinary one without experience. "Louis will be the champion", he said, "but he has a lot to learn and will need all his experience if he expects to beat men of the type of Tunney."

"It has been a wonderful experience for me, being able to meet all these fine fellows in different parts of the world. It has given me a chance to know what the other fellow thinks, has changed my viewpoint on many things, broadened me and given me a different slant on life. It has been a University of Experience for me and although it has given me a new business, I never let it interfere with my business in meeting people from all walks of life", he said.

"Sport", concluded the speaker, "is the poor man's university and dressed in the man who has all the lessons. It teaches him the real lessons of life".

President J. F. Shortt tendered the thanks of the club to the speaker. Leo Riggs presided at the piano for the many songs sung by members during the luncheon.

Taken Colored Goat Does Best To Chew Hamlet off Map

OWNED BY MANY

Bay Shore, N.Y., Dec. 15—(CP)—A tan goat known to acquaintances as "Coy" and who will eat anything at the drop of a hat—including the hat—was in custody of State Police today after doing his best to chew this hamlet off the map.

The law caught up with Coy yesterday at the urgent bequest of Mrs. R. W. Harland after the goat had devoured a pink-colored shirt, a blue one and the corn off the broom with which she futilely sought to chase him from the vicinity of her wash-line.

Officer Clarence Sullivan packed Coy off to the station house in the patrol-wagon and tied him to a tree while seeking the animal's owner. A little detective work bedeviled Doug Brygster, a shipbuilder, but no.

"I hated to give him away," Brewster said sadly, "but he ate the shirts and running-gear off boats faster than I could put them on. Bill Cooper, down at the hotel, owns him."

Cooper remembered Guy and said he was a very interesting animal.

"But I gave him away to a salesman," Cooper added "after he ate up a box of cigars."

The salesman's home address couldn't be learned and a perplexed Officer Sullivan kept outdoors to see how Coy was bearing up. He was on the final abode of the pa-

INSURGENT ARMY MEETS REPULSE

Flank Attack by Government Forces is Successful

Madrid, Dec. 15—(AP)— The rear-guard of General Franco's insurgent army besieging Madrid was reported by the government today to have been "destroyed" by a flank attack.

In a heavy rain which soaked trenches around Madrid, the Fascist troops attacked the government position of Premedilla, 12 miles west of Madrid.

The insurgents were permitted almost to reach the Socialist front line, the official report said, as the government troops held their fire.

Then, the Socialist militia launched a fierce counter-attack and, aided by a rolling artillery barrage, pushed back the insurgents and struck their rear-guard in the flank.

Three miles to the east of Pozuelo, a simultaneous Fascist assault on Valdemorillo, the government reported, was broken up in fighting that lasted throughout the morning.

SECOND THURLOW

2nd Thurlow—The Neighbors' Aid held their meeting in the afternoon of December 2nd at the home of Mrs. Chas. Kisch. The members brought clothing, toys, books, candies, etc. The ladies made candy bags and a big box was packed to send to the dried out area in Saskatchewan.

The President, Mrs. Donlator called the meeting to order and opened by singing the Ode, followed by prayer.

After business was attended to, Miss Lola Mitchell and Flossie Terry sang very sweetly. Mrs. Donlator gave an interesting paper on "The Woman's Influence and Making Home Life Attractive", which was enjoyed. A spelling match was very interesting and caused a great deal of fun. Mrs. Archie Orestrin winning first and Mrs. Barlow consolation. Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

Mrs. Fred Whalen spent a few days last week with her daughter, Miss E. Whalen, and brother, Mr. Kiely of Toronto.

Mrs. Stanley Griffin and James, are spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Hutchinson of Stirling, and Mrs. Douglas Atkins and family spent Sunday with the latter's mother, Mrs. Barnum, of Belleville.

Mrs. Fred Haight has returned home after spending a couple of weeks with her sister, Mrs. E. Chambers of Stirling.

Miss Laura Keene spent Wednesday visiting with Miss Dora Acker.

Miss Mary Hamilton, Reg. N., is nursing Miss H. Rose, who has been seriously ill, but is much improved.

Mrs. Gordon who has been confined to her bed for the past few days is able to be out again.

Mr. Ernest French, who has been confined to the Brockville Hospital with pneumonia is sufficiently recovered to return to his home on Wednesday.

Mrs. Arnold Mitchell spent Wednesday with Mrs. Chas. Kisch also called on Mrs. Dent.

Miss Mary Hamilton spent Sunday afternoon and evening with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Atkins.

HASTINGS MINES SUBJECT OF TALK

Mr. Jack Haig Tells of Possibilities Within The County

"The value of the mining industry in Canada, especially within the boundaries of our own county of Hastings", was the subject of interest heard by the members of the local Y's Men's Club at their weekly meeting last evening, when Mr. Jack Haig, of the local Insurance firm of Haig Brothers, was the guest speaker. Mr. Haig's personal connections with the mining industry of North Hastings proved invaluable to him in bringing the more essential points of the mining business before the club members in his short period of that great industry.

Practically every rock formation known in Canada can be found in Hastings County, he said, is it in the raw ore. It is known to the geologists' paradise, due to the numerous formations of rock which abound in the district," stated Mr. Haig as he explained that gold mining was in progress in Hastings County before Confederation.

Many Minerals Found

"As you may already know talc, flocspar, mazzite, slate, lead as well as gold and silver have been successfully mined in this county. During the war period the flocspar mines near Madoc were operated by the government and used for the manufacture of high explosives. The mazzite mined in that district is unsurpassed throughout the world, but unfortunately cannot be mined in large slabs, as is the case in Italy. Gold mining today is being revived in this part of the county and those interested predict a brilliant future for the industry, although it is handicapped somewhat at present with inadequate transportation facilities, air transportation having to be used for freight purposes at some points. Once this matter is solved, and I understand the government is planning to open roads further north, you will see a swift advancement in the business," predicted Mr. Haig as he continued to review the great possibilities of the newly acquired slate mines near Madoc, where the finest slate in the world is being mined today.

Mr. Haig reviewed the old days of mining in Hastings County when gold was mined with abundance, but abandoned owing to the lack of adequate working materials, such as diamond drills, air pressure drills and lastly the low price of gold at that time. "The fact that established firms from Northern Ontario are taking a financial interest in the revival of mining in North Hastings alone reveals its potentialities," explained the speaker.

Statistics Quoted

In conclusion Mr. Haig quoted some statistics recently received on one of the older mines in this county. "Take the old Diamond Mine that is located seven miles from Madoc. It controls 300 acres and according to engineers' reports and advice there are two working systems on this property with an average width of from 8 to 8 feet and being from 4,000 to 1,000 feet in length respectively. An extensive diamond drilling campaign on one vein consistently cut good values all an average depth of 140 feet along a 600 foot zone. Assays are reported to have run from $6.00 to $75.00 across a certain core and the company today operates a 24 hour a day shift. Of course this is only a report received on one particular mine, but it shows the future possibilities of the mining industry in our own county where richness abounds on every doorstep," Mr. Haig concluded.

Mr. Haig was introduced by President Jack Wilson and thanked on behalf of the club by Y's man Dawson Boyd. Y's man Godfrey Scott acted as sergeant-at-arms while the customary community singing was conducted by Doug Shortt. Next week will see the annual Y's Men's Christmas meeting, when gifts will be placed around the conventional Christmas tree and later distributed among the needy of the community.

DIVINE RIGHT OF KINGS UPHELD

Bishop J. T. Kidd of London, Ont., Says Kingship From King of King

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP)—The ancient theory of divine right of kings found a modern supporter in Bishop J. T. Kidd of the Roman Catholic diocese, of London, Ont., who declared at a banquet here last night the authority of kingship comes from the King of Kings and not from the people, Thousands of nine miles east of Windsor.

Speaking at the celebration in St. Anne's Church to honor the pastor, Rev. Gilbert J. Ryan, who celebrated his silver jubilee in the priesthood yesterday, Bishop Kidd declared it was an error to say temporal kings derived their authority from the people when they ruled.

Turning to the "spiritual sovereign," he lauded Pope Pius XI for his vast knowledge and keen understanding of modern problems.

The bishop called on Roman Catholics to make special prayers so the Pope might be restored to health.

PONTIFF IMPROVING

Vatican City, Dec. 15 (AP)—Attendants of Pope Pius XI reported today his condition continued to show improvement and the congestion of his circulatory system was further alleviated.

The 79-year-old Pontiff, Vatican officials said, answered relatively unconcealed to curtailment of his activities and insisted his illness be characterized as "the simple effects of old age."

Christmas Concerts

TABERNACLE CHURCH

A27 evening the Annual Christmas concert was presented by the pupils of Tabernacle Sunday School in the school rooms which were filled to capacity in the absence of Mr. Walmsley, Supt. Rev. T. S. Naylor welcomed the audience and chose two choruses "Silent Night" and "O Christmas Tree."

Welcome Exercise by Primary Class.

A Maricostic Theatre was erected on the stage and the girls of Miss Naylor's C.G.I.T. Group presented the story of "The Princess and the Swineherd". This was exceptionally interesting because the characters were all made and operated by the girls themselves.

The primary class under the direction of Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Alexander presented a Rocking drill, Christmas Bell drill and a tableau "Away in a Manger".

Recitation—"Is Santa Married" by Alva Oakley.

Recitation by Lloyd Faulkner.

Mrs. Bray's class presented a dialogue "A Fairy Christmas Tree".

Reading—"I'm Waitin" for the 36th" by Ivan Richardson.

Recitation by Marion Brennan.

Miss Shorey's and Miss Pembleton's class gave an exercise "The Christmas Candles" which was interspersed with an instrumental "Medley of Christmas Airs".

Mrs. Lewis Hall gave a Christmas Wreath drill.

The exercises directed by Mr. Jenkins gave several numbers throughout the programme. Miss Davis and Mrs. Wright were the accompanists.

After the arrival of Santa Claus there was a great deal of excitement. Presents and bags were distributed to all the children. Closed by singing "God Save the King".

Womens Meetings

JOHN ST. UNITED CHURCH

W.M.S. AND MISSION BAND

The Women's Missionary Society of John St. Church held the December meeting in Bridge St. Church on Friday evening, December 11.

The president, Mrs. Harry Hill, opened the meeting after which it was decided to postpone the reading of reports and further business to another date. Mrs. Hall led in the appropriate Christmas devotional service.

The attendance was augmented by parents and friends of the members of the Mission Band who presented the following program: "All Things Bright and Beautiful", "Silent Night"; "The Lord's Prayer" (in song); President's Address, Norma Hunter; Treasurer's Statement by Joan Lashbrook; Some Facts About the World Friendship Fund, Margaret Recollions by Pal Hall and Nano Hunter. "What Child is This" the verse memorized by Gordon and Billie Sankler and Jack Pearson, the chorus rendered by Mrs. Frank Hall. "The Christ the King, the Babe, the Son of Mary."

The part of the pageant, "Frankincense" was as follows: The child who had all she wanted at Christmas, clothing about given, Marion Lashbrook; the fairy who showed her pictures in water, Betty Bennett; Pilgrims—Margaret Graham, Doris Arthur, Shirley Hill, Mary Dickenson, Pal Hall, Dorothy Pilliner, Edna McBrien, Joan Lashbrook.

Colonists—Gordon and Billie Sankler, Marion Ormond, Joyce McClelland, Mary Hall and Jack Pearson. French Children—Shirley Hitchon and Betty Johns; Hospital Scene—Barbara Hall, Joan Lash, McBrien, Mary Flintoft, Ruth Hasherwick, Norma Hunter, Jean Pilliner, Helen Richardson, Barbara Davis, Marguerite Buck.

Appreciation of the characters and presentation of the program was expressed by most of those in attendance.

Little Miss Ellen McBrien on behalf of the Mission Band presented Mrs. Moore with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums which was followed a very touching and sweet tribute to their leader. Thanks are due all the members of Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Lashbrook deserving special mention.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The annual meeting of the W.M.S. of the United Church of Shannonville was held at the home of the President, Mrs. (Rev.) Clarke, on December 3rd, with Group Leader, Mrs. Sam Hillick in charge and Mrs. Kenneth Vrooman presiding at the piano.

The meeting opened by singing a Christmas hymn and all repeated the Lord's Prayer. The Scripture lesson read by Mrs. Sam Elliott and Mrs. E. R. Mills led in prayer. The devotional leaflet entitled "Jesus in the villages" was read by Mrs. W. D. Robertson. Roll was called by the Secretary and brought forth a good response of Christmas verses, the loan of their piano.

A letter of thanks from Mrs. Hans of the West, was read by Mrs. Sam Elliott and Mrs. (Rev.) Clarke announced that anyone wishing to contribute to the box should bring articles in before the end of the week. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and adopted. The president, Mrs. (Rev.) Clarke, commended the splendid work of all the Group Leaders in charge this year. Members were all glad that the same leaders were all glad that the same leaders were all willing to continue in office as her efficient work is much appreciated by the members. It was moved by Mrs. L. A. Vrooman and seconded by Mrs. L. Vrotan that all the old officers continue. This motion was carried by a unanimous vote. Suggestions a few changes were necessary. Mrs. Vrooman and Mrs. Osborne both expressed thanks for cards received from the society, when they were ill. Twenty-five cards were reported sent out during the year and Mrs. Osborne of the Rover Ford was voted to be added to the other funds as it had not been needed for sick calls.

Mrs. L. E. Mills gave a reading and a duet was rendered by the Misses Morrison.

Attendance was twenty-eight. Collection $6.00 and the Rover Ford $1.30. The hostess and her assistants served refreshments and the usual social time was spent.

Shannonville W.A.

The ladies of the W.A. of Shannonville United Church held a bazaar and tea in the church hall on Thursday December 10th, following by a concert in the evening.

The hall was very prettily decorated in gay Christmas colors and evergreen boughs. The Christmas tree with the colored lights and the glittering tinsel was much admired also the small Christmas tables that decorated the entire hall which were well patronized. Tables contained fancy work, aprons and house dresses, "white elephant" articles and homemade candy. Several ladies came in for lunch during the afternoon and were well waited on by the ladies in charge of the tables. Several gentlemen came in at the tea hour and enjoyed a delicious lunch before the concert given by the Glee Club of Loleta's of Belleville.

Many delightful musical numbers were given by these clever artists who also did in community singing. Rev. Clark acted as chairman and expressed to the artists the appreciation of the audience. The proceeds amounted to over eighty dollars.

The ladies were much pleased with the success of their efforts and wish to thank all who contributed donations, those who helped serve and had charge of the tables and Christmas tree, those who attended and patronized the sales table and to Mr. and Mrs. Ira Cook for the loan of their piano.

MISS H. MORGAN TAKES OWN LIFE

Confessed Slayer of Girl Friend Hangs Self in Cell

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Miss Hope Morgan, 28, who confessed a homicidal impulse caused her to shoot a woman friend just a week ago, hanged herself today with a noose fashioned from her pajamas in the women's cell block.

She executed the self-imposed death sentence while awaiting the report of a Sanity Commission that examined her last week after the fatal shooting of Miss Elizabeth Gilbner, 36, daughter of a Michigan State College Dean.

Mrs. Allan McDonald, wife of the Sheriff and Matron of the Jail, found the body suspended from a shower-bath fixture in a room adjoining the women's cells.

Only yesterday, Sheriff McDonald had taken a pistol, shells and Miss Morgan for fear she would attempt to take her life.

Miss Gilbner, daughter of Ward Gilbner, dean of the Veterinary College at Michigan State College, was shot to death last Tuesday night at her home.

Arrested a few hours later, Miss Morgan confessed readily an "impulse to kill" which, she said, had come upon her repeatedly in recent months, and gave her to shoot Miss Gilbner four times with her father's pistol.

The shooting occurred while the two women were addressing invitations to Miss Gilbner's wedding.

Stopping Residents Aroused

The whole gunfight aroused hundreds of sleeping residents of Bryant-Grand Avenue district from the West 102nd Street apartment home, where Brunette and Sheriff Foster "cased" Hoover after the capture.

"Although we never rain criminals, he certainly is one of the worst in the country. The capture of Brunette was more difficult than that of John Dillinger, for Brunette fought back: until his guns were empty.

Wanted For Kidnapping

"Brunette was on his way toward being wanted for kidnapping.

The criminal exploit for which Brunette was wanted was the kidnapping Nov. 11 last of William A. Turnbull, New Jersey Steak Troop of the Ringling Bros. Circus man and a woman in a speeding automobile between Peru and Ottawa.

Turnbull was forced into the car, driven down into a ditch near Frenchtown.

Turnbull, present during the gun battle in the Hoover home, was one of his captors. The other man with Hoover said, in Marion Superintendent of Green Bay, Wis. Hoover said he did not know whether the victim in the kidnapping was Mrs. Brunette.

EXCLUSIVE PACT DENIED BY EDEN

Foreign Secretary Declares Three Nations Would Welcome Germany

Bradford, England, Dec. 15 (CP)—Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, was on record today with a denial that Britain, France, and Belgium have entered an exclusive alliance and with a declaration that unilateral treaty denunciations must cease.

Speaking here last night, Eden said Britain, France and Belgium would "cordially welcome the cooperation of Germany, not only in the western agreement, but in European affairs generally."

He said also: "There must be a limit to unilateral denunciation, or we will reach the point where force and force alone will be the sole arbiter of international relations."

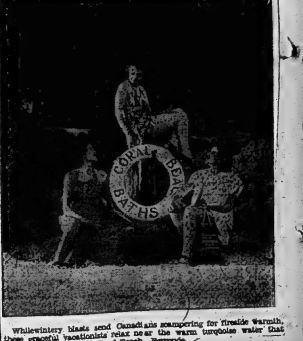
This was interpreted by observers as a slap at Germany for her recent denunciation of the Locarno treaty this year.

Spanish Integrity Essential

Of Spain the Foreign Secretary said: "I need hardly say that it is a consideration of the greatest to us, that when Spain emerges from the present troubles its integrity should remain intact and unmenaced from any quarter.

"There is a spirit of violence abroad in Europe today which knows no frontiers."

Eden said the United States set "an admirable example" in supporting Anglo-French mediation to end the Spanish conflict. He recommended this gesture to other nations "more directly concerned, whose responsibilities in this matter are infinitely heavier."



Empire Unity Is British Creed

Referring to Britain's constitutional crisis, Eden expressed his profound sympathy for ex-King Edward, welcomed the new King and Queen and poked goodnatured fun at those who had criticized the monarchy.

Finally, he declared that the British Empire was united by "the common creed that we are all free men and women, and that we are all equal before the law."

to Prime Minister Baldwin for his handling of the situation.

Alluding the construction of treaties, the Foreign Secretary declared: "The tearing up of a scrap of paper led to war in 1914. If Europe is to be fettered with scraps of paper in 1936 and thereafter, nobody can look ahead with any confidence. A great incentive that international relations are not guided by the terms of governmental treaties but by the manner in which governments observe their undertakings."

Eden's Speech Praised

London, Dec. 15 (CP-Reuters)—The Times today praised Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden for his speech at Bradford denouncing unilateral treaty violations.

The Times defended the Anglo-Franco-Belgian "mutual guarantee," worked out after Germany's denunciation of Locarno, from criticism by Berlin.

It proved necessary to fill the gap in the systematic organization of peace," the paper said, "we act nothing better or more expedient than that Germany herself should help to fill it by that means."

The Daily Herald declared Anthony Eden's speech and the British statesman replies to Anglo-French proposals for mediation in Spain, left the door open for further efforts to that end.

INVALID WOMAN INJURED IN CRASH

Woodstock, Ont., Dec. 15.—(CP)—The condition of Mrs. Elizabeth McAlpine, 60-year-old Ingersoll woman injured when the car occupied by herself and husband was struck by an eastbound C.P.R. passenger train on the Ingersoll Road crossing here last night, is reported as "quite satisfactory" at the Woodstock General Hospital today. It is pointed out the injuries are more serious in Mrs. McAlpine's case than would ordinarily be true as she is an invalid said to have suffered a stroke a few weeks ago.

SALESMAN INJURED IN UPSET

He lay in the ditch for more than an hour before discovered. Dean apparently was the driver of the car and his sole occupant.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Case of the Black Cat" and "Straight From the Shoulder"

One of the most baffling of all the Erle Stanley Gardner mystery dramas, "The Case of the Black Cat," comes to the Capitol theatre on Wednesday as 21st Century on another of the already famous smashing double bills, starring Ricardo Cortez and June Travis in the leading roles.

One of the unusual features of the plot of this highly involved drama is that while detectives are trying to solve the supposed murder of one man, the "dead" person himself commits a murder, and still another slaying is perpetrated by a couple to cover up what they believe to be their crime in "killing" the first man.

The crimes are all the outgrowth of a family quarrel over the estate of a recently-deceased millionaire who he is still alive, and later the disappearance of a million dollar world war bonds, securities and diamonds. Three grandchildren are the beneficiaries of an early will but a later one cuts off one of them without a cent. Provision also is made for the principal caretaker and his cat.

It is the marks of the muddy paws of a cat on a dead man's neck that ultimately lead to the solution of the crime by Perry Mason, astute lawyer-detective, known to every lover of mystery dramas.

A new and compelling Perry Mason unravels the mystery in the person of Ricardo Cortez. How alert is June Travis in the role of his smart, wise-cracking secretary, Della Street.

Nedda Harrigan who is the millionaire's nurse and the sweetheart of one of his grandsons, is also one of the suspects. George Rosener is the crippled caretaker whose half-wild cat, Climber, plays such an important part in the crimes and their solution.

HE No. 2

Frankly a tear-jerker, "Straight From the Shoulder," furnisher for more than enough real, solid entertainment to satisfy even the most hard-boiled movie fan.

It's a fast-paced yarn of a girl and a man, and a youngster who proves himself a remarkable little shooter who ever came down the pike. The romance of Jacqueline, the liberal dose, by Katherine Locke, late of the legitimate stage, starring her opposite Jack in the film, and handsome, virile Ralph Bellamy, long one of our favorite "he-men."

"Straight From the Shoulder," based on Lucian Cary's sensational magazine serial, Saturday Evening Post tales, shows a quick-thinking girl reporter, who is interviewing a gang killing, sketches the killers for the police, thus identifying them. She is then pursued by the police, vow to "get" him, and are thwarted only by the courage and wit of Jack, his young son, played by David Holt.

Andy Clyde, modern-dress, wise-cracking comedian, is seen in his first straight dramatic role, as the police detective who teaches young David to shoot straight—with guns and with actions.

Ends Today

William Powell and Kay Francis are seen in their greatest story, "One Way Passage." Few films will ever match it, but we believe "One Way Passage" to be one of these, as we brought it back for triumphant return engagement, which ends today with last complete show at 9:00 o'clock.

Auction Nite

Starting this Friday at 9:00 o'clock we are going to present something altogether different on our stage—"Auction Nite." Come and enjoy the laughs; try and outguess the auctioneer. He knows and you sell for cash.

LEFT BY HIT AND RUN MOTORIST

Hamilton, Dec. 15.—(CP)—Police today sought an unidentified motorist who struck Edward Sair, Burlington, and left him unconscious on the side of the Toronto-Hamilton Highway near the Brant Inn, Burlington.

Sair was found by Provincial Constable A. W. Smith and rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital. Although badly bruised, Sair is not believed to have been seriously hurt.

RETIRED ENGINEER DIES

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 15.—(CP)—William Royal, 74, retired Michigan Central Passenger locomotive engineer, died suddenly at his home today. He has been with the railroad 50 years, retiring three years ago.

AT THE BELLE

"Craig's Wife"

Rosalind Russell and John Boles, as Mr. and Mrs. Walter Craig, will be seen in the picturisation of George Kelly's famous Pulitzer-winning play, "Craig's Wife," at the Belle tonight and Wednesday, matinee and evening.

The stars are supported in lesser roles by an imposing cast including Billie Burke, Jane Darwell, Dorothy Wilson, Alma Kruger, Thomas Mitchell, Robert Allen and Raymond Walburn. Dorothy Arzner, foremost woman director in Hollywood, guided the film transcription through its production, based on the screen play by Mary McCall.

"Craig's Wife" marks Miss Russell's first portrayal of a dramatic role. She scores Herculean, the star, who has been in films only since 1931 when she appeared in "No More Ladies," has identified herself with comedy parts. It is said however, that Miss Russell gives the best performance of her career in the emotional title role of "Craig's Wife."

Boles, co-starred with Miss Russell, is making his first important appearance since "A Message to Garcia." He enacts the role of Walter Craig, one that gives him an opportunity finally to display his acting talents. What was the crime of Craig's Wife? Behind drawn curtains the town talked about her! Within her own home the servants muttered through the doors! Here was truly a dynamic drama...baring the life of all womankind... is a screen triumph no wife or sweetheart dare miss! It tells why Craig's wife was the talk of the town! Why Craig's wife drove her kin from her home! Why Craig's wife always kept her door locked!

The play that electrified Broadway and won the Pulitzer prize now lays bare the heart of a woman and her one consuming passion!

"Man Who Lived Twice"

Dramatically telling a tale based on the transmigration of souls, a generous killer into a respectable, honored surgeon, "The Man Who Lived Twice" is a gripping screen play, rich in emotion and pulsepingling as it unfolds, and announced as the second feature attraction at the Belle tonight, it will hold you spellbound with internal forces in its potent, human leading part...the title role ...is taken by that splendid actor, Ralph Bellamy, who, although knowing him to be a killer and a murderer, generously justified in actually remaking a man after the execution, with memory of his former existence obliterated. Bellamy becomes Dr. James Blake, a respectably honorable member of society.

Possibly the most striking situation in the film is that in which Ronald Sinclair (Isabel Jewell) recognises in "Dr. James Blake" (Bellamy), who is attempting to help both the former gangster and hunted murderer who had been her sweetheart. The Belle late World News Events will be exhibited on the same program.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10, the last complete show starts at 2.40, 7.10 and 9.30. "The Man Who Lived Twice" at 2.45 and 8.30.

BALDWIN RECEIVED

London, Dec. 15 (C.N.-Havas).—The address of loyalty to King Edward VIII which the House of Commons adopted last night was presented to the new Sovereign today by Prime Minister Baldwin and 20 members of the Privy Council.

KING EMMANUEL ILL

Rome, Dec. 15 (AP)—King Victor Emmanuel was reliably reported today to be under doctors' care for influenza which has been prevalent in Rome recently.

No official bulletins were issued concerning the health of the 57-year-old monarch, and anyone close to the palace said his indisposition was slight.

WINTER SPORTS MEET IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

Madison Square Garden, home that Tex Rickard built in the upgrade of big money boxing, has housed about every show that can be put on for public entertainment. Now it adds another—a real Alpine sports pantomime that features skiing, skating and dog-sled races all under the Garden roof. This view, which the artist was in progress of, is later taking off from the artificial jump. Huge sacks of ice are ground up to supply the snow. They cost one dollar per sack and about 1,000 sacks needed to ice the jump.

HELEN STEPHENS GIVEN TROPHY

Picked as Outstanding Girl Athlete in United States

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, Dec. 15 (AP)—For her track and field achievements, including National championships as well as Olympic conquests, Helen Stephens, 20-year-old Fulton (Mo.) girl, has been selected as the outstanding feminine athlete of the United States during 1936.

Results in the sixth annual Associated Press sports poll, tabulated today, revealed Miss Stephens the choice of the experts over two rivals, Alice Marble of San Francisco, new tennis queen, and Patricia Stanton, English girl who captured both the British and United States golf championships.

The long-striding Missouri girl, although picked No. one by only 20 among 63 observers, tallied a winning total of 97 points. Miss Marble and Miss Stanton, each with 13 first places, totalled 79 and 56 points, respectively.

Miss Stephens, like Babe Didrikson in 1932, topped the field mainly because of her record-smashing Olympic victories. Helen proved herself the world's fastest all-around runner by capturing the 100-meter dash at Berlin, defeating Poland's Stella Walsh and lowering the record to 11.4 seconds.

CANADIAN OWNERS TO HAVE 4 STARTERS IN SANTA ANITA HANDICAP

Toronto, Dec. 15.—(CP)—Canadians decided to take the field Wednesday of Sir Barton, J. K. L. Ross' great Handicap Star, as they assembled their ponies for the thoroughbreds nominated for the third running of the Santa Anita Handicap, world's richest race. They found the names of 13 Canadian-owned, thoroughbreds to be in.

Canadian owners may make the greatest bid for the twelve purses of the $100,000 handicap to be run at Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 27, since the event was first run. All the six-notch racers on the continent have been nominated and the race is expected with international fervor by the Canadians of thoroughbred racing horses and three or four Englishbreds.

C. O. Hoich of Agincourt, Ont., winner of this year's King's plate, nominated Dyna Cross, King Cross and Kandahar, Eride Seagram, long a power in Canadian turf circles, nominated Gun Shot Pat, Bobbin, Mill Pond, Arabian Myth and Princess Gladys. Major Austin Taylor, of Vancouver, named Indian Broom and Special Agent. Mrs. Jean Beique of Hamilton nominated Greenstone, A. G. Tarn of Winnipeg, Rainbow and Mrs. Frank Perrin of Toronto, Silk Mask.

Whether or not all start depends on performances during the next two months and how they respond to training. It is believed at least four, Indian Broom, Ariel Cross, Stand Pat and Silk Mask are sure pick of the lot will answer the starter's bell the first day of the race.

Of the four only Rushaway, Star of Tarn's stable, was failed to appear. On the strength of Indian Broom, purchased along with Special Agent from Major Beique's stable, and which finished third in the Kentucky Derby last May, appearance on the track next year will be prominent in handy fashion. Ariel Cross and Stand Pat have matched strides in Toronto.

Prosperity note: The Cardinals, who have been playing Sportsman's Park with the Browns, will build their own stadium. Pete Reilly, the fight manager, gave Petey Scalzo, New York lightweight, $1,000 to turn pro and called under the observation. Reilly banner (which Pete promptly did)... John Peers, the Nebraska wrestler keeps busy by racing $1?? hounds and raising turkeys, farming and running a gas station on the side. . . . So far as this column knows, Frank Shaughnessy of the International League is the only baseball league President who wears spats.

Amateur Hockey Association Severs 'Articles of Alliance' With Athletic Union of Canada

Five Year Agreement Will End on January 15

FOUR POINTS ADOPTED

Many Provincial Bodies Join in Support of Action

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—(CP)— The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will sever its five-year-old "Articles of Alliance" with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada a month from today according to an announcement made here last night by Cecil Duncan, President of the hockey body.

The decision, forecast since the union at its Regina annual meeting rejected three or four proposals the Association proffered towards concessions or regret from some union officials, Dr. Keyston of these proposals, although not specifically referred to in the announcement, was believed to have been the main cause of the Association's action.

In a long statement announcing the decision Duncan said: "The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, in accordance with the provisions of its Articles of Alliance with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada has served notice upon the union of the termination of that agreement, effective January 15, 1937.

"The Association has also found the Union to be ineffectual in the matter of administration of amateur rules imposed by the C.A.H.A. the Association therefore believes that a continuation of the affiliation is neither advantageous nor desirable."

Final Decision in 1937

He said the Hockey Association, as a member of the Union, had attempted without success to obtain endorsation for certain proposals which it believed necessary and in accord with modern practices of sport. The proposals, tentatively adopted by the C.A.H.A. at its annual meeting last spring, will come up for final decision in 1937. An apparently insurmountable barrier to the four points brought up at the A.A.U. of C. meeting, which were:

1. That professionals in one sport be considered amateurs in others.

2. That amateurs be allowed compensation for "broken" time.

3. That amateurs be allowed to capitalize on their hockey ability to obtain positions.

4. That amateurs be allowed to compete against professionals.

The last proposal was the only one on which the two bodies could agree.

Discussing other matters, Duncan said the Association "is still and intends to remain the governing body of hockey in Canada."

Not to Affect Alliance

He denied the Association had a binding affiliation with the Union since the Association was the first body and also that its severance of affiliation with the Union would affect International affiliations of the C.A.H.A.

The Association has alliances with the International Allied Federation, governing body of amateur hockey, the British Ice Hockey Association, the United States Hockey Association and the Canadian Amateur Ice Hockey association.

The Ottawa Association brought from Jack Hamilton of Regina, President of the Union, protest that "there need be no quarrel between the C.A.H.A. and the A.A.U. of C. and that they do not concerned there will only be most friendly relations."

He predicted "some hockey will be played under the A.A.U. of C." and that there was much talk of the hockey that both organizations can look after.

Alberta Gives Support

The Alberta Branch of the Association will support the parent body in its decision. "Our Branch has advocated this step for some years and we're going to support it now", President O. J. McDonald of Calgary said.

The Regina Branch will remain affiliated with the Union. President Edward Sinclair commended the decision of his Association, that has, Friday, to that effect.

A. E. Doc. of Winnipeg, President of the Manitoba Branch, said he had stood Province Branch voting against basis in deciding the question of severing affiliation. He would make no comment on his branch's future stand.

The Maritime Branch will "probably" discuss the decision at a meeting Wednesday, according to President Hanson Dowell, who said: "I do not know whether now and Jan. 15 and our policy probably will

LOCAL PUCKSTER WITH UNDEFEATED ST. LOUIS FLYERS

Orlie Mulvihill Plays With Pro. Club That Has Not Lost a Game Yet

SET WORLD'S RECORD

St. Louis, Dec. 15 (CP)—Sinister word reached St. Louis hockey circles today that the American Hockey Association would have decided a court injunction is the only means of stopping the local team.

The Flyers have not been beaten so far this season in 12 starts, scored of 13 victories and two ties is believed here to set a modern record for consecutive victories.

They top the league standing with 28 points and are due to meet Cleveland—and the present runners-up, St. Paul Saints, are far behind with only 10 points. The Flyers have shot 49 goals into the cages of opposing teams, more than twice that scored by any other club. They have had but 19 goals scored on them.

Two veteran forwards—Pete Palangio of North Bay, Ontario, and Oscar Hanson of Minnesota, member of a hockey-playing family—are the big cogs in the attack that has caused other clubs to think serious of "Sinister" Sam Rothschild.

Palangio, who played in the old Can-Pro and International League before coming out to Dix Dean's bailiwick, is the top hand with 12 goals and 10 assists. Hanson has fired 10 goals and provided eight assists.

The "Big Swede" with four brothers who attended Augsburg College, Minneapolis, is the first time as himself, cut considerable ice to the Missouri Mariners as the United States hockey team for the 1932 winter Olympics. The officials were convinced that year for a representative team but they turned down the offer of Eddie Shore's boys. Emery Hansen, youngest member of the family, now plays for Cleveland in the Ontario League.

Two other Minnesota Swedes, Don Ohlen and Ossie Bernard, former members of the now sizzling St. Louis team but it is mainly composed of Canadians who have performed at various times in the Eastern Pro Loop.

Coach of the crack brigade is Johnny Gagnon, who starred with the 500, who played with Pittsburgh's original entry in the National League in 1925-26.

Robert Nelson, the goalie, has scored three shutouts and is the last front of him on defence, he has Joe Matte, Leo Carbol and Swede Halderson to help him. Carbol is also pivot duty while the wings are Palangio, Hanson, Orlie Mulvihill, Gerry Burns, Frank Ingram, Cliff Purpur, Ollie Mulvihill, Walt Haroos and John McDonald.

Joe Louis Throws One Punch Eddie Simms Hits Canvass To Be K.O'D in 18 Seconds

Brown Bomber Scores The Quickets Victory of Entire Career

EARNS $20,000

Simms Carried Fight To Negro Before Being Slapped Down

Cleveland, Dec. 15 (AP) — Joe Louis, ten years ago an Alabama cotton picker, for 10 seconds a deadended another $20,000 to his bankroll today to bring his 1936 ring earnings to $300,000 for six fights.

Twenty thousand dollars for finishing just one devastating left hook that was the sum the frozen-faced Detroit negro received for accomplishing the quickest knockout of his sensational career—paralyzing Cleveland's Eddie Simms in exactly 18 seconds of a bout scheduled to go ten rounds.

The dramatic finish slammed the 11,000 persons in Cleveland's public hall last night. The spectators who paid $50,000 to witness the charity fight sponsored by the Cleveland Press simply settled back in their seats to enjoy the battle before it was over.

Simms, wearing a broken, twisted nose as scars of other battles, fought a fearless, courageous fight before the disastrous punch overtook him.

He came charging out of his corner crouched low, his left hand extended.

Simms landed half-a-dozen blows, first driving lefts to Louis' body and then shifting to the face. Louis danced away with the 196-pound Cleveland heavyweight pressing after him. Simms suddenly lashed out with another left to the face and right to the head.

Moves Like Panther.

Louis took his head for an instant and then, like a panther, he sprang forward. He drove his glove left fist to Simms' jaw and it landed with a thud and with the speed of a bullet.

Simms went down on his back, his legs and arms in the air. He twisted and writhed on the floor of the ring, trying to rise.

He drew his legs under him and then leaned back to clutch the ropes of the ring to bring himself to his feet. Finally, he caught the middle rope and pulled himself up at the count of eight, 26 seconds after the bout started. He was carrying like a drunken man. His eyes were glassy.

Quick-thinking Arthur Donovan of New York, the referee, threw his arms around Simms and waved the Brown Bomber to his corner as Louis was moving in for the kill. It was the first time Simms had been knocked out in 53 battles over a period of five years.

Donovan said he felt justified in stopping the fight because the other blow might have resulted fatally.

It will go down in the record book as a technical knockout.

GROUPINGS FOR CAGE GAME OUT

Juniors Play With R.M.C. And Queens And Int. Have Four Teams

Groupings for the two Belleville basketball teams were announced yesterday by Phil Brokel, Eastern Ontario convener, following the annual meeting last week. The Dean-

Juniors will be grouped with R.M.C. and Queen's juniors, with the Intermediates facing Queen's University, Royal Military College and Kingston "Y".

Basketball followers will have their first opportunity to witness the hardwood pastime of the season on Friday night at the Collegiate Gymnasium when the first game of the City Championship Basketball Series will be played. The Deacon Juniors will meet the Y.M.C.A. Intermediates in the opening game on Friday, and the game promises plenty of action and keen competition.

Locals Open Season

Although the Juniors will be handicapped by lack of experience and general lineage of the hoop game, they will, nevertheless, hold their own, when it comes to speed and ball-handling ability. The squad is the same, which competed in the entire season last year, advancing to the Ontario finals before being eliminated by a Toronto team.

The Junior squad will also measure up favorably in height with the older Intermediate squad, with such players as Ralph McCabe at centre; "Ace" Robertson, Ed Moir and Jack Peoples on the defense; Jack Clark, "Art" Gray, Jack Dickens and Abe Tobe on the forward lines.

The game will mark the first appearance of the highly-rated Intermediate Deacon-Y squad. With "Red" Gordon, former University of Toronto basketball star under Coach Lou Hayman, leading the attack, much is expected of the yellow-clad squad this year. Other seasoned players who will face the opening whistle are Herb Burley, Ed Wickerson, Art Cole, Al Faulkner, Owen Cole, Bruce Countryman, Jack Edwards, Ernie Smith, Art McNeil and Art Sprauton.

"CLASSIEST TEAM IN HOCKEY" DEFEAT TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS IN OVERTIME

The result: New York Rangers, known as the classiest team in hockey, downed the Maple Leafs in Toronto 5-3 in overtime. Three times the Leafs came from behind to tie the score, but in overtime Rangers scored twice to sew up the game. This final goal put Toronto at bottom of the Canadian section of the N. H. L. PRINCETON TEAM QUESTION MARK

Frank Frederickson, Formerly of Winnipeg Falcons is Coach

Princeton, N.C., Dec. 15 (CP)—A large question mark posed alongside Princeton University's hockey squad today as the Tiger hockeymen prepared for the opening of the newly formed International Intercollegiate Hockey League.

Generally ranked with the strongest of United States college teams Princeton may finish the first forthcoming season with the honor of being not only the strongest but south of the border but even more potent than University of Toronto, University of Montreal, McGill University of Montreal or Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., the Canadian entrants in the new circuit. On the other hand Princeton may drop below par with Yale, Harvard or Dartmouth, the other Ivy League competitors.

Frank Frederickson, Winnipeg Falcon ace pivot and later a National League star, is the old master upon whose teachings the Tiger hockey fraternity is placing great faith. Frederickson has only one in that great Canadian club, that won the World's Olympic title without the loss of a game back in 1920, spent the winters of 1933-34-35 teaching Tiger hockey enthusiasts the fundamentals of skouting, position-playing and deadly combination.

Fulcon Frank did a fine job with the Princeton sextet last year, his first here. Departure of the seniors centres the spotlight on the youngsters and their leader, Coach Frederickson with success. The candidates, none older than 21, average 5 feet 10 inches in height and 170 pounds in weight, had at least one or two full seasons with the Nassau Tigers and are expected to reveal more of the Frederickson touch. Captain Jack Dickson and Abe Tobe on the forward lines.

The game will mark the first appearance of the highly-rated Intermediate Deacon-Y squad. With "Red" Gordon, former University of Toronto basketball star under Coach Lou Hayman, leading the attack, much is expected of the yellow-clad squad this year. Other seasoned players who will face the opening whistle are Herb Burley, Ed Wickerson, Art Cole, Al Faulkner, Owen Cole, Bruce Countryman, Jack Edwards, Ernie Smith, Art McNeil and Art Sprauton.

SECRETARY OF BRANCH REGRETS LOOP ACTION

Ottawa, Dec. 15 (CP)—Secretary H. Gordon Young of the Eastern Ontario Branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, said last night "it is really unfortunate that the C.A.H.A. is severing its affiliation with the A.A.U. of C."

"The Eastern Ontario Branch regrets the incidents leading up to this action," he said, "being in close contact with the leading officers of the C.A.H.A. I am reasonably sure that the rejection of the four points has been the only reason for the C.A.H.A. taking this action.

"The break does not occur for 30 days, so the Eastern Ontario Branch will do everything in its power to bring the necessary legislatory regulations satisfactory to both parties."

MAROONS HAVE CHANCE TO TIE

Canadiens And Amerks Would Have to Lose Tonight

By A. E. Pulford, Canadian Press Staff Writer

It doesn't seem possible but it is a fact Montreal Maroons can hop into a tie for first place in the International Hockey League's Canadian Division if tonight's jousting breaks just the right way.

A week ago Tommy Gorman's men were keeping Toronto Maple Leafs company in the cellar but they've picked up since going on the right into the thick of the fight for the top spot.

If course, Montreal Canadiens will have to lose to Detroit in Montreal's Forum and Rochester Amerks have to drop their game to Bruins in Boston. That's all quite possible.

What doesn't seem so likely is that Maroons will beat Lester Patrick's Americans in New York. The whole business is a pretty problem for even a formful to work out but he can't be sued for hoping.

Red Wings Have to Win

With the three top teams in each division working some shuffling about in the standings is likely but it probable will be less violent than a sudden Maroon rush to a spot beside Canadiens. Detroit will have to win to be sure of keeping out of the dungeon, who trail them by only a point.

Toronto and Chicago Black Hawks are the only teams out of action. Leafs rest until they start their home series with Americans in New York Thursday and Toronto Saturday. Black Hawks possibly will practice shooting until they meet Americans in Chicago Sunday.

Two star attractions are billed for Montreal when the Leafs-Habitants take on Wings, Detroit have the current scoring leader in Larry Aurie, who is leading Lawrence Schriner of Americans by two points now.

Canadiens again will show Geo. Hainsworth, one-time Habitant and recently released by Leafs, in goal. Wilf Cude, the regular netminder, underwent an operation on his injured shoulder yesterday and will not be in shape for tonight's contest. Hainsworth played for Canadiens when they tied 2-2 with Maroons last Saturday and Indications are he still has plenty of good games left despite his 43 years.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Some people might think being a Boxing Commissioner is a soft job, but Ottawa's one has redressed. In January 1934, John McNeil, Deputy Boxing Commissioner in New York State, took up his pencil, snatched a piece of paper, and commenced figuring. The result was astounding—during the 12 years on the job as Commissioner he had witnessed 30,000 bouts and over 60,000 rounds of boxing. If you average three minutes to a round, Mr. McNeil saw 3,750 hours as a boxing specialist. For further statistics and had he witnessed those bouts for successive he would have had to sit at ringside for 156 1-4 days, and there are no cushions supplied at boxing matches.

Phil Brokel, former skydiver at the rather of the Belleville and later the Kingston Y.M.C.A. was re-elected to again be Eastern Ontario Amateur Basketball Association. Four teams are entered in the intercity series—Belleville with the Junior series in all probability the junior group will be known as "A" and "B" as was the case last year. Belleville, Napanee and one of the Kingston teams will be in group "A" with the remaining Kingston team in group "B" other group. The customary play-off between the group winners would then follow the regular round-up schedule.

Instead of sponsoring a juvenile league this season, as has been the Deacon A. C. will centre their activities around a junior A.A.U. team. Belleville Deacon juveniles won the E.O.H.A. and advanced to the provincial finals, where they were eliminated by the fast Toronto A.A. All of the players are eligible for intermediates on reaching junior age next season, and will form the nucleus of the Deacon intermediate training and conditioning in the "Y" house league, with games scheduled for each Wednesday night at the Armouries. Four of last city league team, plus another an equal number of juniors and intermediates on each squad, have been promised by Deacon officials as the result some spirited cage games each Wednesday evening.

The demon Kingston sportswriting twins still entertain feelings of annually towards the local hockey club for last season they tried to shake down their activities in the Kingston City League. Now the Limestone City sport moguls have altogether other ideas—namely, to form a Kingston days of the Kingston City loop when that organization played to a mere handful of fans. Then came the Belleville Cities Service and the Kingston loop, but it is best continued attraction ever to appear in the Jock Harty Arena, to the tune of capacity crowds. They're not only played to packed houses but have been forced to move from a town loop to a formidable district league. It reports are true attendance at the games in Kingston today resemble somewhat those of the days when the Cities Service reign. Who knows, maybe the Cities Service will eventually come to the reserve of the Kingston loop, but would it not be a better idea to have good hockey right here at home and organize a pre-season loop?

Members of the local Rotary Club were privileged to hear a splendid sport talk by Elwood Sargent, the General Manager of the Canadian National Exhibition at their weekly luncheon meeting today. Mr. Sargent related many interesting anecdotes of his experiences in connection with many major sporting events throughout the world. His most interesting topic was concerning the heavyweight fighting ranks. Mr. Sargent is of the opinion that Jack Johnson, the colored champion, was the greatest heavyweight fighter ever to step into the ring of boxing glories. Of course many may differ with Mr. Sargent's opinion, but Johnson has always favored the Manassa Mauler, Jack Dempsey, as the greatest. Others favor Jeffries, while still many old timers cling to John L. Sullivan, however, he is not considered also. In conclusion, Mr. Sargent stated that boxing is not really worth while, he defined it—"Boxing is the poor man's university and blessed is the man who receives its lesson. It teaches him the value of health, how to be clean and worth-while statement that every young aspiring athlete should well remember.

That old saying of "there were but two kinds of liars" surely came true last evening when Jimmy Gorman, Detroit Brown Bomber, blasted Eddie Simms, a hometown boy at Cleveland. It was a case of Louis bit Simms and Simms bit his finger. Whether Louis' victory last night will assist him in a shot at the heavyweight crown or not is highly questionable. Experts are of the opinion that Schmeling, who knocked wins the crown he will retire or defend it against some other contend-

Firemen Holding Open House For Residents to View Toys

Santa Claus to Visit 600 Children Through Their Efforts

That happy look one sees on the faces of Fire Chief William Lynch, Assistant Fire Chief Gerald Rogers and their merry crew of firefighters is not because they have been instrumental in the saving of hundreds of dollars worth of city property during the past year. It is a look of proud achievement of a job well and truly done for a cause, which strikes a responsive chord in each and every one of us.

In this city, as in practically all cities in this Dominion of ours are hundreds of children to whom Christmas will be just another day. Kiddies who on Christmas morning can see wistfully at an empty stocking hanging by a chimney which Santa Claus apparently forgot. Their hearts will be broken. But here is the picture:

"It is Christmas morning. Upstairs in a darkened room the early morning sun is endeavoring to push a cheery beam through a dirty window. On a broken bed two sleepy children suddenly awaken. "Dolly" whispers one. "Gee, it's Christmas. I bet Santy has been here. Let's go down and see." Now wide-eyed with excitement, the kiddies jump from their bed and tear down rickety stairs to the room below. They gaze at the place where they had hung torn stockings the night before. But nothing meets their gaze, the stockings are empty. Not a toy greets their astonished gaze. Childish eyes grow wide in amazement. Then slowly drops as the tears flow down grimy little cheeks.

"Gee, do you suppose he has forgotten us," queries one through trembling lips. Little forms are racked with sobs of disappointment, as they slowly turn away. In another room a brave father and mother, torn tear drenched faces toward each other. "Gosh, but its tough" murmurs the man. "If it wasn't for the kids we could stand it alright."

Situation Different

But this situation will not develop in Belleville if the Fire Department of this city have their way. A few weeks ago these fine men launched an appeal for broken down toys. They held a tag day and a ball and realized a handsome sum of money. All the proceeds derived from these financial ventures have been invested in toys which will gladden the hearts of many a poor child on the great morning. And this is not all that has been done. The firefighters in between calls have devoted their time and energy to the repair of the broken toys which have been donated to their fine cause. Some of the men have remained in their leisure hours in order, that these children will not be disappointed on Christmas. But, we are sorry to say, that they lack sufficient toys yet. Their present stock will be sufficient supply for four hundred children and they have six hundred on their list. And they are asking that if you and you and you have any broken toys in the attic, cellar or garage, won't you please let them know and they will call and get them.

This writer gasped in amazement when he paid a visit to a room above No. 2 fire station this morning and saw the magnificent display of toys the firemen have on hand. The place is a veritable toyland with toys, trinkets, wearing apparel, dolls and everything dear to the hearts of the children piled high on tables and on the floor. They concentrate their in fine variety is there, big mama dolls, little dolls, black dolls, red ones, sturdy toy soldiers freshly painted standy proudly at attention. Bicycles, tricycles, hockey sticks, packs, mechanical marvels and mysteries, dozens of pairs of mittens and woollen gloves, games in boxes and by themselves, miniature Meccano, fifty-tonnik table sets and a thousand and one other childish delights too numerous to mention here. The room is a riot of color and a fine testimony to the splendid work done by the Belleville Fire Department in their efforts to make Christmas at least a little brighter for a number of children.

And on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week just before the time comes to pack the toys for delivery, Fire Chief Lynch and his merry men are holding "Open House" at No. 2 Fire Hall when the general public is cordially invited to inspect the splendid display at toys. There you will see the colorful semi-culmination of weeks of hard work on the part of the firemen.

Fire Chief Lynch again launches an appeal for broken toys. The phone at either fire station and your toys will be called for. And don't forget to drop in and inspect the fine exhibit at Fire Station No. 2 on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and evenings. Go at any time, there is always someone there.

Band Will Be There

And as an added attraction, and by way of doing their bit for the good cause, Lieut. Fred Jobson and the members of the Belleville Municipal Band will offer a free band concert in No. 2 Hall on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, to which the general public is cordially invited.

MEDIATION PLAN REPLIES SOUGHT

Gen. Franco However Says Mediation is Quite Impossible

London, Dec. 14.—(CP Cable)—The International non-intervention Committee will consider replies from Germany, Italy and Portugal to the Anglo-French proposals for mediation of the Spanish Civil War.

The replies, while not rejecting the idea of mediation, call attention to the practical difficulties in the way.

The aim of both the British and French governments is to link mediation proposals with tightening the non-intervention agreement in such a way as to bring volunteers within its scope.

Franco Opposed

Salamanca, Spain, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Mediation of the Spanish Civil War is "impossible," officials of Fascist general headquarters said today.

"The Nationalists (Fascists) are engaged in a struggle which admits no possibility of compromise," a spokesman said.

"General Franco (Gen. Francisco Franco, Insurgent Commander) has declared several times that no arrangement is possible between the rabble and us, between traitors to their country and us.

"The war can only end by victory at the point of a bayonet or by the unconditional surrender of the Socialist Government."

Germany's Attitude

Berlin, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The German Government stood ready today to consider with other governments any concrete proposal to bring an end to the Spanish Civil War.

Germany raised the question, however, in her reply to the Franco-British International Mediation proposal, whether conciliation could be achieved between Spanish Fascists and Socialists.

Germany also asked whether it was not too late to stop foreign volunteers from joining both sides in the Spanish conflict.

The Insurgent Junta has been recognized by Germany as the Government of Spain.)

CAR LEAPS BANK DRIVER DROWNS

Fred Parker, Lindsay, Found Upright Behind Wheel

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 14 (CP)—Fred Parker, elderly Lindsay resident, drowned in Scugog River at the government dock today when he drove his small truck in which he delivers groceries for a number of Lindsay stores over the corner embankment into 19 feet of water.

Parker's truck sped down a steep, ice-covered hill at the approach of the Lindsay River bridge directly off the roadway and plunged over the bank into the river which flows swiftly at the point and is not coated with ice.

The united efforts of the fire department and a tow truck raised the truck sufficiently to enable firemen to remove the body from the cab where it was still in an upright position behind the wheel. After an examination of the body by Coroner Dr. F. W. Logan it was removed to the morgue.

Mrs. Mabrie McGinnis, an eyewitness, said "I heard the truck and happened to look over toward the river and saw it dropping on to the water front and first."

Harry O'Keefe and Lorne Grosale, a local truck driver, rushed to the scene before the waters had scarcely closed over the submerged truck and did all in their power to release the struggling man from the cab without success.

It was at first feared that there were two men in the truck but it was later learned that Harvey Smith, a young man who assists Mr. Parker in his delivery business and who usually rides with him was not there as was had been sent by his employer on another message.

London, Dec. 15—(CP Cable) — The Royal Standard flew over Buckingham Palace where King George VI was expected to transact official business before actually residing there. No flag flew over 145 Picadilly, the King's home as Duke of York.

The great grey Palace, which is the official home of British Kings, was built originally for the Duke of Buckingham in 1703 and purchased by George I I I in 1762.

No existing Palace or Royal Residence of Great Britain was built specially for the Royalty — except Windsor Castle.

Balmoral was purchased by the Prince Consort for Queen Victoria early in their married life. Sandringham was purchased by King Edward VII.

Marlborough house was given to the Duke of Marlborough, by the famous General, while Kensington Palace, where several royal families now reside, was bought by William of Orange from the Earl of Nottingham in 1689.

Hampton Court, that immense Tudor pile, was seized from Wolsey by Henry VIII when the Cardinal fell from grace. Save for the state rooms which are open to the public, the remainder is split into suite, which are tenanted under the King's pleasure by men and women who have been in the good service in a variety of directions.

Mutilated Body Found Stuffed in Old Bag

Wildwood, N. J., Dec. 15—(AP)—Investigators were confronted with a mystery in the death of an unidentified woman whose mutilated body was found stuffed into two Canadian potato bags.

In an attempt to determine the manner of death, they planned chemical tests of burns which covered the body.

Authorities hoped to find a clue in the potato sacks which were stamped "Grown in Canada" Potato Beg Company, Canada." The only other clue was the woman's wedding ring.

Coroner Benjamin Ingersoll said the body was found in a wood at Dias Creek near here.

HOW JOAN LOVED THRU

Chapter 39

Elmer Parcher's Surrender

For a moment terrible and depressing as a bad dream, Joan stared back at the man, her brows lifted like a child's. She was stunned by the cruelty of the disappointment. Elmer was speaking but his words spattered meaningless as rain about her. Only when she heard Hugh's name did Joan's thoughts become painfully sharp.

"I got that letter he wrote Sewell; you see, he left town and didn't leave a forwarding address."

"Hugh left town!" Joan said sharply.

"Sure, that is just what I've been telling you. See, Joan, aren't you glad I came? Didn't you want to see me?"

"Yes, oh—yes, but tell me about Hugh."

"Why, like I said, I dropped in to see Charley Ellis the clerk at the post-office, you know."

Elmer stopped in his slow country way and looked at Joan inquiringly. "Say, Joan, you'd better sit down. You look sort of peaked, like you might faint."

Joan sat down suddenly, the rusty springs of the creaking sofa sang for her.

"I'm all right; Go on."

"Well, Sewell was out of town and Charley had been saving his mail. When I asked him he said: 'Lucky, Elmer, isn't that Joan's handwriting?' I says, 'It sure is,' and I better you wrote Sewell."

Joan's eyes flashed as Elmer Parcher paused. "Well, I says, 'Charley, I'll call them dying words.' Charley went sideways at the girl, and thought and I says, 'Well, I'll tell you, Joan. You can't blame me, all the town figured on that."

"They would," Joan returned bitterly. "Go on."

"Well, I was writing to Sewell sort of put it straight and I opened the letter, like, to see what it was where you were."

"You read my letter—my letter to Hugh?" Joan's cheeks were burning. "Beautiful, beautiful privacy scorched over the man's face.

Elmer shifted to the other foot. "Oh, Joan don't get sort of angry passion, "but I'm sure you know I love you! Sewell says you from me—"

"That's absurd," Joan interrupted hotly, "I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth!" Suddenly she was standing, staring with eyes gone sick with shame at the man who confessed to reading her love letter.

"Sort of independent, talking of marriage now—aren't you?" Oh, I don't say if you had good reason, but—where dare you?" Joan's hands were clenched, her breast rising and falling rapidly, but Elmer's scorn withering him. But all this was unheard; within was the sick realization that Elmer Parcher could say this to her and she could do nothing about it!

Elmer had the grace to look a trifle downcast and began to bolster up his wavering confidence. "Joan was paying for the hard bright scorn with which she had always treated him. Those awful times had shut out dances, auditorium and picnics, ended in tears from the home he was expected, leaving the sulky jewel to console him.

It was something to have Joan at a disadvantage, and the knowledge that all the power mounted to action of his power clutched his head like wine.

"I mean you don't see how things are changed, Joan. When you were so high and mighty with all the fellows in town running after you, you made me feel humble like. But now, when Sewell's thrown you over, when you had to leave town and come to Sewell, Elmer's chin had swept around the dingy room.

Joan's cheeks were scarlet—"Dare to leave town! The subtle insult of that hurt in a way she had thought Elmer Parcher could never hurt her. The sight of him, balancing on his fat seat, a smug smile dawning on his face, drove her to madness. "Get out," she said in a low tense voice.

"Huh? The man's complacent; rocking came to a pause.

"Say, Joan, that high and mighty stuff doesn't go any more."

"I told you to get out" Joan was shaking with rage; "if you don't, I'll make you."

Insolent in his strength, Elmer grinned. "Say, Joan, be sensible. We got to talk turkey, you and me. I didn't blame you for high-hatting me before this, but it don't go any more. No, you don't have to come back to Dorcey—I guess after that letter I wouldn't want to. You get a nice place here, like you wrote about to Sewell, and I'll put up for it. I can come down almost every month—" Elmer stopped, frightened in spite of himself by the girl before him. Joan's face was not scarlet now, but white.

"You—you—" her voice was a shocked whisper. Desperately her eyes went around the room, as though searching for a way to drive him out. The convulsive clutching of her arms brought a sound, a crackling. She was reminded of the eggs. They flashed a frantic means of escape to her mind.

"Are you going to get out?"

Elmer Parcher stared disbelievingly. Joan had snatched an egg and was holding it threateningly aloft. Unconsciously, he ducked.

"My, say, Joan—" Elmer got no further. A sharp crack upon the door behind him a spatter of dripping yellow—Joan had discharged it.

Elmer tried to speak but another missile, ominously close this time—Joan's aim was getting better—struck him ignominously bolting from the room.

A third yellow stain spread over the door Elmer had slammed behind him and in time.

Joan dropped the balance of the eggs on the table, then hastily fetched a damp cloth and wiped up the signs of battle, all the time shaking with unconsolidable laughter which became mingled with long shuddering sobs. She was in a fury of escape by the time Elmer Parcher paused. "Dirty egg," Elmer had called them "dig eyes." Joan's flying hands—her spirit had died, that only her body was lashed on by the terrible becoming thing. Up to now, the excitement of her situation had kept her going. Now the dark and faithful hope of Hugh had glowed like a golden light through the grey days.

But now she had been struck the cold wall of reality. She sensed for the first time that she was truly all alone. Alone—the word was a bitterness which welled like a dark poison within her.

The hectic excitement—the false hope had burned Joan out, she was cold—physically and mentally chilled with the terrible cold of self-pity. Above all—that desperate shock —Elmer the despised, should have dared to say what he did.

Joan sat still with self-loathing; she shrank sensitively from the absurd stirring stare of a passing man. Was there some mark on her, invisible yet apparent to men, something which put her outside the pale of polite, nice girls?

The tatin of it clung like an evil shadow all day. Joan felt on the defensive against the hurrying of personal crowds. What a terrifying number of humans, all scurrying by intent on their own business. Not one to glance at her with kindness or friendliness; no one to care where a girl named Joan Ormond lived or died. She canvassed the stores, sliding from the exclusive and expensive ones where fashionably dressed salesladies stood and sifted the cheap basements where tired girls wilted in the close air.

This was a time of slight business depression. Nowhere did they want help. Joan's inexperienced help. She loathed herself on, fear of the city gnawing at her heart. Such a city!—a clanking, grinding automaton, rearing with energy, dangerous to one who did not know how to work the gears. She dogged her feet at it until they hurt and the streets became canyons of shadow running between the tall buildings. Stores and offices were disgorging their crowds. It was too late to search further.

But at the thought of returning to her dismal room, Joan's heart sank. Somewhere, nothing could reach her, no hope, nor help—not life itself.

She walked aimlessly away from the turmoil of the business section and found herself near one of the large downtown hotels. Through its big plate-glass windows she got a glimpse of inviting drapes and soft lights. Almost defiantly she entered.

The lobby was crowded. Women in chattering tea-groups or swathed "dates"—masculine, out-of-town, in the green, brown and wet chairs. Exquisitely gowned women, in furs and rippling chiffons, expensive and heady perfumes..... lovely silken ladies whose every movement was more than Joan's entire costume. Ladies, correct and secure, because they were critical eyes.

But the men's frank stares told Joan that she was charming and slim and desirable; that city men were no different than Elmer Parcher than Hugh, whose gaze had turned to blue flame at her nearness. Her eyes, a moment before the wistful grey eyes of a child, narrowed scornfully as she passed and dropped down upon the divan.

Joan was so tired that the scene before her became a glittering panorama without meaning. It was that strange sixth sense, telling that watchful eyes were upon her, which stung Joan out of her lethargy. Across the room a girl was staring pointedly at her. As their eyes met, Joan was astonished to see her rise and approach.

The astonishment deepened as the girl dropped down beside her. Elmer Cramer who used to work at the cigar counter at the National Hotel in Dorceyville! But such a changed Elmer! She had always dressed in such a way that the town youths had winked broadly at each other when they danced with her, and the drummers had leaned familiarly over the counter to make purchase. But this was a metropolitan Elmer, dressed with a richness and taste which Joan's eyes to widen.

Aware of the sensation she was causing, Elmer sat all disregarding with it. Elmer complacently settled down for her shoulders. She was not a pretty, pert brunette, with an inviting figure which would some day be soft and shapely.

Joan Ormond! I knew I wasn't dreaming." Emmer poring with consternation in an excited flood and Joan found herself gratefully answering him.

In Dorceyville, Joan would have been ashamed to be seen with Elmer Cramer, but the city had brought a change in Joan's outlook. She was pathetically grateful for the other girl's interest.

Elmer's recital ended in a tired sigh. Emmer nodded sharply. "Just the same, I'm sorry, Joan, I am. Well I guess I'll have to take you in hand."

Chapter 12

The Soft Lap of Luxury

There was a moment when the two girls looked searchingly at each other. Mentally they were adjusting themselves. Emmer Cramer had always been quick to take advantage of her beauty, her popularity, particularly of the envious looks of the stared politics in Dorceyville. It was not unpleasant to find her here, so completely alone. She felt for Joan, was secretly perched on the edge of her queer throne.

Tiring and depressed though she was, Joan drew the words of the tattered pride about her. She glossed over the episode with Hugh, and the sordid details to speak of this to this shrewd-eyed girl.

"I'm tired of it all and thought I would leave home," she ended.

Watching her narrowly, Emmer formed her own opinion. A man, of course. Joan was only a child when a girl ran away from home.. Then was the faintest bit of pose about Joan, Emmer decided, to keep up an expensive appearance.

The dark girl shot shot a strange look at Joan's silken garments, then toward with the cluster of orchids on her fur. "Well—I have done nicely, I'm glad," she returned noncommittally. "Of course, right now there's an out of work but I have something to go on. It won't put me out in the least, I'd like to have you—" Emmer stopped—"no one have seen a fully good times. I like to travel with another girl, sometimes it's easier to make date for two." Emmer sighed. "I take to go with a blond, too; we make good foils for each other and men like a choice."

Joan was only half listening. She was busy turning over this windfall in her hand. Emmer Cramer had always been suspiciously regarded by girls of Joan's class at home. But this was not Dorceyville—and she had to do something, didn't she? Her money was practically gone and more overwhelming than this fact, was the unutterable disgust at the thought of returning to the dim, dingy room, made unbearable by the suffering of the last two days and by Elmer Parche's taunts Emmer Cramer saw Joan weakening and brought all her eloquence to bear. She was determined to have Joan, high-and-highly Joan Ormond, staying with her. It gave her a sense of power and revenge to cap a few old Dorceyville scores.

In the end, Joan rose obediently. "Well—I—It is awfully good of you. I'm sure, Emmer, I will come and stay—for a while anyway; and when I get work I'll make it all right with you." But Joan would not go with Emmer go out to the house with her to get her grip. It was only temporary, she told herself as she walked alone.

Surely, something large downtown hotels. Through its big plate-glass windows, she got a glimpse of inviting drapes and soft lights. Almost defiantly she entered.

The lobby was crowded. Women in chattering tea-groups or swathed "dates"—masculine, out-of-town, in the green, brown and wet chairs. Her eyes, a moment before the wistful grey eyes of a child, narrowed scornfully as she passed and dropped down upon the divan.

Joan was so tired that the scene before her became a glittering panorama without meaning. It was that strange sixth sense, telling that thing."

Emmer's eyes gratified Joan narrowly as she was called from the room. The girl continued to hang her modest wardrobe in the closet. Emmer drew her silken Chinese robe around her and snuggled deeper in the easy chair, a strange faint smile touching her lips.

Joan had expected to walk across receiving the bitter events of the day but after a luxurious bath, which seemed to wash away the last vestiges of the lodging house she hated, she felt asleep and her last conscious thoughts were flooded with the silken feel of the quilt, the cool softness of the pillow under her head, and the heavy fragrance of Black Narcissa, breathing from the vanity table beside the bed.

When Joan woke the sun was streaming under the blind and for a morning was half gone. For more than half an hour she lay revelling in the warmth and luxury of this awakening. It was like being born anew. Joan the chill and dreadful ones of the grey house were fading from her mind and further away of all, was the memory of the mean little room at Dorceyville, a dreamlike now as though it had never existed.

Then a new Joan Ormond, older, sadly wiser, a Joan Ormond who knew that life often hurt—and defied it to hurt her further.

By the time Emmer had awakened, by the time Joan had taken their baths and eaten breakfast, it was afternoon. Emmer was dressing for work today, Joan decided.

The shrill peal of the telephone startled Joan out of ruffled dark hair and silken negligee, into the mirrored hall to come back with a maid following close on the heels of her pink satin mules.

Chapter 13

Andy Cotter's Party

The man who followed Emmer back into the kitchen was pudgy and middle-aged with small eyes which glittered with a sort of possessive light whenever they fell on Emmer's gleaming white shoulders. At such times, his mouth, ordinarily tightly closed as a steel trap, sagged, and sometimes he furtively licked his lips. Entirely unembarrassed by his inadequate silken robe which she wore, Emmer introduced him.

"This is Andrew Cotter—Andy, himself! And, Andy, this is a girl friend from my old home town—Joan Ormond."

Joan who had instinctively wrapped the thin peach silk negligee she wore about herself, gave a cool nod, interrupting the other girl:

"Andrew Cotter—Beatrice Allen."

Why Joan had done it she could not exactly have told. It was not snobbishness which prompted her, was some fastidious instinct buried deep in her nature, some warning protective instinct which did not want to have the name of Joan Ormond linked with this place—and perhaps, with Emma Cramer.

Under Emmer's derisive glance, Joan flushed a flush which deepened at the look in Andy Cotter's eyes as he flicked his tongue. "Oh, yes! Miss Allen."

The by-play was lost on the man. Mr. Cotter seemed amazingly at home. He sprawled in a large spindle-legged chair which threatened to collapse under his weight, while his grey eyes moved lazily over Joan's face and down the long slim line of her body.

"Beatrice—eh! Kind of a mouthful to call a little girl like you. Better's eyes went up again to the ruffled golden hair. "Blondy—that's a better name for you, guess I'll call you Blondy."

Joan's spine started to stiffen, both at the familiar patronage of his tone and because he was so unpleasantly like the man she had sat on the porch of the National Hotel and avoiding meaning it as she went by. The next moment, however, came that he was a different individual. She was not in Dorceyville now—other times, other manners!

Joan initiated Emmer Cramer's easy manner and laughed impersonally at Mr. Cotter's feeble pleasantries. With the air of a magician pulling a rabbit out of his hat, he produced a flask from his hip pocket and Emmer hurried out to get the cluttered drainboard while she contributed the last share to the conversation in a shrill voice flung back over her shoulder.

Andy Cotter was loudly enthusiastic. "Say, this is great, you stayin here with Emmer? Glad she's got a friend—man from out of town come down to the city on business. You'll make a hit with him, Blondy. What do you say we make up a party for tonight? Emmer, you get a pile into my car and take a run down the block with me and I'll purchase a place to dance and eat along the line."

"But I should get out and look for some sort of work—" Joan was beginning, when Emmer Cramer interrupted, shrilly impatient: "Oh, piffle, let it go. It's too late today anyway."

It was easy to be overpersuaded. In the easier hours in the bottom of her heart, Joan did not want to go out and look for work. Too impudge too easily discouraged, she wanted to drift along in this pleasant Gulf Stream of fate which had caught her up. The gin flizzes, were softening the sharp edges, Andrew Cotter was not so coarse now; Emmer's shrill laugh did not jar so much; best of all that aching feeling of betrayal in her heart was being stilled. A great recklessness took possession of Joan; time to look at tomorrow—play today.

An hour later, dressed in clothes and furs borrowed from Emmer, Joan was handed into Cotter's car.

Joan felt that she had lost something of her old identity with her name. Joan Ormond with her hoped and dreams and childish boasts had disappeared; Beatrice Allen—Blondy—who had appeared out of thin air was self-possessed, a trifle cynical. Beatrice Allen could do things Joan Ormond would never do. She did not see it as her first surrender to the down through the city which had taken on some gilded and mirabolous colours. A Spanish city, a pleasant, exciting city to one who viewed it from the padded interior of an expensive limousine instead of pushing her way wearily through the city's crowds on foot. Joan knew that Joan because as gay as Emmer, relighting her two men with youthful zest, with her flushed and bright eyes and if there was a slightly acidic edge to her gaiety, no one cared, least of all Joan.

Joan felt that she looked considerably over 40, whom they had left at the door. Her hair was entranced with Joan. The party quick ened into tempo when they reached the Silver Slipper, a night club where they took dinner and his ad-vances of Andrew Cotter's type and the manly fastidiousness of her more than once caused Joan to flinch away from his too-fervent attentions. Once as she and Emmer powdered their faces in the dressing-room, she confided, "Somehow he rather frightens me—his hands are so hot and the things he says."

"Oh, will you probably won't see him after tonight, he's leaving for home," but inwardly Emmer Cramer studied Joan's unconscious profile with a certain calculation. Her violet eyebrows raised in faint derision at the slim ringless hands which she clutched. What if Sir Rich

DAILY SHORT STORY

Preston's Victory in Love

By H. Louis Raybold

To watch Preston frisking about the baseball diamond, garbed fantastically in the latest Sophomore mode, feathered hat and alpenstock and a Tyrolese mountaineer, one would back any wager that the old fire was revivified, after a ten-year's absence, some of his great defeat. Yet such was the case, and Preston despite the contrary and rebellious spirit of a spirit in accord with the symbols of his class, was experiencing an inward yearn at every reminder of a time long past but still very dear.

For Preston's downfall had not been schoolastic. In the contrary, he was an honor man and a member of one of those two fraternities composed of pillars in the realms of science. No, Preston had graduated brilliantly. The soul which had eaten into his soul had been contained in the parting words of Elizabeth Rogers, the daughter of his favorite professor, whom he had masterfully appreciated, as far as parental authority would permit, from the evening of the evidently reception to the freshmen to the final midnight frolic of his senior class party.

"No, Preston," she had said with a firm shake of her head. "You haven't in you to be everything that I would desire, but I do not think you have yet realized your opportunities. I have tried to show you time and time again that I did not care for you as I should, but the very fact you would not understand is an illustration of what I mean. You can't successfully conceive of things going any way but your way. You won't be successful until you have learned to stand up under defeat."

Preston took been cruelly hurt at first, then blindly angry, immediately after commencement. Mrs. George Huffman had charge of the meeting and the theme was "Jesus". Mrs. S. A. Ashley gave the Devotional, Satire the topic being Jesus in the Villages, Jesus' love of Nature, Short Bible passages being read by Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Corrigal. Short prayers were offered by Mrs. Lowry and Mrs. Dafoe. The president Mrs. Hamm took charge of the business period. After singing a hymn, Mrs. Herb Bailey very capably took charge of the Study Book "Life in Rural Communities" followed by discussion. Mizpah closed with prayer by Mrs. Kennedy. A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. F. Ashley and Mrs. R. Bailey.

The many friends of a former Madoc young man, Mr. Mervyn Rutherford, will be pleased to learn that he was elected a member of the Older Boys' Parliament of South Simcoe by an overwhelming vote of 112 to 30.

Daughter of Former Madocer Married in Vancouver

Legal and social circles of Vancouver and Victoria were particularly interested in the wedding that took place Saturday evening between Josephine, eldest daughter of his honor Judge Andrew M. Harper and Mrs. Harper and Mr. Gerald W. Knight, youngest son of Mr. John G. D. Knight and the late Mrs. Knight of Crowne Point, Victoria. The marriage, one of the most important and charming of this season was performed at half past eight by Rev. M. E. Jackson and Rev. W. T. Keeling in the presence of the smart throng of relatives and friends of the principals that filled St. John's Anglican Church on Nanion Avenue. Judge Harper was born and raised in Madoc, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Harper and brother of Dr. W. S. Harper.

Miss Minnie Ferguson is spending a week with friends in Toronto and Hamilton.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

{Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service}

While Nkima sped through the forest on his errand of serious mischief, Nyalwa was finally humiliated by his comrades into risking an entrance into Tarzan's cave. Holding ahead with his spear, he stepped inside. The five warriors crowded to the entrance behind him.

Suddenly the terrifying ape-cry burst from the captive's throat. Nyalwa bolted and collided with his comrades. They all rolled out on the ground in a screaming, grunting jumble. Then they scrambled to their feet and rushed back to the campfire for a consultation.

"He is still there," panted Nyalwa, "that is what I went to learn. I did what I said." "You should have killed him," sneered his rival. "You failed." Now I will tell you a way. We will surround the hut and hurl our spears. The walls are thin. He will die!"

"Just what I was about to suggest," said Nyalwa. And now, after more argument, the little men crept up and encircled the flimsy hut where Tarzan lay helpless. While they awaited Nyalwa's signal, they took a firm stance and raised their poison-tipped spears!

PEDESTRIAN IS KNOCKED DOWN

Miss M. McElrith, Cedar Street Badly Bruised in Accident

When backing his truck off Ontario Street onto Catherine Street, the vehicle struck Miss M. McElrith, 71 Cedar Street, and knocked her down during the noon hour today. The vehicle was driven by Oron O. Dakin, 13 Patterson Street. Miss McElrith was immediately carried into the nearby surgery of Dr. A. Walkers where medical attention revealed she was suffering from a severe shock and slight bruises. She was later taken to her home. Mr. Dakin reported the matter to the police and stated he had parked his truck on Coleman Street while making a delivery. Later I returned and after observing in all directions and seeing no pedestrian in sight, backed up truck across the street and into Catherine Street. I felt nothing and as I was about to start ahead some person shouted 'Stop, you hit a lady.' I immediately stopped and assisted," Mr. Dakin informed P. C. Ellis, who investigated. Miss McElrith was later taken to the hospital where she will be covered under the X-ray in order to ascertain further possible complications.

CRAWLS TO GIVE ROBBERY ALARM

Manager of Naval Club of Toronto Bound Hand And Foot

Toronto, Dec. 15.—(CP)—Bound hand and foot and with a sack tied about his head, James Cuntrip, manager of the Naval Club of Toronto, crawled 80 feet across the cellar of the building early today to sound an alarm after robbers assaulted him and fled with about $125.

Cuntrip thought his inch-by-inch rescue by hauling a foot on the furnace pipes which ran up from the cellar to the rooms.

Cuntrip told police the concealed chair set upon him when he went down to stoke the furnace early after locking up last night. He showed bruises and bleeding knuckles as evidence of a battle he had with them before he was overpowered.

Cuntrip thought his inch-by-inch journey along the hot floor must have taken an hour and a half. The soles of his feet against the pipes was heard immediately by his wife upstairs and the manager notified police after she had undone his bonds.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 15.—(CP)— Base metal and gold stocks advanced strongly in the mining section on the Toronto Stock Exchange on the heaviest trading seen here in months. A million shares changed hands in the first hour and nearly two million in the first three hours.

Sharply higher prices for the metals in London and New York put new life in Noranda, Sherritt, Wallbridge, Lamaque and Consolidated Smelters, Aldermac and Pend-Oreille and scores of these sold at new highs while in the golds gains of 15 to 50 cents were showing this afternoon for Central Patricia, Preston, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Kirkland-Hudson Bay, God's Lake, Sladen and Macassa.

Reynolds featured the oils with an advance of about 5 points and Imperial of 3 to 4 were boarded by Home Oil, Calgary-Edmonton and Foothills.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Dec. 15.—(CP)—The Industrial section of the Toronto Stock Exchange today moved ahead on good volume in the early stage but quieted down in the early afternoon when some of the gains were shaded lightly. Steels, Utilities, Implement and Pools stood out in the action and several new highs were registered. Steel of Canada leaders 78 1-2 up a point and Steel Pfd 70 for a gain of nearly five points. Dominion Steel Car added a point.

Smelters and Nickel were leaders with gains of 1 to 2 points each. Massey Harris Pfd firmed 3 points and Canadian Canners and Goodyear added fractions. Banks held to the up side, coalition shares were mainly higher and liquor issues, with exception of Distillers-Seagrams, were off slightly.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 15 (AP)—Many stocks climbed from one to a point or more in today's stock market but the number of soft spots throughout the list ended to keep buying within bounds.

While little change in the generally satisfactory industrial score, specialties attributed specialized demand largely to idle funds in the pockets of the public resulting from the recent record flow of dividends.

Bonds improved. Commodities were mixed after their sharp forward thrust of yesterday. Foreign currencies were quiet.

In the Canadian section of the market, fractional declines were recorded by Hiram Walker, Dome Mines and McIntyre, while International Nickel and Distillers Corp.-Seagrams improved slightly. Lake Shore held about even, in curb exchange dealings. Canadian dollar were unchanged at 100.10 1-3 cents.

NANKING GOVERNMENT PLANS EXPEDITION

Minister of Defence Details Militia Reorganization

REORGANIZATION ACTIVE MILITIA NOW COMPLETED

Hon. Ian MacKenzie, Minister of Defence Announces Changes

INFANTRY UNITS OUT

Converted Into Artillery Units And Tank Corps Added

Ottawa, Dec. 16 (CP)—Reorganization of the non-permanent active militia of Canada has been retained, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence, said last night. The minister issued a comprehensive statement showing all the changes that have been carried to completion in the adjustment of the Canadian militia to modern conditions.

The reorganization does not entail any increase in personnel, but, if carried to its logical outcome, it will mean increased expenditures on the equipment.

Many units hitherto operating as infantry are being converted into artillery. Others are grouped so that the personnel of two scattered regiments become one, while tank battalions are formed from individuals who had hitherto trained as cavalry or infantry.

EIGHT YEAR TERM TO LONDON MAN

Guilty of Possessing a Stolen Blow Torch Equipment

London, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP)—Described from the bench as "one of the worst criminals in Western Ontario," Charles Wood, 29, was sentenced today to eight years in Kingston Penitentiary for possession of a stolen blow torch equipment.

Wood was arrested in an Ottawa avenue cellar a few weeks ago, while he and two companions broke into a safe stolen from the Burlington Refineries. Last week he was sentenced to five years for theft of the safe, and five years for carrying a loaded revolver. All the terms are concurrent.

SLEEPING CHILD IN COMA FOR FIFTEEN MONTHS

Little Maxine's big brown eyes stared straight ahead—as they have has been sleeping for fifteen months with her eyes wide open.

Nurses made the little Santa Claus doll gleefully holding out its arms for a baby's embrace. They held it before Maxine but her eyes didn't change.

Physicians and nurses have little hope that she ever will recover from the coma which has held her since Sept. 24, 1935.

Only little Maxine's tresses about in her crib. Sometimes her eyes flash, and she utters strange sounds.

But through it all she sleeps.

WAR OFFICE ANNOUNCES MAN KILLED IN ACTION

Brantford, Ont. Dec. 16—(CP) Definite word of the fate of G. Sailor of North, Peterboro, Somerville, England, who disappeared in 1917 during the Battle of Arras in the Great War while carrying out his duties as runner, has been received by his wife, ending years of uncertainty, she told relatives here in a letter.

Only word reaching home after Sailor failed to return from an errand assigned to his regimental Somerset Light Infantry, was that he had been "lost in action."

Military Expedition Planned By Chinese Gov't Executives

Will Rescue Dictator Alive or Avenge Him if Dead Says Rumor

TROOPS ON MOVE

Shanghai, Dec. 17, (Thursday)—(AP)—The Nanking government will order rebellious Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang a final chance to desert Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek safely, a high executive official said today.

If the mutineers resist the advance of Nanking troops or Marshal Chang refuses to abandon his stubborn position, our divisions will not hesitate to employ the utmost striking power at their command."

Lower Enrolment in Colleges Seen by 1941 by Dr. Nelville

Falling Birth-Rate May Bring Problems to Universities

QUESTION OF FEES

London, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP)—Warning that Canadian colleges and universities may find themselves in difficulties by 1941 through decreased enrolments, was given by Dr. K. P. R. Neville, dean of faculty of arts, at the University of Western Ontario.

Dr. Neville said statisticians studying trends in population, claim the falling birth-rate in the United States has already resulted in declines in public school attendance and is now beginning to affect that of secondary schools. The decrease, they assert, will become visible in college and university attendance by 1941.

"It is wisdom for Canadians to ascertain if the same results will be effective in Canada," commented Dr. Neville. "If they are inevitable, then Canadian universities, which like western rely to a large extent upon income from fees, must probably take steps to increase endowments, and to insure increases in income from other sources also."

HOLD CONSULTATION IF PEACE MENACED

Buenos Aires, Dec. 16 (AP)— A United States proposal for consultation by the American Republics if American peace is menaced from within or without won final approval today by the full Inter-American Peace Conference along with eight other projects.

The United States plan, only slightly modified as it passed through a committee, had the unanimous sponsorship of all the 21 American Republics. It was described by Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, as "epochal."

Hull's resolution urging all American Republics to complete ratification of five existing American peace treaties, which also had unanimous sponsorship.

Hull's resolution urging all American Republics to complete ratification of five existing American peace treaties, which also had unanimous sponsorship.

It reiterated a similar recommendation of the Montevideo Pan-American conference of 1933.

DUKE MAY REPLY TO THE ATTACK MADE ON FRIENDS

Edward Openly Stirred by Radio Address of Archbishop

QUITE DESPONDENT

Believed to be Suffering From an "Emotional Letdown"

(By Alvin J. Steinkopf)
(Associated Press Special Staff)
Enzesfeld, Austria, Dec. 16.—(AP) — Furious in spite of his anguish and despondency, Edward, Duke of Windsor, may reply to the attack of the Archbishop of Canterbury, it was reported reliably today.

Baron Eugene de Rothschild, at whose castle the former King is staying, disclosed Edward was deeply stirred by the radio broadcast Sunday in which the Archbishop, head of the Church of England, criticized the social set which had surrounded him as King.

It was said the former king might enter a sharp answer to the Archbishop's Empire-wide censure of his friends, as one of the first uses of his dearly-bought personal

AUNT OF QUEEN DIES IN LONDON

Lady Ann Bowes-Lyon Was Fifth Daughter of Earl Crawford

London, Dec. 16 (CP-Havas)—The death of Queen Elizabeth's aunt, Lady Ann Bowes-Lyon, was announced last night. Lady Anne was 77 years old.

Lady Anne was the fifth daughter of the twenty-fifth Earl of Crawford, and in 1883 married Hon. Francis Bowes-Lyon, son of the 10th Earl of Strathmore, the queen's grandfather.

HUGE DIVIDEND CHECKS IN MAIL

A Half Billion Dollars Will Help to Swell Christmas Business

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—Postmen throughout the United States carried today cheques representing the $150,000,000 advance guard of one of the greatest seven-day disbursements in the history of American industry.

While the week in the form of extra, increased and regular dividend cheques, a cool $450,000,000 dend cheques, a cool $450,000,000 find its way through the mails to many thousands of shareholders.

That represented about half of the near-billion dollar year-end disbursement by corporations unloosing the purse strings as a result of steadily increased earnings and federal taxation on undistributed corporate profits.

Today's mail deliveries included some of the choicest morsels of the banquet. Cheques were in the mail from $28,000,000 Chesapeake and Ohio Railway payment, $22,000,000 dividend by F. W. Woolworth & Company, and $23,000,000 from the directors of Chrysler Corp.

Cheques totalling $25,000,000 from Standard Oil (New Jersey), $19,000,000 from Standard Oil of Indiana, and $10,000,000 from the Sun Oil Co. were in the mail from the J. C. Penney Co., chain of department stores, plus $11,727,000 in the mailmen's hands.

Later this week will be mailed $6,000,000 from Standard Oil of Ohio, Tobacco Co., $4,237,000 from Anaconda Copper Co., $13,000,000 regular disbursement by the Pennsylvania Railroad and $21,000,000 split by General Electric Co.

ILL WITH COLDS

London, Dec. 16.—(AP)— Three members of the British royal family were ill with colds today.

Queen Elizabeth was reported "going along very well" after being confined to her Piccadilly home for several days.

The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester were also reported confined to their residence by a mild attack of influenza.

Mrs. F. Allore Gets Perfect Bridge Hand

The bridge player's dream—a thirteen card suit—was realized for the second time by Mrs. F. Allore last evening when she was dealt thirteen spades at an informal bridge party at the home of Mrs. George A. Lee, Cedar street. Mrs. Allore was playing with her hostess, her opponents being Mrs. R. J. Black and Mrs. F. J. Lee. The phenomenal hand occurred early in the evening's play, the cards having been cut and dealt in the usual manner All the other players had passed when Mrs. Allore calmly announced, "grand slam in spades" and displayed her hand to the astonishment of her friends.

A few years ago Mrs. Allore held a perfect hand, also in spades.

Takes Chiang's Duties

Dr. H. H. Kung (ABOVE), finance minister in the Central Chinese (Nanking) government, took over civil executive duties when Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, Nanking dictator, was seized and held hostage of rebellious troops under Marshal Chiang Hsueh-Liang in Shensi province. It is said that Kung's assumption of executive power indicates that Chiang Kai-Shek has already been deposed by his colleagues.

CATTLE RUSTLING RING ALLEGED

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 16.—(CP) —Police believe they have broken up a cattle rustling gang with the arrest today of Lorne Armstrong, Windsor, who claims he is a bailiff.

"They are holding him and his truck in which the bodies of three slain calves were found. Armstrong is charged with cattle theft.

Police have already learned that one of the calves was taken from the Maidstone Township farm of Lemuel Anger.

They are now attempting to trace ownership of the other two calves. They have also a theory that a charge of cattle stealing, laid against John Orlando of Windsor, has been preferred against Armstrong.

Windsor police noted the truck on a Windsor Street early today without lights. They halted it and reported one man jumped out and ran away.

Armstrong told them he had purchased the calves from two farmers, one of whom accompanied him to the city.

To add piquancy to the mystery the two officers later found an abandoned auto, which Police Chief Wilfrid Lewis reported stolen. The car when found was "out of gas" and the only clue was a quantity of blood and hair, presumably from the three dead calves.

On the seat of the truck the police found a flash light, a rope and a knife.

Beseech Edward For Photographs

Endefield, Austria, Dec. 16.—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor is becomingly lazy to come out of his retreat in the Baron Eugene de Rothschild's castle, Enzesfeld, and have his pictures taken.

The pestiferous newspaper photographers men who feared they would become rheumatic in the chill weather while waiting to fulfill their assignments—photographs of the former king.

They told the Duke in an informal note: "We want to be with you during Christmas but we cannot leave until you come out of your hole."

RAILWAYS WIN APPEAL IN FLOOD DAMAGE ACTION

Reversal of Judgment And Finding in Smith Case

COURTS COMMENT

Railways Not Responsible For Belleville Flood March 12th, Last

Toronto, Dec. 16.—The railways were not responsible for the Belleville flood on March 12, the Appeal Court finds in a judgment delivered at Osgoode Hall today.

The Court reverses a judgment and finding by Judge L. V. O'Connor and jury awarding John Smith $425 for injury to his property on Mary Street, in Belleville, which it is alleged was due to the piling up and embankment of the railway bridge near the mouth of the Moira River. A large part of the city was flooded.

Smith brought the action against the Campbellford and Western Railway Company (C.P.R.) and the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Company (C.N.R.).

Mr. Justice Henderson says the injury to the plaintiff's land was caused by the water being forced out of the river channel by enormous blocks of ice, "ice", he adds, "in my opinion no twelve reasonable men could honestly find that the conditions were caused one hundred per cent. by the defendants' works".

The fact seems clear, he says, that the ice jam remained stable for days and that it extended a considerable distance north and south of the railway bridge. While it was true that bridge piers will cause an obstruction, it had not been established that such a condition as resulted was caused by the bridge piers alone or by any obstruction caused by them.

The judgments were delivered by Mr. Justice Riddell and Mr. Justice Fisher.

FRANK NOLAN OF MONTREAL HELD

Charged With Theft And Setting Fire by Trenton Police

Trenton, December 18 (Special)—After an investigation of a fire at the Royal Hotel on Monday last by A. E. Saville of the Provincial Police, Frank Nolan, 28, of Montreal and employed by the Frontenac Construction Company, was arrested late last night and charged with theft of $131 in Canadian and American funds and also with starting fire in William Evans' room on the same date. He was being held in custody and will appear on the two charges on Thursday. It is stated that the accused will be remanded for trial until a later date. It is denied by the police, that Nolan has not been working at the Airport for some time.

Mrs. Simpson Intends to Keep Her Rights as British Citizen

Divorce From Simpson Will Not Affect Rights, Says Legal Expert

BRITISH ACT CITED

London, Dec. 16 (CP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson intends to retain her British citizenship whether or not she marries the Duke of Windsor, it was declared today.

She American woman's divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson does not affect her rights as a British subject, it was said by a legal expert of the Divorce Law Reform Union.

"As a petitioner in the case, all her rights are fully preserved," he said.

Mrs. Simpson acquired British nationality by her marriage to Simpson, he emphasized, but has not at any time lost her American citizenship.

The legal expert cited as authority an act of parliament in September, 1922, which enables women to retain their citizenship without regard to the country they adopt by marriage.

BALDWIN COMMENDED FOR HIS DIPLOMACY

Adelaide, Australia, Dec. 16.—(CP Cable via Reuter)—The Adelaide Chamber of Commerce today took the unusual course of commending Prime Minister Baldwin on his handling of the constitutional crisis arising from King Edward's desire to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson and of Edward's abdication.

The message warmly congratulated Mr. Baldwin on his "statesmanlike and masterly conduct of the delicate negotiations." The Commercial Community of South Australia has nothing but admiration for the sparkling qualities which enabled the carrying out of such a difficult task without disturbing the even tenor of empire relations."

AIRLINER OVERDUE TWENTY-FOUR HRS.

Five Men And Two Women Are Aboard Airship

Salt Lake City, Dec. 16.—(AP)—Searching planes droned overhead and land parties combed snow-drifted mountain wilds today, seeking a big airliner more than 24 hours overdue with two men and two women.

The record day's hunt centered near here on the north Air Express Transport and its occupants—a pretty blonde stewardess who dodged the altar to keep her job; another a bride of only a few days.

Also aboard the twin-motored Boeing last was heard from at 3.37 a.m. Monday Time, Tuesday, when its pilots S. J. Samson, radioed his position over Promontory, central Utah, village of Milford.

STRIP DECORATIONS FROM CHRISTMAS TREES

Petty thieves were reported active in Belleville. Under the cover of darkness these people work, stripping decorations from Christmas trees, that are placed in the verandahs to add color to the Yuletide season. Tuesday night some persons were busy and stripped a tree of all its decorations, tinsel and a lengthy string of small electric light bulbs. The decorations had only recently been placed on the tree by Mrs. B. A. Moorman.

J. Murray Sirrel, who lodged complaint to the authorities of her loss, Local police will patrol local streets wherever possible during the night and have promised severe punishment to persons if apprehended stripping Christmas trees of their decorations.

DOMESTIC HELP REPORTED SCARCE

The need for extra sales help in local stores at the present time has made its influence felt on the list of unemployed girls at the local Dominion Employment Service office, it was indicated today. Calls for domestic help now being received have reached a high level with a corresponding lack of applicants to fill the vacancies, it was reported.

Seasonal work at the present time is also resulting in numbers of jobs being filled by casual employees.

FARMER OBSERVED HARVESTING HAY

Observed by Mr. Frank Ventress of this city: A rural resident of the vicinity of Bridge street was taking advantage of the present period of fine weather as he cut what appeared to be a standing crop of alfalfa which had apparently escaped during the frosts unharmed. No reason could be given by the observer for cutting this late crop at this. This is believed to be a record for late "haying" in this or other districts.

Hunters Advised to Always Carry Compass

The advisability of always carrying a compass, especially when hunting, was firmly brought to the minds of three local hunters over the week-end. According to advices and stories related by friends, three local and eighty hunters set forth to enjoy a day's shooting of the elusive rabbit in the vicinity immediately north of Belleville. After tramping through the woods for the greater part of the afternoon the trio became somewhat disappointed when the much-sought "rookies kill" had yet to put in an appearance and the hunters decided to return home at that time being situated in a woods bordering the second concession road. Thereupon the trio of hunters commenced their weary trek homeward, empty handed, of course. Later, when they came to a halt and at last decided they were lost as repeatedly they were, seeing the identical spots they had traversed only a short time before, Darkness had set in before they finally emerged from the small woods. "No more hunting without a compass," stated one today.

POLICE BLOTTER

A man who gave his name as Joseph Lynch, transient, was arrested in Belleville early last evening following complaints registered by a local business house. Lynch was held in custody and remanded on a charge of intoxication until Friday.

Early last evening a man appeared in Cleeri's grocery store and was allegedly panhandling. As the stranger walked out of the store, however, he was seen to pick up a package of peel. Mr. Cleeri immediately gave chase and recovered his goods, but the man escaped. Local police were notified and later Lynch was apprehended and was identified by Cleeri as the man who had been in his store.

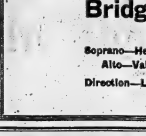
Three panes of glass were broken in windows at Queen Victoria School on Monday and the incident reported to the police last night. Investigations revealed the damage to have apparently been done with an air rifle.

SHELTER TO KEEP OPEN IN WINTER

Meeting Informed That Child Cost $1.68 a Day in Shelter

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. Parlours which was fairly well attended.

A motion presented by Mr. Ackerman, Chairman of the Finance Committee in the interests of economy, that the shelter be closed for the winter months, caused a good deal of discussion for and against and when it was put to the meeting was lost by a small majority and it was decided to keep the shelter open for the winter months. It was brought out in a ~ $1.68 per day to maintain a child in the Shelter and $4.5e in the boarding home. Mr. McBride, the President, and Mr. Ruston, the Superintendent, were given instructions to purchase a new lot in the cemetery, the old lot being full. The Financial statement for the first six months of the fiscal year, from April 1st, to September 30th showed an expenditure of $6,362.09. The Superintendent presented his report for the month showing 9 new complaints during the month, which were investigated as well as four cases, which were re-opened, and leaving 46 cases on hand at the end of the month. 26 children were involved during the month and six of these were made temporary wards. At the end of the month there were 190 children under care, 4 being in the Shelter, 65 in boarding homes, 3 on adoption probation, 101 in wage and free homes, 3 in other institutions and 13 other societies wards under our care. Under the Unmarried Parents Act 25 cases were on hand at the beginning of the month and 2 new ones were added, 2 cases being closed.



DAMAGE ACTION IS DISPOSED OF

Settlement Made in Action For Damages Before Non-Jury Court

Five cases were listed for trial at the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario held before Chevrier at the County Court House yesterday, three civil actions and two divorce motions. No criminal cases were on the docket.

An action for damages to the amount of $15,000.00 was entered by the plaintiff, Mrs. Bessie Cook of the late Sara Helen Beacock against the Dickson Motor Sales, C. Baker et al and was settled out of court for $2,500 in favor of the plaintiffs. The terms of the settlement, so it was given by counsel, are that Mrs. Cleeri immediately gave chase and recovered his goods, but the man escaped. Local police were notified and later Lynch was apprehended and later identified by Cleeri as the man who had been in his store.

Three panes of glass were broken in windows at Queen Victoria School on Monday and the incident reported to the police last night. Investigations revealed the damage to have apparently been done with an air rifle.

GENERALISSIMO AND MUTINEER

CHIANG KAI SHEK

CHANG HSUEH LIANG

Conflicting stories come from the Orient. One says that Chiang Kai Shek was murdered with other leaders, according to a broadcast reported made by Chang Hsueh Liang. Another is that he may be alive. Today's dispatches tell of an expedition to rescue Kai Shek if alive or avenge him if dead. Chiang Kai Shek has been Generalissimo, premier and dictator of China at Nanjing. Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, war lord of Shensi Province, is seeking to compel the Central Chinese Government to join forces with his own communist troops in an immediate and Japanese campaign.

MEN OF ST. THOMAS' PARISH ORGANIZE

At a largely attended meeting of the men of St. Thomas' Parish which was held at the Parish House, Tuesday evening, it was decided unanimously to form a branch of the Laymen's Association, which is an organization within the entire Church of England in Canada. Mr. O. H. McIlherran presided over the meeting in a very capable and acceptable manner.

In order to give the men of St. Thomas' Parish an insight into the aims and objects of the association, Mr. John Meagher, a member of the Laymen's Association in connection with the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, and Dr. E. A. Anderson, a member of the association in connection with St. John's Church, Stirling, were guest speakers. Both speakers were most enthusiastic in their presentation of the great benefit to the parish which the association will bring providing there is enthusiasm and willing co-operation in carrying on the work. The presence of Dr. Carleton and Mr. Meagher was much appreciated by the meeting and a hearty vote of thanks was extended to them for their excellent addresses and for their kind assistance in forming a branch of the association in connection with St. Thomas' Parish.

The following officers were elected: President, Mr. Clare Patterson; Vice President, Mr. Wilson Bird; Sec.-Treasurer, Mr. "Mac" Perrill; Executive Committee, the elected officers and Messrs. G. H. McIlherran, E. F. Strickland, A. S. Quick and F. W. Potter; Auditor, D. Dodson Association, Col. A. B. Gribble.

During the evening an enjoyable programme was given. Mr. and Mrs. W. Ernest Wheatley rendered piano numbers; Miss Bernice Arbuckle recited, and Mr. Clare Patterson gave vocal solos and led the community singing. The Vicar of the parish, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, in a brief address expressed his great pleasure at the formation of a branch of the association in the parish.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Obituary

LATE CHARLES WARING
(Contributed)

Mr. Charles Waring of Waring's Corners, near Picton, passed away peacefully on Friday morning, November 28th, 1936.

Though suffering for months, yet he was cheerful to the last and by that courageous spirit made lighter his family's sorrow. Born in 1860, he lived his life at the home which was the home of his father, the late Joshua Waring, and his grandfather the late Thomas Waring. His wife and his two daughters, Ina and Anne, are left to mourn his passing.

The funeral service, under the auspices of the Masonic order, of which Mr. Waring was a member for over thirty years, was at the residence and the interment service at Glenora Chapel. The Rev. David Wren, the family's pastor, assisted by Captain Bedford and Revs. Manktelow and Holland, conducted the service in which tribute was paid to the splendid worth and splendid character of the deceased. Professor Walden sang "The Old Rugged Cross", Rev. J. K. Holland, of Toronto, "Home Day Well Spent" and Rev. Mr. Manktelow, "When Gerow, Herbert Foster, John Shaw, Sidney Lockyer and Carmen Hicks acted as pall-bearers. Many beautiful floral offerings gave quiet testimony to the high place Mr. Waring held in the community.

To know him as a kind and courteous gentleman, an excellent neighbor, a true friend, "an honest man, the noblest work of God."

MRS. MARY ANN SINE
(Stirling)

Stirling, Dec. 16 (Special)—Citizens of Stirling and district were shocked to learn of the sudden passing of Mrs. Mary Ann Sine, widow of the late M. Sine, of Stirling. The late Mrs. Sine had been a resident of the village of Stirling for about twenty years and a few years ago moved to Belleville to the home of her son, Kenneth Sine. Deceased was in her seventy-fourth year and passed away suddenly after ten days' illness.

Prior to residing in Stirling the late Mrs. Sine was an active member of the Asbury Methodist Church, serving in the Women's Missionary Society and in the Ladies' Aid. She was a valued member of the Stirling Branch of the Ontario Women's Institute and the Stirling Horticultural Society. Possessed of a lovely disposition and a friendly smile for all she had gathered about her a wide circle of sincere friends who will be saddened by her sudden passing.

Left to mourn her passing are one son, Mr. Kenneth Sine, of Belleville, two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Wickett, of Madoc, Ont., and Mr. John Sinclair, of British Columbia, one sister, Mrs. C. W. May, also of British Columbia.

Funeral service was conducted in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, this afternoon at 2.30 p.m., when services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Kofford and interment was made in the Stirling cemetery.

FIREMEN TO HOLD 'OPEN HOUSE' TONIGHT

In order to acquaint the general public with the work that is annually performed by them in bringing Christmas cheer into the homes of the needy of Belleville, firemen of the local force will hold a second "open night" this evening at No. 1 Fire Hall near the Upper Bridge. Here may be seen one of the biggest collections of toys in the city, many of which have been given the department by citizens, or bought and purchased. Santa Claus also will be present this evening in full costume to add to the gaiety of the occasion.

This week baskets and hampers are being prepared by firemen for distribution to homes through the city just previous to Christmas Day. It is expected that about 100 families will be cared for in this manner.

Funds for the annual gift giving are derived from the firemen's ball held each year through funds that have been subscribed by citizens.

While making their rounds last night local police found the front door of a Front St. store open. The proprietor of the business was notified and later the door made secure. Fourteen transients were afforded warm sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

CARS COLLIDE ON 6 CONCESSION SIDNEY

Stating he was momentarily blinded by the bright sun's rays, an automobile driven by Alden Dean Frankford, swerved slightly to the left and struck an oncoming automobile, driven by Charles Bailey, Latta, forcing the latter vehicle into the ditch four miles west of Oakburton on the sixth concession of Sidney late yesterday afternoon. Provincial Constable Thos. Robinson investigated and found Mr. Bailey's car had turned completely over in the south ditch. No person sustained injuries during the accident although damage to at least $150 resulted to the Bailey car. Mr. Sine informed Constable Robinson he was proceeding westerly and as he broke over the brow of a hill the sun's rays temporarily blinded him and he could not see the oncoming Bailey vehicle coming from the opposite direction. Owing to the surrounding circumstances, and statements that entered into the accident no charges were deemed necessary, the police stated today.

Letters to the Editor

CITY MANAGER

To the Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

The by-law for the appointment of a City Manager, unfortunately came two important paragraphs. First, the salary to be paid the manager, and second, the duties to be performed by the manager.

By section 258 sub-section 1 of the Municipal Act the powers of the council are to be exercised by by-law. Pursuant to section 253 sub-section 4 it is the duty of the council to fix the remuneration for an office. The by-law in its present form is analagous to a blank cheque. The electors have no knowledge of the financial burden to be imposed if the by-law is passed and no knowledge of the services to be performed for the remuneration. Perhaps further information should be undertaken before the electors are asked to assent to such a by-law.

If, of course, is not enough for individual members of the Council to express their views of such matters, it requires the majority vote of the whole council to make a decision.

This is not a matter that need be hurried. There are several thousand municipalities in Canada and the United States, and though the proposition of a City Manager has been under discussion for thirty years or more, only very few municipalities have adopted this plan and only where there were exceptional circumstances, such as corruption, flagrant mis-management or some very exceptional public works to be undertaken. No such circumstances exist in Belleville and the debentures of the city are selling moderately above par.

Business corporations exist solely for profit, but the primary purpose of municipal corporations is not profit but public service.

In former times the Municipal Council managed everything in the municipality, now the burdens of the Municipal Council are referred to other bodies such as the Board of Education, Separate School Board, Board of Health, Board of Police Commissioners, Board of Commerce, Harbour Board, Mother's Allowance Board, Old Age Pension Board, Cemetery Board, Parks Board, the Hospital Board for managing the hospital, the Home Board managing the Home for the Aged. So there is comparatively little left for the municipal council to manage, and with sixteen permanent boards under salary Belleville would seem to have a sufficiently large number of managers.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Dec. 18—Last night two persons were struck down by motor cars in front of O'Beggen's grocery store on Front Street within one half hour of each other. A car operated by Harold Fox, of Dominion Street hit Mrs. Myrtle Doyle of Marmora Street when she walked from in front of a stopped transport truck. Mrs. Doyle was thrown heavily to the pavement and received a fractured left leg. Dr. E. A. McQuaid attended the injured woman and ordered her to Belleville General Hospital.

Thirty minutes later a car owned by Henry LaFleur and driven by Harvey Bailey struck Helen Weese 2, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Weese and due to the slippery road conditions dragged the child for some distance. Dr. J. W. Farley was called and said the little girl was suffering from a slight concussion of the brain and minor abrasions. Police said the little girl was playing on the west side of the road with two other children and when the auto approached two of them started for the eastern curb. The one child turned about and ran back and the skidding machine struck the Weese girl with the left front headlight and fender. Charges were not preferred against the driver in either case as the conditions of the road was icy. Trenton police investigated.

St. Peter's Held Euchre

Women of St. Peter's Catholic Church held an enjoyable euchre party in their school auditorium last night. A large number were on hand and the prize winners were: Ladies' first, Estelle Lalon, second, Mrs. Patrick Cooke; Men's first, Richard Cox, second, William Miron. Lunch was served after the games and Mrs. Joseph Coulture acted as convener and Mrs. Bernice White and Mrs. Thomas Cain assisted.

Court

Three Trenton men were assessed $12.25 for failing to transfer an auto registration card, when they purchased or sold the vehicle. Two pleaded guilty while the other man offered a not guilty plea. R. O. Morris of Ottawa, original owner of the car involved, was notified by the court in connection with the case and it is expected action will follow. The man who purchased the machine from Morris of Ottawa claimed that Morris would not respond to several letters he wrote concerning the transfer of the registration.

Levi Broderick of Canfield, Detroit paid $7.25 for speeding.

A Belleville man was found guilty of obtaining money by means of worthless cheques from a local service station and was notified the victed man made restitution, paid the court costs $24.85 and a six months suspended sentence was imposed.

Fred Shinael paid $7.25 for violating the Highway Traffic Act.

Two local men paid $10.25 and $18.25 apiece for consuming liquor in a residence other than their homes.

J. H. MacCauley pleaded guilty to a Highway Traffic Act violation and was assessed $6.75. A second charge was enlarged for one week as the police are awaiting evidence from Peterborough.

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook presided over the court while R. G. Denman K.C., officiated as Crown Attorney.

"The Four Checkers", a local vocal quartette composed of Glen Mittz, Lloyd Mitts, Frank Wilson, Claude Huffman sang three selected numbers, "Old Rugged Cross," "Will Jesus Find Us Watching" and "Abide With Me" over station C.F.R.C., in the Queen's University at Kingston last Sunday evening. The quartette were sponsored by the Frigidaire Sales and Service Company of Kingston. Some weeks ago the "Four Checkers" headed fifteen amateurs from the surrounding district and took first honors in the Co-operative Workers amateur contest in the Capitol theatre. A week later, one of the boys received a letter from a Miss Viola Berryman of Napanee asking if the quartette would consider an audition at Kingston on Saturday, December 14th. The foursome in their reply accepted and on Saturday struck out for the broadcasting station in a rented car. During the trip the foursome encountered four breakdowns and got soiled and tired they arrived at Kingston with only a short time to spare before the audition. With Miss Viola Brennan at the piano the "Four Checkers" gave their best and station officials inquired for an engagement the following evening, Sunday. Their programme was given on Sunday thanks to Mr. G. Martin of the Capitol theatre who donated his car and time, said Lloyd Mitts, one of the quartette smiling, and "but for our future depends on the amount of fan mail the station receives, he added, and said if it hadn't been for Miss Berrman of Napanee we would never had been heard of for she obtained our audition and acted as accompanist at each hearing. Local authorities proclaimed the "Four Checkers" and highly praised their well blended voices. None have trained voices and only sang before the public on two occasions, previous to Sunday.

Rotary Meeting

Younger members of the Rotary took over the elders places at the meeting in the Gilbert Hotel on Monday evening. During the meeting the members present were made and centered on the week's heavyweight battle to be held in addition to the things they are doing. Mr. J. S. Cowan, editor of the Quinte Sun, said in his address, Trenton is badly in need of a hospital and a public park and said some definite stand should be taken on boys' work, and concluded with saying local youths need the help of the golden rule. Dave Harrison read the aim of the club from a membership card and mentioned equal distribution of club members.

Charlie Worthey talked on the splendid work Rotary boys' camps were doing throughout the province. Norman Bowry, George Cobley and Ben Joyce also delivered interesting discourses. Monday night was a night for raising needed funds and as the sergeant-at-arms penalized members for anything they did out of the ordinary. Eye winkers and unnecessary breathers were fined twenty-five cents. It proved disastrous when one of the several guests Jack Morre was fined for being the father of an eight pound baby. The club treasurer, Ben Joyce, raised a strong objection saying, that he was marrying the Girl Ann to arrest a non member. Finally Mr. Bower penalized all the members and levied a twenty-five cent fine on each. During the evening, Mr. R. F. McIntosh, the club president's chair, in place of president Claude Graham and officiated as chairman. W. O., Wibberley of the R.C.A.F. capably handled the Master of ceremonies position and sang several of his well known numbers, Leslie Hoare's son at the piano. The club made plans for the annual Christmas tree and decided annual Ladies night to fall on January 9th, at which time Rev. Johnson of Toronto, pastor of Eglington United Church will give an address.

Humane Society

In the town hall on Monday night the Junior and Senior Humane officers held a meeting. A few weeks ago the Junior and Senior organization merged and were to function as The Humane Society. The Junior workers were dissatisfied with the working arrangements and asked if their club could be certified again. A resolution was passed returning the Junior club to a separate body, and the following officers were unanimously elected: President, Francis Gilbirds; Treasurer, Elsie White; Secretary, F. Whitely. Mrs. Brown supervisor of the Junior group is arranging an interesting programme for the future and it is expected many fees and sales will be held to raise funds.

Joan Bennett and Gary Cooper co-starred in the romantic drama "Wedding Present" one of two features coming to the Belle tomorrow.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP)—The fancy jewelry which represented $250,000 in investments were worth just $15 to Lynn Overman, actor, discovered.

He sold a satchelful of stock certificates to the property department at R.K.O. - Radio Studios for use in a picture, "Once Over Lightly". The lithographs are used to paper the walls of a room in the film.

"Fifteen dollars is more than I ever expected to get out of them," Overman said.

He said the certificates represented the savings of 11 years on the stage and in the movies, prior to 1929. After the stock market crash, they became worthless, Overman said.

London, Dec. 16 (CP Cable) — Herbert Parker, 57-year-old Kensington business man committed suicide because of ill health.

Parker took his life by inhaling gas. The coroner remarked at the inquest the man had a good business and no money troubles. He had tried four sets of false teeth and "probably would have got used to them

MILITIA REORGANIZED

How modern defence is changing is indicated in the announcement by the Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence, of reorganization of the non-permanent active militia of Canada. Many units which have been infantry become artillery units and tank battalions. Mechanization to meet modern conditions is the outstanding principle in the changes.

The changes are somewhat radical but they meet the trend in most countries at the present time. No such radical changes were put into force before the Great War. At Belleville, the historic Argyll Light Infantry becomes a tank battalion. About the Argylls there has grown up a tradition, as the regiment has been largely a city unit in its personnel.

It is difficult to realize this change. Before 1914 tanks were unknown, and that struggle was well under way before they appeared. They with airplanes have heralded great changes, bringing in an era of great flexibility and mobility, by motorization and increased mechanization.

On the world scene it appears as if moving forts will become a real actuality. Some recall the lines of the prophecy in 'Macbeth' where in it is said that Macbeth is safe until Birnam Wood come to Dunsinane. In this new era Birnam Wood does come to Dunsinane, for moving camouflaged fort days are here.

IS THERE TELEPATHY?

Telepathy is proven is the statement of Prof. J. B. Rhine of Duke University, made yesterday at Durham, North Carolina. He says that the odds against chance as the explanation of the results which he has discovered, would run into astronomical figures up to the quintillions or sextillions to one against. He has been trying for five years to discover what there is in the possibility of telepathy.

According to his account the telepathy was based upon a special deck of cards, twenty-five in number, the faces of which bore one of five designs, a star, plus sign, wave, rectangle or circle. There were five of each in the pack. Miss Sara Ownbey psychologist, imaged, it is said, these cards, one after another, as they might lie in the pack. Another psychologist, a man, sat with closed eyes and told each by card what the former was thinking, but he did not always read her mind. However when he sat beside her and called the whole pack 360 times, the average of right calls of her imaginary cards was 14 per pack. Sitting in the next room his average was 14.6 in 750 packs and when he said two rooms away his average was 16 in each of the 250 packs. He made one perfect score of twenty while sitting beside Miss Ownbey. He made numerous runs close to twenty or even above.

The question is for the average man: "Does telepathy exist?" There are some evidences which might hint at telepathy. If some persons have the gift of telepathy, why not all? If it is that others have it undeveloped? What value would it be in life with some persons gifted and others unable to profit by it?

There are many mysteries in the realm of life. Psychologists have just begun to lift the curtain on this most intriguing of studies.

GERMAN SITUATION

Attacks on Christianity must cease, it is reported, Chancellor Hitler has warned the National Socialist party leaders and the Youth leaders in the Hitler movement. A strong protest has been made to the Chancellor by the administrators of German Protestant church. It is said that the campaign against the Christians by the Nazis was risking the co-operation of German peasantry in maintaining production and in delivery of foodstuffs on time. It was not long ago that the peasants at Oldenburg rebelled when the symbols of the Christian religion were taken from the schoolrooms. This awakening evidently has aroused fear lest there be some form of peasant strike which would hamper the Ministry of Agriculture.

In Germany the inevitable trend of revolution found its way in attacks on the religion of the people. First the Jews were attacked and the movement then hit Christianity. The Nazis with the aim of making everything Aryan sought to establish a racial or Aryan church, which meant but a revival of paganism. But to restore paganism in the old form was as impossible as it is for the people of the present day to become their own ancestors, however a pagan form of life may be developed by any people. The Nazis' aim was to make this pagan religion an auxiliary of the state, with worship of the state and materialism as its objects.

To the outer world, it seemed unnatural that Germany could abandon for mere Wotan and the gods of the Teutonic mythology for Christianity, as there are about 35,331,104 Evengelical Protestants, 20,000,000 Roman Catholics, 586,949 Jews and 11,000 adherents of other sects. This might indicate why the Jews were not able themselves to stem the tide against them for mere lack of numbers while Protestants totalled about two thirds of the population and were able to bear pressure upon the Government or to cause the Government to fear. Both Catholics and Protestants have openly resisted the assaults on Christianity and it would seem that even the state leaders have realized that they have gone too far. The Hitler Youth Movement is believed, with its possibility of influence on the young, to have stirred German parents of possible dire effects of the movement.

It has been pointed out that the relaxation by the leaders comes on the approach of Christmas, always a great event in German life.

GLIMPSES

There comes one moment when the least of things,
Like paths and boulders, trees and running streams,
Assume the portent of old mystic dreams
And etch themselves upon the mind in rings
Asthough the cyclic consciousness were curbed;
As though one saw past Kismet's open door
And asked, "Have I not seen all this before—
Each item in its place and undisturbed?"

Could I but halt time's ceaseless tide awhile
I should remember climbing, years ago,
Tibetan mountains clothed in ageless snow
Or lazily drifting down the Shallow Nile.

LIGHTS ARE STILL SHINING FROM THE MAIN DUCKS warning the ships which have dared the early winter dangers to bring down wheat from the head of the lakes. The Main Ducks lighthouse is expected to douse its glim on December 15, close up for the season, and board the all-steel government patrol boat Grenville for home and a happy Christmas and winter. There are a keeper of the light, assistant keeper, and radio beacon operator. One year the Grenville relieved the lighthouse men of the Main Ducks at Christmas time and Christmas dinner was eaten on board that boat. The Grenville picks up summer buoys at the close of navigation and retires to home port in Prescott for the winter. The Main Ducks radio station sounded four hundred hours this season, an exceptional record for fog. A week ago fishermen who work from the Main Ducks folded up their nets and returned home for the season. Soon the Main Ducks will be deserted by all save the caretaker on the ranch of Claude Cole, of Cape Vincent, who maintains a kind of a farm and private zoo there.—At one time having even Buffalos. For years mariners have feared the Main Ducks and before the present excellent lighting system and radio beacons were installed many brave ships ended their career on the inhospitable rocks. Prince Edward County is the home of many mariners and fishermen and its history of ship building and ship sailing is one of intense interest and many thrills. At the close of each shipping season a church service is held in Picton or Cherry Valley when thanks are given for a safe and successful season and prayers offered for those who have lost the never-ceasing fight against the greedy gods of the storm. The romance and poetry of sailing days still clings to the shipping interests of Prince Edward County, and until quite recently the men who went down to the sea in ships from there were real sailormen with the greatest contempt for Diesel engines or any other such foofals. The steam age arrived late in Prince Edward ports and met with but a grudging welcome.

FEWER TRANSIENTS MAY BE VISITING BELLEVILLE as reported but the quality has evidently improved for a John Street residence was visited the other night after eleven o'clock by a well dressed young man who stated that he lacked just ten cents of the price of a good bed. He was well dressed from spats to overcoat, better clothes than the man of the house he interviewed. Chided for making this financial call so late at night he said that he had just reached the city, being delayed somewhat in transit and was on his way to Montreal to spend Christmas with relatives. He got the ten cents. He deserved it. Such supreme gall should not go unrewarded.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was watching me sewing on her sewing machine, and she said, O deer, O deer, if people only had to do what they wanted to do in this world and only had to see the people they wanted to see, it would seem like an entirely different world.

Why, ma? I said. What do you have to do, who do you have to see? I said, and she said, O a certain lady is going to call here to see me this afternoon, and I'd much rather see almost anybody else than her, and I'd rather get this sewing done than see the king of England.

Well O, ma, all you have to do is just not leave anybody answer the bell I said, and ma said, There's such a thing as politeness, in fact politeness comes before everything unfortunately. O my, I'd give a million cents if I didn't have to see her, she said.

Well tommy, ma, let me manage it for you and it wont even cost you 10 cents unless you want to give it for a reward, I said, and ma said, Nonsense, don be silly, what could you do?

I could come running in making awful sounds and holding my stomick and looking pale, and she would proberly go rite home so you could take care of me, I said, and ma said, In the first place that would be a lie.

Why would it, ma, I wouldn't actually have to say I was sick, I could just make fearser and fearser sounds when you asked me questions such as what was a matter, I said. You cant keep people from forming their own opinion, I said, and ma said, I appreciate your misplaced kindness, but however you explain it, your idea is based on a falsehood.

Meaning she wouldn't help me in a fit even if I was helping her, and I said, Well then O, ma, I tell you what, I'll go rite down and finish the left half of that lemmin merrang pie as fast as I can eat it without hardly chewing, and by the time she comes I bet you'll be able to run in holding my stomick with a clear conscience.

O my lands the very thawt gives me nervus indigestion, she said, and I said, Then just imagine what it would give me.

Being what she was imagining already, and she made me go out in the fresh air and play, and the lady came and her and ma kissed each other on the side of the face at the same time.

MRS. SIMPSON TO REMAIN IN VILLA

Impossible to Shield Woman From Public Curiosity

Cannes, France, Dec. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson's host, finding it impossible to shield her from public curiosity, arranged today to keep his tedium of solitude in their villa.

Mrs. Simpson, member of the household said, probably would not be seen outside the hill-top villa, Le Vieil, for several weeks.

When she ventured into town yesterday, she necessarily was met by detectives to disperse crowds, which surrounded the fashionable shop, where she bought handkerchiefs, hosiery and gloves.

Mr. and Mrs. Merman Rogers of New York, owners of the villa, prepared a number of entertainments to help Mrs. Simpson while away the lonely hours until, eventually, she would be met there and given up his throne to wed her.

The Cinema Telephone Exchange disclosed former King Edward and the American-woman speak frequently by long-distance 'phone, a special operator to handle their calls and make their conversations are not overheard by eavesdroppers.

Many Friends Invited

A number of discreet friends were understood already to have been invited to the villa for teas and bridge parties during December. Mrs. Simpson's daye, Michael Arlen, the novelist, now a friend and neighbor on the Riviera, was to be among the guests.

Mrs. D. S. Merryman of Washington, D.C., Mrs. Simpson's "Aunt Bessie", was one of the latest confidantes—As expected from London.

Police Commissaire Jean Rore, member of the Special Division of the Sureté Nationale assigned to guard France's President Albert Le-Brun, which investigates and other dignitaries, was withdrawn from the villa. He had been in charge of the guards protecting Mrs. Simpson since her arrival just before Edward sailed. . . .

A squad of Sureté detectives remained, however, on duty—two-way relays to post a constant watch around the villa. Officials said they would be there as long as Mrs. Simpson was.

LADIES UNDER FIRE

For the first time since Judge Kenesaw M. Landis became commissioner of baseball, criticism of his decision has been openly voiced by baseball magnates. Powell Crosley, Jr., owner and president of Cincinnati Reds, stated in Daytona Beach, Florida: "I think that in view of the Feller decision, Cincinnati got a pretty raw deal, and I intend to investigate the Landis matter when I return to Cincinnati." Landis recently declared Bob Feller, Cleveland Indians' property, and previous to that he ruled two of the Dodger players were free agents. Crosley claims the cases of the players involved were parallels.

REORGANISATION

Where the money is to come from in giving practical effect to the reorganization plans with the people of Canada, the minister intimated. He admitted that the country was lacking in mechanized equipment, that it had a few anti-aircraft guns and that tanks were in discount.

Six Divisions.

However, the basis of an effective fighting force of six divisions was established in the new scheme; and its conversion into six army rested with the electorate, he said.

Mr. Ralston, carrying out of the plan depended on the goodwill of those affected, the minister said; and he had been impressed with the readiness with which all concerned had co-operated.

From now on the Canadian militia will be comprised of sixteen cavalry regiments, four armored car regiments, fifty-nine infantry battalions, twenty-six machine gun battalions, six tank battalions and approximately one hundred and sixty batteries of artillery.

In the reorganization 'infantry regiments find themselves converted into artillery. The minister said the officers of these units will be required to take courses in artillery and qualify in the ordinary course of events.

There has been little disturbance in the militia list, while those that included signs of interest have been retained in one capacity or another. A total of 40,000 men is trained. This was regarded by the minister as adequate to furnish a nucleus for the new reorganization.

DUKE MAY REPLY

freedom.

The Archbishop castigated Edward's circle of companions whose "standards and ways of life are alien to all the best interests of his people".

It was understood there would be no final decision until it was learned whether the attack would provoke the ire of the British House of Commons and what the outcome of such discussion might be.

Edward suffered from a headache and-a-half recurrence of his ear trouble, yesterday, and was also said to be the victim of an "emotional letdown" following the swift drama of his abdication to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson, the woman of his choice.

Debate Is In Depth

LONDON, Dec. 16.—(AP)—After the Archbishop of Canterbury's remarks, Commons, emphasizing the Archbishop of Canterbury's censure of former King Edward, members of the House of Commons delved today into the affairs of the British Broadcasting Company.

The B.B.C. (Government-controlled radio monopoly, broadcast the address Sunday by the head of the Church of England rebuking Edward for his desire to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson in contravention of the "Christian principles of marriage".

The Archbishop also castigated former King's circle of companions whose ways of life he called "Alien to all the best interests of his people".

(Reports from Rosenfeld Austria, where Edward began his self-imposed exile said he might reply to the Archbishop, depending on the outcome of the parliamentary discussions.)

Many of the letters received by members of parliament from their home districts termed the Archbishop's broadcast "unchristian".

The Commons examined internal conditions of the B.B.C. and it was believed a general debate would provide an opportunity for members who might want to question whether the Primate's address had prior Cabinet endorsement.

Edward Not a Pauper

London, Dec. 16.—(AP)—Whatever troubles former King Edward may have in his exile, they certainly will not include financial worry.

As long as he lives and as long as the monarch survives in England, informed sources said today, the Duke of Windsor will be wealthy enough to buy chateaux, yachts or almost anything that might attract his eye.

As principal heir of his grandmother, the late Queen Alexandra, wife of King Edward VII, he received a fortune estimated at between £1,000,000 ($5,000,000).

Well informed sources say his resignation of that fortune has been negligible.

Although the Duke of Windsor has lost the annuities he received as King from the Duchy of Cornwall, it was understood his brother and successor, George VI, was preparing to settle £50,000 ($125,000) annually on him from the Cornwall income.

Such a sum would be exactly what Edward gave George as Duke of York, before he abdicated.

LIFE, DEATH AND TUBERCULOSIS

Scores of thousands of people have died of tuberculosis in Ontario during the past 25 years. Many more would have died if the disease had not been checked. In a little over three decades the death rate from tuberculosis in Ontario has been reduced from about 160 for every 100,000 of population to 47 at the present time. Last year, four thousand people died of tuberculosis in Ontario. If the death rate had remained at the high level of the turn of the present century, there would be 12,000 deaths every year. Who will celebrate Christmas with you and your family next year? Who have died of tuberculosis? Who will have died of it by the end of 1937? Who will be living today in the same place with tuberculosis? Ontario Association has just issued the following statistics:

But in spite of all that has been done to check the disease, tuberculosis is still the most fatal infectious disease. Figures show that 1,303 people died of this disease in Ontario during 1935 alone. And to learn too that there are about 15,000 people living with tuberculosis in this Province right now. And what is more, there are about 4,000 people who are going to die from tuberculosis this year and of those who are now sick, are young people in the prime of manhood and womanhood, between fifteen and forty-five years of age. Of the total number of deaths from tuberculosis occur in those between fifteen and forty-five years of age. Tuberculosis is the most common cause of death during this period of life. It is the most common cause for the development of tuberculosis. In fact, it is the cause of one-third of all deaths of people who are living a normal life. Tuberculosis is the cause of more deaths among people in high school, colleges and universities than any other disease. Many of these people who are sick with tuberculosis do not discover and treated in time, the disease is curable. It is estimated that about as many as eighty young people out of every hundred who are sick with tuberculosis can be cured if they are discovered early enough and treated in time. The whole problem of tuberculosis control would be greatly simplified if early examination, if those found to have the disease could be isolated and treated and if all the sources of infection could be found and controlled. Tuberculosis control would be very difficult but not impossible to control.

In fact, this is the goal of the Ontario Campaign against Tuberculosis. The Ontario Campaigners and the Ontario Department of Health are cooperating. Any contribution you make toward the work of these hospitals will help to conquer tuberculosis. Send your gift to National Sanatorium Association, 120 College St., Toronto.

An Appreciation And a Reason

A letter of congratulation has been received by the Weaver Music Store from the RCA Victor Company complimenting this Belleville firm upon the large increase in business shown over last year.

Sales of RCA Victor Radios by the Weaver Music Store are one hundred per cent. ahead of last year and Mr. Tucker, local manager, states that this is due, aside from the excellent selling organization maintained, to the outstanding features which make RCA Victor Radio so attractive and a delight to own, including:

THE MAGIC VOICE,
THE MAGIC EYE,
METAL TUBES, Etc.

Many orders are being received for RCA Victor Radios for Christmas Gifts—and no better Christmas Gift could be imagined than one that will bring so much entertainment and happiness into the home and be a constant source of enjoyment and satisfaction to the entire family.

RECALLS AT 95 EARLY DAYS SPENT IN BELLEVILLE

J. Cole Says Citizens Were Opposed to First Three-Storey Building

COURSE OF RIVER

Almost a century ago; ninety-five years to be exact, on a farm in Ameliasburg township, Prince Edward County, James Cole, of United Empire Loyalist stock first saw the light of day.

Time, never ceasing on its ceaseless course has taken Mr. Cole on a long journey over life's pathway, since the first breath of life in the big world on that day in 1841.

Jan. 12th, 1937, will see another red letter one in the life of this venerable old man. In honor of his reaching the ripe old age of ninety-five years a birthday supper was held for him at the home of his son, Mr. Burt Cole, 370 Coleman St., of this city. Happiness was present in abundance when the friend of old man he was blessed with the presence of his family, which included three sons and one daughter, Mrs. Ruel Cole, Corbyville, Mr. Burt Cole, Belleville, Mr. Charles Cole, Corbyville and Mr. James Cole, 4th concession of Tyendinaga with whom Mr. Cole lives.

Remarkably Active

Mr. Cole is remarkably spry and active for his advanced years. He can see to read without glasses and has excellent hearing. Jokingly he told the Ontario Intelligencer interviewer that he sleeps like a top, very seldom awakening during the night. He also confessed that he "used to be early" said Mr. Cole, "and I did not wake until after nine in the morning. I couldn't believe it when I was told what time it was. It just seemed that I was asleep so short and woke up right after."

Good, sound sleep and plenty of it in Mr. Cole's own opinion is one of the main reasons for his advanced years. Coupled with this is the fact that he has always been a strong temperance man and a mild smoker.

Mr. Cole has always been an active church man, being at first a Methodist and later a United Church member. In a firm clear voice he declared: "I love my church." He said it in such a manner that one knew his whole soul was bound up in it.

His Early Life

At the early age of four Mr. Cole's family moved into their farm in Ameliasburg to the 4th concession of Tyendinaga. Mr. Cole has resided there ever since, and has been a farmer all his life, working at first for his father and then at twenty-seven when he was married to Adeline Rose he went farming on his own account.

"Things have changed around Belleville greatly since you were a boy, I suppose" Mr. Cole was asked. "Changed? I should say so. They scarcely believe me around the house here when I tell some of the changes and things that have happened," "What was Belleville like those days?" he was asked. With that one Mr. Cole gave a lengthy and varied description of life city when it was only a village, about seventy-five years ago.

Belleville had only three streets, Front St., Moira St. (now Coleman St.) and Bleek St., (Pinnacle St.) Beyond Bleek St. was farm land which belonged to Sheriff Taylor of Hastings County. Beyond Moira St. the land belonged to the Murneys and was called Murney Hill. Belleville was then called Meyers Creek. Something that is interesting to know is that Belleville got the name from the wife of one of Canada's Governors-General. A town of importance was being made through the province and the wife read parties stopped off here. The Governor-General's wife's name was Isabel. She was called Lady Belle. Gore. "Ville" was simply attached on to Belle Gore and hence the name Belleville came about," said Mr. Cole.

Front St. was a Plank Road

Front St. was a plank road in those days and extended back as far as Bleek Street. Building of this road was believed to have been started by large American lumbering concern which was situated in Point Anne. Lumbering was a very active industry at that time. When the road ran through marsh-land, large trunks of trees were driven in the ground and the planking was placed on top running angle-wise.

Moira River Winding

The Moira River was even narrower then. It was made wider by the quarrying of stone from it. Especially is this true past the upper bridge. "Then the Moira River is wider there than it is down near the bay. Stone was quarried from the banks there. I think that is one reason why we have had floods, the river being made wider further up the reaches and left untouched at the mouth," declared Mr. Cole. Stone quarried from the river was used to build many of the stone buildings on Front St. and near vicinity.

Belleville and Meyers Creek) was wide open at that time. From the docks at the lower end of Front St. to the upper bridge there were twenty-five hotels. They all had saloons. My father's hotel there was even served blind pigs.

Public Executions

The fall stood on the same place as it does today. "I have seen several hangings there in my time," declared Mr. Cole. Hangings were held in the open then in full view of citizens. This was the system until the time when a man and his wife were both hanged together. That was the last public hanging. Hundreds of people used to view the executions at that time.

Buildings on Front St. were all the same as one where the Lewis Hardware Store now stands. That used to be Gillen's Hardware. The other was on the other side of the street. It belonged to Nathan Jones. The first three storey building that was put up on Front St. was the building where the Bowen store is located. "When that was being built," declared Mr. Cole with evident amusement, politics were sent around in an effort to prohibit its building because people were afraid it would topple over on them. After it was built and a long time elapsed, confidence was placed in the road when going past it, because of their fear of its toppling on them."

Guild Hears Travel Talk

The Young Women's Guild held their Christmas meeting on Monday, December 14, at the home of Mrs. Wm. Simmons, 292 Dufferin Street with 42 members present.

Following the business period, Mrs. J. A. Buchanan conducted a lovely Christmas Carol Singing Service of worship.

Mrs. Wishart, president of the Guild, introduced the guest speaker, Miss Jessie Tuite, who gave a most sensible, and interesting description of her recent trip. After visiting nine countries, the speaker was able to give a very delightful picture of many old, historic cities, and told briefly the points of interest of each, giving a very vivid portrayal of Stockholm, Sweden, which is considered one of the most beautiful cities in the world.

A very fine vote of thanks to Miss Tuite for her most interesting travelogue.

A social hour was enjoyed at the close of the meeting.

MISS RIGGS DIRECTS

Belleville will have the unusual pleasure of hearing Handel's "Messiah" the first time in many years "The Messiah", the Handel oratorio which has become inseparably associated, especially in England, with the music of Christmastide, will be presentation in Bridge Street Church on Friday evening is sponsored by the choir of John Street United Church which has been responsible for many brilliant programs in the past. Forty-one members of the choir will take part in the oratorio, under the direction of Miss Leona Riggs, with Mr. Alec Gordon providing the organ accompaniment.

Four artists of outstanding merit will take the solo parts, Helen Morton Haig, Vallere Esty, John Deacon and Lloyd Bullen. To Belleville music lovers the work of the first three is very well known and Mr. Bullen of Toronto who assists has an enviable reputation in England and Canada.

Helen Morton Haig, favorite singer with her brother, Bill Morton, on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation "Twilight Hour" program began her music studies in Winnipeg. Her debut as a radio artist was on a small station in Regina about six years ago and so highly was her voice acclaimed that when the Canadian Radio Commission began its auditions she was recalled from holidays to take a special test which resulted in an immediate contract. She has been soloist with the Regina Philharmonic and symphony Orchestras and supplied for the soprano soloist of Deer Park Church choir, Toronto. Mrs. Haig, who is the wife of Mr. MacLean Haig of the city, is well known to Belleville audiences who found her as charming and gracious in personality as her fine voice has been soloist in Belleville churches generously given for her services on special occasions and the clear beauty of her voice has completely captivated her hearers.

Vallere Esty, daughter of Mrs. A. Teighmore, is rebuilding energetically on any musical program. This gifted soloist has won fame in the United states as well as in Canada and is equally versatile in standard oratorios, lieder and modern art songs. Concert work has claimed much of her time, and Mrs. Esty has also made a brilliant success of her role in the opera "Martha" presented by the Westfield Symphony Orchestra. Her recitals in the city have been occasions of rare pleasure to music lovers, who look forward with keen anticipation to her appearance on Friday.

Completing the trio of Belleville artists whose fame is widespread, Mr. John Deacon will be tenor soloist in Friday night's performance. Mr. Deacon has recently returned to the city from New York where his success was outstanding. Also a radio singer, achieving popularity with the Happy Gang's gang", his appearances in concert work have taken him to many New York Associations, to Calgary, Alberta, to Banff Springs Hotel and Chateau Lake Louise. Mr. Deacon has taken part in "The Messiah", Bach's "Passion", Gounod's "Redemption" and beautiful quality of his voice will add to the merit of the production.

Lloyd C. Bullen, celebrated Kingston baritone, who is well known all over England, and received his musical training at the Trinity College of Music and Royal College of Music where he developed a glorious voice with rich tone and rare volume. Ballad music, oratorio and concert claimed his attention with equal success. Oratorio singing is a leading feature in his repertoire, especially the works of Handel. A tribute to his success in this field was paid by a critic who wrote after a performance of "The Messiah" in Stratford, Ont., "Mr. Bullen is quite evident one of those Englishmen who was born with the Messiah in his heart." With such successful soloists and a choir of splendid voices the performance of "The Messiah" should make musical history in the city.

ARGYLL LIGHT

Notes From Stirlus

Historical Notes of the Local Argyll Light Infantry, which has been authorized by Hon. Ian Mackenzie under the new military organization scheme of the Dominion Department of Defence will be announced this morning are rich in facts of outstanding interest to members of the ancient regiment. They are set forth under the heading Fort Beauchamp Payne, padre of the former unit, who is at present engaged in a book on the compilation of the history of the Regiment.

Dating from the days of the Riel Rebellion in 1885, the local Battalion has aided in the enlistment of recruits to the 15th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force records at Ottawa, which reveals the fact that the Argyll Light Infantry.

Known throughout Canada as possessing one of the best and most efficient personnels of any Regiment, the Argyll Battalion has always been registered as one of the best of the Dominion. It has been given national recognition yearly.

Commenting upon the loss of the regiment as a whole and the official disappearance of its traditions and backgrounds Major Rev. Beaucham Payne today pointed out that the city's loss was felt no more than that of other cities in England where, under reorganization, regiments of century old traditions were lost in the shuffle.

"While we enjoy traditions of decades, there, in England, they lose traditions that have been bestowed in as many centuries as we have years," he added.

SUICIDE VERDICT RETURNED

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 16.—(CP) — Elgin Bigelow, 36-year-old miner who was "afraid" of his work, committed suicide by removing the covering from an ore chute and diving 200 feet down the shaft at the Falconbridge Nickel Co. mine, a coroner's jury decided yesterday. Bigelow was killed Nov. 25.

CIVIC BUSINESS TOLD KIWANIANS BY 2 OFFICIALS

History of Waterworks Department Narrated by Ald. Armstrong

STREET LIGHTING

George A. Reid Explains Position of Commission on Subject

A defense of the local Hydro Commission re-street lighting for Christmas and a resume of the progress of the Waterworks department of the Corporation was given the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at their weekly luncheon by George A. Reid, Chairman of the Hydro Commission and Alderman Harold J. Armstrong respectively. The speakers were introduced by President Frank Domenico and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Cliff Baragar. The president was in the chair while Bill Cook led in the community singing and Albert Boynton collected the several fines. A number of the Kiwanians signified their intentions of going to Picton to help that club out of their difficulties in the Bellevilleans sponsoring the Picton organization at its inception.

Gordon Bray, general chairman of the Carnival committee gave the members a detailed statement of the record Carnival and a deficit of $262.50 was reported and this was only accomplished by splendid donations from the Bawden Wartzer Mentle Corporation of Canada, W. H. Morton and the Hastings Arena. The thanks of the club for the fine work done by Gordon Bray in keeping the deficit down was voiced by President-elect Eddie Logan and heartily concurred in by members of the club. Jack Trudeau, chairman of the Christmas Tree Fund, named a committee of George Griffin, Frank Domenico, Ernie Pitkin, Les Fenner and Art Mills to assist in the work with all members on the general committee. Arthur Mills kindly loaned his white horse on Coleman Street to the club, where the baskets will be packed and the first work on these baskets will take place on Monday evening and all members are requested to be present to help in the packing.

Visitors Welcomed

Roy Brooks, vice president of the Kingston Club, George A. Reid, Harold J. Armstrong, Ida Wilson were presented to the club as visitors and heartily welcomed by the president. Alderman Armstrong after being introduced stated there was not enough understanding given by the ratepayers to their utilities and he hoped, that the information to be given would assist all citizens in their knowledge of at least one of the most important utilities in the city. The speaker told his audience the Waterworks system was started in 1886 and in 1899 was purchased by the city for a price of $182,000 and in 1901 a further $10,000 was added to the cost by the laying of new mains. At that time there were 15 miles of mains varying in size from two inches to sixteen and there were 96 hydrants and today there are 30 miles of mains in size from four inches to 18 with a 30-inch intake pipe running 1,400 feet out into the Bay of Quinte from the Filtration plant. The revenue in 1899 was $10,000 and in 1936 $57,250. The speaker stated the annual consumption was 700 million gallons in 1899 the year which was a daily consumption of 2,300,000 gallons and figured on a per capita basis amount to 152 gals per day. Alderman Armstrong explained that algae in the water during July caused an increased consumption as the filter beds had to be washed more often than under normal conditions. He also told the listeners that 85,000 lbs of alum was used each year and a grain was put in for very gallon of water used. The speaker paid a tribute to the Health Department stating that the water was always clear and free from bacteria.

Pumper Justified

Alderman Armstrong was of the opinion, that the pumper justified its purchase—and that it was an asset to the Waterworks Department. He explained that the pumper was bought out of revenue from the Waterworks. The capital investment in the Waterworks at the present time was given at $658,000 with only a debenture debt of $145,000 and that no further outlay was anticipated unless it be for a new standpipe, which was erected 50 years ago on Wednesday. The speaker informed the gathering that the Filtration plant was and will be paid for without assessing or raising the water rate and at the time of construction one half of the outlay was paid out of the reserve fund with the department assuming the remainder on the debenture debt.

Ex-Mayor George A. Reid and Chairman of the local Hydro Commission was the next speaker and dealt specifically with the dispute that has arisen between the Retail Merchants and the Commission respecting the payment for street lighting for Christmas decoration purposes. Mr. Reid was emphatic that the Retail Merchants had been fairly dealt with and that the Commission was forced to follow the law laid down by the Provincial Hydro Commission and that as long as he was connected with the Hydro, that policy would be followed.

Consumer Must Pay

The speaker treated the matter through last year stating, that someone had written Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner criticising the local Hydro Commission for its stipling the Retail Merchants in their street lighting, "Dr. Faulkner did the rational thing," said the speaker, "he turned the letter over to the Provincial Hydro Commission for their perusal and decision. I wish to tell the audience that the Hydro can light any street in the City of Belleville but the consumer must pay for the power used. That is the law". Mr. Reid stated, that when the complaint came to the local Hydro the Retail Merchants were invited to send a delegation to the Provincial Hydro along with the members of the Commission and get a ruling from that body but they refused and then an engineer was sent from Toronto to all towns and cities that had been cited as not paying for their street lighting decorations. "I have here a letter received from the Engineer", said Mr. Reid, and it open for any citizen to read, in fact any books pertaining to Hydro work are open for inspection at the office of citizen of Belleville. This letter states that all street lighting and equipment for Christmas decoration is paid for by some organization or that municipality and the Hydro Commission receives its pay for the power used. I can say, that in this city for the last three years we were complying with the law."

"At the present time", continued Mr. Reid, "we have no equipment to work with. We have $750 and the local Hydro is willing to sell this equipment to any organization in the city for $500 and that organization can add $250 to it to decorate any street they wish, but they must pay for the power, that is used." Mr. Reid explained that the Hydro Commission was only a trustee for the citizen's money and at the present time the Commission is in sound financial condition. "We don't owe a dollar, there is $30,000 in bonds laid away for a rainy day and there is $17,000 in the bank. I think the policy of the Provincial Hydro Commission is right, keeping out the politics and the local commission is going to carry out the policy to the wish of their bodily," concluded the speaker.

THE GUILD RESTAURANT OPENS FOR BUSINESS

Belleville's business district welcomes a new addition this week in The Guild Restaurant, owned and operated by Mr. Peter Lombros, in the premises formerly occupied by Peter Moores as a restaurant and candy store. Temporary improvements have been made and the establishment opened for business with a first class chef and competent staff. Following the holiday season extensive improvements will be made, the restaurant space enlarged and a new street front installed. A feature of the business is a modern confectionery department, home-made candy made on the premises, fresh every day. Mr. Lombros has many years experience in the restaurant and confectionery business and comes to Belleville highly recommended from other business centres where he has successfully conducted similar business enterprises.

FIGHT BUSINESS SHOWING SIGNS NEW LIFE LEASE

Heavies Hold Headlines For The Past Few Weeks

TO FIGHT OFTEN

Joe Louis to Box Every Month During Winter Season

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—From the lantanweight class right up to the heavyweight, the fight business is showing signs of new life.

The heavies have been holding the headlines for the last few weeks, what with the talk of a Jimmy Braddock-Joe Louis, no-decision bout at Atlantic City; and Primo Carnera over the final signing of articles for Braddock to defend his crown against Max Schmeling and Lenny remained for Max Kranzburg of Eddie Simms. However, champions and contenders in four other divisions are hopping right along and there may be more action after New Year's.

The middleweights are next on the program with Harry Jeffra and the "belting beakeman" who was considered a great title prospect until he was beaten by Babe Risko, meeting Brooklyn Sally Krieger at the Hippodrome tonight.

Krieger, unbeaten for some time, is a fair boxer and a pretty good hitter; is rated a 5-4 favorite over Bahama, whose devastating punch resulted in a lot of noisy publicity and an equal amount of disappointment when he was kicked. He still has the punch, however, and is determined to send it crashing against Krieger's jaw. Then he wants to collect a few dollars and begin the title chase anew.

Current plans call for the winner to face Fred Apostoli, highly regarded San Francisco middleweight who is due in New York shortly after the holidays and survivor of that mauish to encounter champion Freddie Steele, who also is due to head east early in 1937.

Winner May Meet Louis

The heavyweight move into the picture again Friday when big Ray Impellitteri of Cold Spring, N.Y., faces Ike Paddy, a boy billed as for the New York State title. There's a possibility that the winner may be lined up as a victim for Joe Louis who packs a scrap a month during the winter.

A lot of the interest in the bantam and featherweight classes comes from the fact that champions Sixto Escobar who already has stood out one of those tangled championship situations, when he whipped Petey Sarron in a summer, has been beaten twice since then in over-the-hoop bouts by the young Baltimore battler, Harry Jeffra. The next scene is due to be for a title match between the two and it may be different for the Puerto Rican boxer who has learned better when he's fighting at bantam poundage.

Ambers Loses Two

Ambers also has dropped two notable fights since he took the crown to Tony Canzoneri September 20. One was by Lou Ambers by Lou Cool; the other to Jimmy McLarnin, who says he wants to fight anybody for the featherweight championship. Herbert Marshall comes up against Enrico Venturi, one of two Italian lightweights who look like good title prospects, in another otherwise weight affair. If Venturi doesn't get anywhere, Aldo Spoldi is right on hand.

Ross, meanwhile, has to look after some business with Ceferino Garcia, who missed out on one chance for the Crown when he was injured in his "elimination" draw with Izzy Jannazzo. Garcia had a promise Gainford's a crack within 60 days after whipping Jannazzo.

There has been a lull in featherweight activities lately since Petey Sarron, most widely recognized of three title claimants, departed for Australia. The flyweight and bantamweight divisions are virtually "dead", the latter because champion John Kilby can't find anyone to fight. Lewis is threatening to tackle the heavyweights.

If he does, and if such promising youngsters as Gunnar Barlund from Finland and Sonny Walker, who comes from Lewis' home town, Atlanta, are recently accorded the rare feat of beating the Fireman, Tommy Loughran, continue to improve, there may be plenty of activity among the big fellows.

REBOUNDS

Trenton, Dec. 15.—(Special)—Plans were completed yesterday for the installation of an amplifier system in the Trenton Arena for the coming season and local sport fans are in for some lively comment on their favorite players with Elmer R. Bonter acting as commentator. The fans are in for many surprises and it is expected sport writers, team managers and ardent enthusiasts will have a chance to express their views over the system. This form of broadcasting is something new in these parts and is being done to make the games brighter and more interesting.

Over the holidays hockey players were going great guns on the river in front of the government docks. The contests were free for all or what the old timers term (shinny) and although combination plays were impossible to exercise all participants were developing their speed and wrist shots are essential points for the coming season. Many of last year's T. and D.H.L. players were in action and looked good in their initial pre-season workouts.

The Whitfall Cans of former seasons are a broken team and such stalwarts as Bill Miller and Roy Smith will no longer be seen wearing the gold and blue. Miller has signed with William Lasher's Cherrying Place threat and Smith is at Weston, LaMorra, who held down a wing position on the Whitfall squad is also a doubtful. Jamie Kerr, manager of the Cannen, in an interview said of the old team "Boys are only seven left and the outgoing will be tough if we expect to keep up with the leaders. Manager Kerr anticipates developing two coming youngsters Robert Johnson and Victor Burtt, who have been burning the ice up in their class sometime. Both of the mentioned youngsters are from hockey families. Johnson is a nephew of the outstanding fatrontie forward Normie Johnson and Burtt is the son of Victor Ross Burtt and a brother of Bruce Burtt, who was with local O.H.A., aggregations. The kids deserve a chance and it is a fact, that when the ball rings the young will be giving their best. May'be the Condiments are seeking something, and intend to present a "Kid Line".

Tonight at midnight, time is up for entry into the Trenton and District Hockey League. Up to date eight organizations have entered. Providing no other aggregations pop up at the last minute the present entries will perform in 56 contests before the finals next March, with the intermediate "B" fixtures labelled at the Arena, Trenton and the surrounding neighborhood will be given an interesting hockey menu.

One team will be missed from hockey this year. Wooler have not entered the league and do not intend to. Dr. Young who conducted the Wooler hockey and softball squads in former years will also be missing. He left the little village recently and took up a medical practice in the United States. Wooler will travel far before they find another man who took the interest in community sporting classes that Dr. Young did.

With Wooler out of the picture Belleville boys will no longer perform their masterful rushes and stickhandling specialties before the crowds in the arena. What was more thrilling than to see "Yum" Hart from Wooler with his rat and go through the entire opposing team, when the game was against him. Or what offered a greater sensation than the Rattler defence, when they banded with a stiff body check. Unless some of the local fans can import Wooler talent the team names and manoeuvres will be memories.

The Canadian Order of Foresters are competing in the Trenton hockey league for the first time. Harry Reynolds is managing the team. Mr. Reynolds has been connected with the game for some seasons and followed the sport when the old rink was situated in the arena here. He was a partner of Bailey Reynolds and operated a hardware store on Front street until a few years ago.

A good hockey player is not always a good coach. Many fair team managers have been busily signing them up. The Carrying Place entry will again compose local talent, and it looks as though Reynolds possess the only out-of-town performers.

HOCKEY'S BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Lorne Chabot, Detroit Red Wings pointing goals regularly at this stage of the National Hockey League, maintained his two-point lead over Americans' Dave Schriner in the point-scoring race last night as each counted once. Meanwhile, Johnny Gagnon was given an assist for Montreal Canadiens and moved from seventh to a four-way tie for third place.

The leaders:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Aurie, Detroit	9	6	15
Schriner, Americans	7	6	13
Gagnon, Canadiens	3	4	12
Goodfellow, Detroit	4	7	11
N. Cliville, Rangers	5	6	11
Chapman, Americans	1	11	11

Sport Callings

By Ken Calling

One fine day George Fletcher, of York, England, got to talking about his speed with a gun and boasted he could shoot 100 clay pigeons in 35 minutes or less, loading and unloading his own artillery. Now when George added that last phrase of loading and unloading a single barrel shot gun there were those who entertained feelings of doubt in the matter. One scoffer wagered $1,000 that Fletcher couldn't do it. The bet was entered and Fletcher's nine young sons and Burtt is the son of pigeons in exactly 34 minutes, before it or not. Of course the catch in the whole set-up is the fact that no member was made of many pigeons Fletcher shot at, but he "winged" the 100 in the course, however.

Sport-writers throughout Eastern Ontario will welcome into the fold William J. Wallace, newly-appointed sports editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard. Mr. Wallace was for 13 years connected with the sports staff of the Montreal Herald and Empire and is a well-known sports authority and will be a welcomed addition to the ranks throughout this district. Fred C. Beazley, former Kingston sports editor, has been promoted to telegraph editor.

Ollie Mulvihill, former Belleville inter-winger, is going great guns for the St. Louis "Flyers" these days. Information has it that the "Flyers" have established what is believed to be a record in professional hockey circles. The "Flyers" have not lost a game. In 15 starts, they won 13 and tied two and are making a runaway of the Canadian section of the American Association.

Albert Faulkner, son of the Hon. Dr. A. Faulkner, M.L.A., arrived back in town recently after spending the summer in Northern Ontario. "Ally" will be a welcome addition to the Belleville Intermediate basketball squad. He competed forward having starred for the local Collegiate and junior O.A.B.A. ranks in past years. Incidentally Ally's ward appearances would lead one to believe he was born to the cage game. Juniors and intermediate, should enjoy a banner year. A doubleheader is on the cards for Monday night and is staged at the Armouries every Wednesday night in the "Y" house league.

As is usually the case in all such matters, the Petertorro sport scribe forgot to mention all the facts regarding the proposed intersecting "A" and "B" clubs in group No. 2 of the intermediate O.H.A. As one could expect, however, it all came out eventually and we now find that Percy Reed, former President of the O.H.A. and Peterboro' resident, was present at the arrangements between the O.H.A. and agreed to the grouping whereby Belleville and Trenton were to be given a "B" classification while Peterboro' and the R.C.A.F. were left with "A" with all four entering into the group in the interlocking schedule. A total of all games counting against or for each club in their respective classification. Every one was satisfied we forgot to mention, however, The O.H.A. voted that providing either Trenton or Belleville finished first in the four-teamed group that club would continue on in the class "A" playdowns, or in other words there would be no class "B" club enter the provincial play-offs, if either of the "B" clubs won the group. The set-up seems perfectly sans and fair to all clubs entered, especially as all games count in the final standing.

The recent announcement that the O.A.H.A. had severed all relations with the A. A. U. of C. does not really came as no surprise in some circles. Some years ago the O.S.A.A. discontinued the use of amateur cards and has carried on quite successfully as an amateur body ever since. Just because an athlete has a little slip of paper-board signed by some high and mighty official of the A.A.U. of C. does not explain that person in a realm above some other athlete, who does not possess the amateur card, there are some simon pure athletes, who never obtained an amateur card and their amateur status is perhaps better than many of those who possessed the card.

The break was regarded as inevitable under the conditions that have prevailed between the two bodies for some time past. There has been a considerable lack of harmony between the factions concerned, which resulted in the severing of relations. The hockey and baseball moguls finally fell the policies of the A.A.U. of C. and were guided by many organizations which did not contribute nearly the financances they were called upon to supply through the sale of amateur cards.

Frank "Duke" Smith, guiding maestro of the hockey activities of the Belleville Athletic and Yacht Club, was unable to land a berth in his pucksters in the Trenton and District League recently. "We fan-not seem to interest places like Napanee and Picton in the revival of the old Bay of Quinte League, and it looks as though we're building the well-known bag", stated Duke today. (Yes, Duke, and without the slightest doubt, any chance is to affiliate with the O.H.A. and try to get a class "B" grouping with Trenton and the Belleville Redmen. I've already taken the matter up with the O.H.A. convener and am waiting further developments," added the skipper of the "Sailors". Whether or not Belleville could support four O.H.A. entries in one season remains the big question of the moment. If the "Sailors" were to be granted an O.H.A. franchise, that would mean the R.C.A.F., Redmen, Sailors and the Belleville juniors would all have the Belleville Arena as their home ice and we doubt very much whether the community could financially stand so much hockey in one season. There's an old saying—"class tells, but quality sells". Of course all entries to the O.H.A. closed on December 2nd and it is quite doubtful if the sports body would accept the Sailor's application for affiliation at this late date, however.

The Montreal Canadiens, with their veteran pucksters are definitely continuing to lead the N.H.L. Last night Les Canadiens downed the group-leading Detroit Red Wings 4 to 3, while the Boston Bruins bagged two counters in the same time to drop down the Americans 5 to 3. The remaining game saw the Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks points as they battled to a two-all tie.

Right on the heels of the Louis-Simms bout Promoter Rip Valenti, of Boston, announced he had signed Joe Brown, Denver, to meet the winner of the Tony Schucco-Al Ettore bout on Friday night. The bout will be held as an open air attraction in Boston early next January.

The veteran Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove led the American League batters last summer with an average run average of 2.81 runs per game.

MUST TRY BOY IN JUVENILE COURT

Bench Rules George Thorne Only 15 at Time of Alleged Offence

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP) — Magistrate H. A. Burbidge ruled today that George Thorne should be tried in juvenile court on charges of assaulting his employer, Mrs. Addie Nichol of Blackheath and theft.

Thorne's mother told the court her son was 15 years old when the alleged offence took place Sept. 1. Beaton so badly she will be unable to appear in court, Mrs. Nichol gave her testimony to court officials yesterday at her home.

C. W. Ballard, K.C., crown attorney, opposed the attempt to move the case from criminal to juvenile court. He said evidence should be submitted to show Thorne attacked Mrs. Nichol, knocked her unconscious, dragged her 100 yards by a rope over rough ground and tried to bury her in a manure pile.

Further, he said the crown would show stole Mrs. Thorne's wedding ring and clothes and money before fleeing to Toronto where he was arrested.

GOES TO BOYERS

After the break-up of Buffalo Bisons' hockey team it looked as if Frank Nighbor, coach of that team, would be out of a job. It did not take long for Lester Patrick, manager of New York Rangers, to get in contact with the former Pembroke coach and arrange for him to coach Rangers' amateur team, the New York Rovers.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Wedding Present"

What happens when a newspaperman with a flair for gags sets out to give his former sweetheart the world's most sensational wedding present, even to the eve of her nuptials to another man, forms the basis of the uproariously funny "Wedding Present," coming to the Belle Theatre tomorrow and Friday, matinee daily, with Joan Bennett and Cary Grant in stellar roles.

"Wedding Present" is adapted from the hit Saturday Evening Post story of the same name by Paul Gallico. It was directed by Richard Wallace and produced by B. P. Schulberg as the first of his releases under a new agreement with Paramount.

Miss Bennett and Grant are reporters on a metropolitan daily in the fiction-packed and exciting city of their hard-boiled city-editor, George Bancroft, who is slowly turning gray because of their pranks. When Grant succeeds Bancroft on the city desk, Miss Bennett quits and leaves town, distressed because her former buddy seems to be developing into a "big two-telephone man." She gets a job in New York and is planning to marry a writer of inspirational books when Grant decides to buy her a present. It brings a reconciliation.

"Isle of Fury", Thrilling

For stark drama, wild adventure and unique romance set in a weirdly glamorous background, her playtime can compete with the Warner Bros. production "Isle of Fury", announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

The picture based on the Somerset Maugham novel "Trio", "Rain", "Miss Thompson" and "Miss Sadie Thompson" in the past with thrills from start to finish, including the rescue of men marooned on the reef from a ship smashed on a jagged coral reef in a storm, fights and battles with knife and gun between outlawed white man, half-castes and natives, and greatest of all, a titanic struggle in the shallows of the lagoon in the snakelike tentacles of an octopus, at the bottom of the ocean.

Underneath it all, there is seething passion in the hearts of a man and beautiful girl, both of whom fight desperately to control their love because the girl is the fiancee of the master of the island.

But love and hate are hard to hold in bonds and when the husband discovers the romance he arranges a lowering rage to slay his rival whom he had called friend.

The sterling cast is headed by Humphrey Bogart, Margaret Lindsay and Donald Woods, the three who are enamored by a triangular romance.

Two Features Tonight

Marian Marsh, Warren William and Isabell Jewell are featured in "Satan Met a Lady" and Edgar Wallace's stirring action melodrama full of suspense and romance in the "Frightened Lady" at the Belle tonight for the last times with John Boles and Rosalind Russell in "Craig's Wife" and late World News events. The last complete show begins at 8.30 p.m.

HUNTER SHOOTS 130 POUND WOLF

Pursues Wounded Animal Half Mile And Finishes Him

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Bringing the pelt of one of the largest wolves ever seen in the north country, George Wilkinson, arrived in Toronto from Bushay Lake today.

The grey timber wolf weighed 130 pounds and measured more than four inches from nose to tail Wilkinson brought the pelt to Toronto to claim the bounty and to have it mounted. He plans to place the pelt in his hunting lodge at Bushay, now being built at Matamagamahing.

Wilkinson said he and his partners, Jack Kaye and Arnold Rackett were hunting when they came across the tracks of two deer. They followed the tracks and soon came to the deer when they heard the howling of wolves circling their prey. It was about 50 feet away when Kaye shot him through the body, said Wilkinson. The wolf howled and stumbled away. Kaye followed his bloody trail for a mile and came across him half seated on a stump and ready for his last fight. A well-placed shot through the head finished him.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Case of the Black Cat"

The latest of the First National publicized versions of the Erle Stanley Gardner's mystery thrillers, comes to the Capitol on Sun. Mon. in this outstanding double bill show today, with Ricardo Cortez in the role of the famous lawyer-detective, Perry Mason, and Jane Travis as Della Street, his secretary.

There are murders galore—one of an eccentric millionaire's nurse, one of his caretaker and one on a mad cat—and a third for good measure. Six persons are under suspicion, two of whom kill themselves. The six suspects include Jane Bryan, grand-daughter of the millionaire; Craig Reynolds and Gordon Elliott, his policies in the Hedda Harrigan, Minnesota's footballers, for the third straight year, unanimous all-star selections. Despite their great defeat in four seasons, the Golden Gophers were regarded the outstanding college gridiron outfit. They were No. 1 selection in a de-cisive manner, collecting 107 points.

Also highlighted of the Olympic performance, were those by the American track and field team and the University of Washington's eight-oared crew. Thirteen experts listed the track team first while six preferred the boatload of Huskies.

RECORDS OF ADDRESS SOLD

New York, Dec. 16—(CP)—Music and song publishers have had a lucrative business today purveying the most Christmas gifts, records of the Duke of Windsor's farewell address to empire after he had abdicated the British throne.

Recording companies reported brisk demand for the records which are believed would later acquire a rarity value which would make them valuable as a collector's item.

Baseball's Dominant Club New York Yankees Voted Best Team Achievement

MINNESOTA SECOND

Track And Field Squad For U. S. Olympics Place Third

By ALLAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

New York, Dec. 16—(AP)— For the fifth consecutive year, major league baseball's dominant club takes a bow for the outstanding team achievement in any branch of sporting competition.

To the world champion New York Yankees, for their record-smashing triumph in the American League Pennant race and their decisive victory over the Giants in the world series for the No. 1 ranking position of 1936.

Colonel Rupert's ball club thus becomes the first repeater in the ten-year history of the Associated Press sports poll. The Yankees topped the list in 1932.

In an extremely close race, the Yankees polled a surprising declare margin in the nation-wide balloting. Gehrig, DiMaggio and Company rated No. 1 on 43 of the 179 ballots cast, which accumulated the high total of 17 points.

The neighboring rivals, the Giants, finished 8th on the list with 9 points to their credit. The same nine points despite their 4th place finish in the National League race in mid-season.

Minnesota's football team, the third straight year, unanimous all-star selections. They were No. 2-1 selection in a decisive manner collecting 107 points.

Despite their great defeat in four seasons, the Golden Gophers were regarded the outstanding college gridiron outfit. They were No. 1 selection in a de-cisive manner collecting 107 points.

BACK WITH CANADIENS

George Hainsworth, veteran goalkeeper released by Toronto Maple Leafs recently, went back to his old club, Montreal Canadiens, when, due to an injury to their regular goalie, Wilf Cude, Canadiens called George into action. He helped stop the Frenchmen into first place in the Canadian section by a 2-1 tie with their home town rivals Montreal Maroons.

HOW JOAN LOVED THRU

Chapter 15.

Teddy Creates a Scene

On an afternoon when Esmee had left to go shopping, Teddy Lathrop came up to find Joan alone in the apartment.

"Thank the Lord," he exclaimed fervently, sinking down on the divan. "I'll swear I'd poison anybody whom I found there except you, Joan darling."

Joan laughed at his sulky tone. "Did it really hurt tonight?" she mocked. "Silly, I'm not that popular, am I?"

"You're too confounded popular to suit me." Teddy said, jealously. "Come here." He reached up and caught one arm roughly and tried to pull her down beside him.

Offended, Joan tried to draw out of his arms. "Teddy, you're rough! I don't want to do that."

His face lit with a flash of anger. "Oh, for the Lord's sake! When are you going to drop that line? Run a good sport—willing to mark time for awhile but it's beginning to wear thin!"

There was a moment of silent struggle. Joan was frightened. Teddy had been drinking heavily; it showed on his flushed face, in the cynic mouth and a sulky droop and in his usual careless camaraderie of manner had been turned into one like a mask. Panting, Joan twisted away from his seeking lips. "Don't, Teddy—you're not like yourself."

The boy's breath was hot on her averted cheek. He bowed her struggling hands to her side and easily held her with one arm while his other hand forced her reluctant face around until he could crush his mouth down on hers in a long smothering kiss.

There was nothing in it of the thrilling ecstasy which she had known from Hugh's kiss. Joan had gathered a world of bitter knowledge since she read her romantic dreams into Hugh's embrace. Now she knew Teddy's kiss for what it meant, stark desire, born of the careless intimacy of the past month. Her mouth was bruised, her breath smothered under the rough insult of that caress. Desperately she wrenched her face away.

"Don't—Oh, don't!" Her voice was thick with disgust.

Something of Joan's feeling must have penetrated the boy's excited brain. He held relaxed for a moment and in that interval the girl slipped away and stood, panting and disheveled, facing him from behind the barricade of library tables.

"You—you—rotter."

Teddy stumbled to his feet and automatically straightened back his rumpled blond hair. He was bewildered and resentful. "Say—why get so up-stage all at once! Maybe I was too rough, but you needn't high-hat me, Joan. I'm not a leper. Let's call it a day and make up—" He made a reach for her which touched a vase and a silver cigarette box on the floor. Joan shrank back against the wall. There was something in the boy's eyes which frightened her—the same thing which had looked out of Elmer Parcher's eyes when he proposed that she should take an apartment—something of the look with which Andy Cotter regarded Esmee.

"Teddy—don't—" She struggling to tell you—"

"Keep it," he answered truculently. "I've got something to tell you, Miss-ky, and don't you forget it. Act that way—do-we-care—and you will not! Not don't pull it on me any more. That side of Joan with a good-night kiss.... all those men sitting at me—me—fed up!"

Teddy stopped, attempting an air of outraged masculine pride, but only succeeded in looking like a wilful boy. "I just thought you liked to be teased, to have me dazzled after you for a bit. But it's man's patience gives out after a while." Then suddenly melting to a husky tenderness, "Aw, Blondy—honey—I'm crazy about you, you know it. And I've got a lot of money—I can give you better fun than the heaven and pearls—you'd like that, would-you? You could get anything in the world out of me."

"I—I don't!" Joan shrank back against the wall and drew the cowering her scarlet face with her hands. For the first time in her young life she felt lingly awake, for the first time she realized the trap she'd sprung herself and this apartment, through her own eyes.

She jumped in fright. The bell had come close, he was towering over her, trying to draw her hands from her face. His face, flushed and sullen, was coaxingly bent to her own. She saw the flash of his white teeth.

"Teddy—wait!" Joan moved away, stopping him with the slim arm set against his chest. "Teddy—I don't understand. I might as well tell you—that. But you don't understand. I have no business here but—there was no place else. Fate just threw me in here—and there was no place else to go. Listen—don't!" at an impulsive movement of his arms, "you must listen. I want you to know why I'm—I'm grateful to be here in Esmee's apartment."

Teddy started to talk and after the first few words the boy's defiant gaze grew deeper, softer, his mouth lost its sullenness. He had loosed the barring hand and was gently stroking it.

"Poor little friendless thing—poor little scared friendless thing—he said softly when Joan had finished. "Didn't know which way to turn, did you? And I was here all the time! Blondy, little sweetheart —" disregarding her struggles Teddy was pulling her into his arms, "No—don't fight—I love you, dear—do you hear? You're going to marry me, sweetheart."

Chapter 16
Fate's New Move

The shock of Teddy's declaration held Joan immobile for a moment in the boy's arms, then she gently drew away.

"Teddy, don't—dear. You don't know what you're saying."

This opposition had the effect of fanning the flame. "I know what I want! I've decided. I'm crazy about you, I want to marry you. Say you will—darling."

"Wait." Joan put the boy's arms aside and walked to the window to stand looking down on the sunshiny street. Like physical blows the unnerving again. Her back she seemed to hear Esmee's shrill voice. "Teddy you're mad with money—you're a fool if you don't take him!" The boy's voice was strong was the impression that she had to turned to see if Esmee was in the room. Only Teddy was there, facing her with burning eyes, a cowlick brightly erect on the crown of his head.

Joan's eyes went back to the street again. She sensed the bleakest carpeted with snow—a way-out place for sensitive people. And living: no need to descend to the grey business district and vainly search for work again.

"Sweetheart, you will, say you will." Teddy, who had come up prepared to conquer like a man of the world, was stunned into a boy in his pleading. Never had he seemed so young to Joan, with the bitter knowledge of Hugh's treachery and the abrupt glimpse of life which Esmee had given her, felt old with a stunning worldliness. "And you—"

"I—don't think I love you. Teddy—"

Teddy's jaw line took on a stubborn set, showing the character which would grow with the years.

"Never mind, you will," he said with young confidence. "And in the way I love you enough for two. I'm through the door, Blondy. Bring your dear gold hair, and your eyes —like grey sea-water—"

Teddy was coming toward her, his eyes devouring her, his hands reaching out, drawing her into his arms, so engrossed with his own overwhelming feelings that what-he-is or not-he loved him was suddenly of secondary importance.

Behind them the front door opened and Esmee's high accented voice rang through the room.

"Look, like the clinch scene in the fifth reel!"

She was in the door, frankly amazed, black eyes gleaming with a slightly malicious delight at having caught Joan at a disadvantage. Behind her they could see Andy Cotter's more sculptor shallow, pretty face of Gilda, and the pretty grey eyes whom Gilda unconvincingly hinted was some vague relation interested in "education."

Teddy shouted joyfully to them, his voice in face chilling. "Come in and help me celebrate, gang! Get out the case of real champagne you Blondy and I are going to be married!"

Stunned!" It seemed to Joan that each of the four must have echoed the word in varying shades of disbelief.

Teddy's jaw took a belligerent set.

"Yes, married. Just as soon as it is possible. Aren't we, sweetheart? Now I have witnesses! How you can't back out!"

Like one in a dream Joan heard herself answering their clamorous questions, her hesitating replies drowned in the joyous boom of Teddy's voice. Esmee was making plans, wild plans of a honeymoon trip to Palm Beach.

It served as an excuse for a celebration. The dinner party staged at one of the most lavish hotels. The evening passed in a blaze of color and light. Joan, who she stood outside herself and watched the reckless, gay girl, the impressions of a marble and gilt foyer, of crowded dining-room, where she was crushed close to Teddy in the langorous rhythm of a waltz, of Esmee's laughter, a slender white satin figure with bejewelled throat and arms, of Andy in their hilarious party.

Joan had drunk nothing too fast in the past months for her to completely realize its abrupt changes. Champagnes—a lot of it—and —— that bitter night with Hugh when she had drunk to forget, and it started a desolate ache in her heart which Teddy's ardent words were about her. That was words away from her now—a whole lifetime away from her. Teddy's arms into this strange new role....

Once during the evening was that sparkly pierced. Joan had gone to the powder room to repair her lips. Esmee and Gilda were there—she could see the smoke through the crystal curtain—curled up behind the great Mocquerd screen which divided the room. Esmee's voice sounded shrilly: "..... she thinks she's slumming on top of the world, the right now. Poor kid —just wait until she has to deal with Mark Havens!" Esmee's voice took on spiteful relish. "Oh—boy! I could see Mark Havens' eyes!"

Joan thought of that—and turned briefly about it and finally dismissed it from her mind. Esmee was probably speaking of someone else.

CHAPTER 17
Orchids and a Surprise

An early ring at the doorbell the next morning brought Joan in a hastily flung-on negligee and ruffled yellow head to find a very small boy bearing a very large box.

Opened and divested of its myriad layers of rustling tissue it contained two dozen orchids. Joan touched the crisp lavender petals with a plying finger. "From Ted—" she read a little sadly. He'd was so lavishly joyous and she could not earn more than that!

Esmee flounced petulantly over in bed and her muffled voice came out of the pillows.

"For the love of heaven! Why didn't the moron stay up all night! This is the devil of a hour to wake a lady up!"

Joan, closing the door behind her, slightly soiled Chinese robe into the kitchen to get some of the breakfast Joan had prepared, she also a jealour look at the other girl.

Teddy's purpose was good for this place now that you've hooked Ted-dy Lathrop and his millions!"

Joan tightened her lips and choked back the reply that had risen to her throat. Only Teddy's voice, putting it in order with quick, deft touches. From the first she had taken over most of the work of the apartment—Esmee raising no objections to the move of Joan's clothes when she considered that this evening.

At noon Esmee departed on some mysterious errand of her own, at which time little figure in sparkly and lavender—she had not dissipated to appropriate the mere of orchids. It was a relief when the door closed on her sulky red mouth and petulant eyes.

For a couple of the fellows here at the club, going to help me celebrate . . . . then I've got to see someone. She knew he meant his guardian. "Beastly mess. But I'll be up in a little while, darling—"

Joan stood there after she had hung up, head resting against the mantelpiece, her mind blank. Her thoughts were heavy today. Why couldn't she done this—she had to love with Teddy. Marriage —with Teddy! The words were meaningless—Hugh had married another without love was a sin . . . But Joan was the loneliest girl could not bring its old ache now. Joan faced the truth; she was a coward, she was afraid of the future. Esmee's close grapples she had come to with actual want, the dread of finding work which never materialized were forcing this step. She would do her best—Teddy should find no lack in her, she promised herself a little wistfully, but she couldn't go on alone any longer. She must be secure, safe from the world behind a golden wall of money.

Joan put on one of the dresses she had brought from home—a plain flannel which clothed her slim body like a sheath. She could not read, she could only pace the floor, constantly inhaling painful blurred thoughts.

The bell sounded—not the devil's later Teddy generally played on it, but a single decisive ring that spoke authoritatively through the apartment. Expecting to see Teddy, Joan was astonished to find herself looking up into the face of a stranger standing in the hall, a man who regarded her with an unsmiling—an unfriendly gaze.

"Miss Allen?"

Even now Joan flushed guiltily at the pseudonym. When she acknowledged it she thought she detected a faint surprise in the man's eyes, as though she were not the sort of person he had expected to see. But his next words were impersonal as he spoke.

"I am Mark Havens. I have just had a most astonishing interview with my ward, Theodore Lathrop. It is necessary that I have an interview to talk to you alone."

Joan's heart was racing. Something she had overheard the night before flashed into her mind. Esmee's gloating voice, "Just wait until she has to deal with Mark Havens!"

Joan knew that Teddy regarded his attorney with affection mixed with a good deal of respectful fear. On one occasion she could remember him shaking a warning finger to make the fourth on a wild party. "Don't dare," he had admonished. Ted, that's all you'll get by old Mark last night; he'd raise the roof if he heard of it—and more and when the old boy gets in action, believe me, I want to be somewhere else."

Mark Haven was taller, larger framed than the average man, with strongly marked features, and slightly grey-brown eyes looked out from beneath well marked brows. His nose was straight, his mouth firm, his mouth well-cut—firm— And how he hated her! Joan felt intimidated by it with a sensation of dismay in her heart—how Mark Haven hated and distrusted her!

CHAPTER 18
Mark Havens

As Mark Havens followed Joan into the living-room he was thankful that the girl could not read his mind and see how utterly disconcerted he was at her appearance. His interview with Teddy, his previous knowledge of this over-ornate apartment house, had not prepared him for a girl of Joan's type. Put together an astonishing sort of person! In that tan flannel thing, with the shining mass of hair, and the clear, grey eyes, she looked like a girl about to enter college—have been the flapper daughter of one of his own friends—she might have been the younger sister of Esmee.

For her own part Joan was equally thankful Haven could not guess her complete mental route. She felt at a disadvantage before this self-possessed man. His presence here emphasized the vulgar over-lay of Esmee's taste. She knew he became painfully conscious of a photograph of Esmee in a silver frame on the table, conscious of the bold pictured eyes, the ostentatious display of the sensual lips. She was aware of an ashtray she had forgotten to empty, of cigarettes in the shrewd stabs of Andy Cotter's cigars and half-smoked monogrammed cigarettes. Though Mark Havens' back was turned toward it she felt that these cynical eyes had missed nothing.

She sat down in a chair opposite the man and folded her hands, consciously looking like a child trying to appear grown up. Her simplicity of it told against her, the attorney put it down to ultra-sophistication and "set her down" crisp.

"I suppose you have guessed why I am here, Miss Allen. Teddy came to my office this morning with a wild story about being engaged to you."

Haven stopped, as though he expected this opening to draw her fire. Joan had never felt so young, so alone. She continued to look motionless, watching the man with wide fascinated eyes.

He went on impatiently: "Needless to say, the whole thing is absurd. Teddy's not being of age—not many without my consent, naturally I would have no marriage until he is out of college—perhaps not then. I will speak plainly; we will get along quicker that way. I realize your motives in this matter, but you have never met me and anticipated boy to deal with now. If I chose to play the part of the stern guardian I could make a pretty combination in short order. But I am not going to make any such antagonistic Teddy for the time being and—since you are probably averse to newspaper publicity, I would be only playing into your hands and shouting to the world of love-sick young cub which would hurt him with his college work. Then—too—I'll be frank to admit that it would not be easy to wean him away—you are decidedly beautiful and appealing. Consequently I have come prepared to buy Teddy's liberty and my own peace of mind."

Mark Havens was reaching for his chequebook when he was startled by Joan. She had leaped to her feet, cheeks scarlet, eyes sparkling, her whole body bright grey fire. Her voice trembled, but—he coolly noticed—was unmistakably clear.

"I know you are deliberately trying to be insulting, Mr. Havens, and I am angry and play into your hands. I never engaged Teddy, as you seem to think. We just came up here and—we sort of drifted together by—well, because I was lonely like my own kind —sort of—clean—"

Joan stopped, feeling her words to be weak, ineffectual things, dashing like wounded birds against the cynic mask of her enemy. There was which made one talk. She heard herself defending the background of Dorrwville for him—even heard herself faltering through the memory that bitter night with Hugh —making him see how inevitable it had been that she was away from home. The grey days—the heart-breaking search for work—Esmee's opportune offer—"It's been like that right along. Fate lashes me on—I'm driven—I'm helpless. I've been working like a child's about to cry. "It's like being in a flood or fire—I grasp, rush, rushed along without choice. Can't you see—Fate forces me into a position—and then gets me in another—"

Joan faltered, stopped, chilled by Haven's unchanging eyes and the little cold smile playing about his mouth.

Angered by his stolidity she stamped her foot, her voice rose to a shriek at him. "Oh answer—say something—anything! Don't just sit there smiling! You—you—you hate me!"

That honest flash of temper jolted Mark Havens from his aloof attitude more quickly than anything else could have done. He was now a shade more earnestness in his voice though his eyes were still sceptical.

"How can I take your emotional reactions seriously? You are only trying to rouse my sympathy by the commonplace means of a nervous breakdown. You're only dramatizing yourself to yourself. Suppose, for example, you presented some of fate you imagine, you view yourself as a victim—you are decidedly dissatisfied about in any stray current, knocked out of your course by any chance circumstance—"

The brown eyes were very hard —very mocking. "In plain English, you're only a quitter."

CHAPTER 19
Joan's Bargain

Mark Havens' words were like a spear-thrust, striking past Joan's defenses and drawing from her up at her from his own unruffled position in the armchair. Mark Havens felt a stir of admiration. No wonder Teddy had gone off his head about this girl. She was razor-keen and slim as a gold-tipped arrow. Her quarrel with Esmee—he did not need to read that—had roused real antagonism that time. The interview was proving unexpectedly interesting.

Under the impulsive romance and the easy discouragement of Joan's nature, there was a wealth of native honesty. He was consciously drawn in her mind and the man could read the struggle in her eyes. But the harshness of his judgment drew a sharp retort.

"It's easy for you to abuse me!" Joan's voice held a note of bitterness. "I'm not one of the people who think all the world is warm because their own little nest is closed! Have you ever been alone, friendless, in a big city—afraid of the race and the crowds—no one to turn to for advice? Have you ever stood in the line of the employment agency at the thought of turning away? Have you felt a sick—another turn-down? To shrink away from people, unable to face the humiliation and defeat? It was like a conspiracy to keep me from getting work—"

Havens had lit a cigar and waved it in a gesture of annoyance at her interrupted: "There's your weak trick of self-pity again! Have you ever had a chance to refuse a position? Have you ever had to trade the world in exchange for a job?"

He held Joan's wide grey eyes with his own. She thought he thought he had put his hands on her shoulders and forced her attention.

"Have you ever seen girls of today—there's no honest fight left in you! Weakling crying for mercy at the first snuff of the world."

Havens' eyes slipped accidentally over Joan's slim figure. "Nineteen or twenty, aren't you? At your age I was working my way through college and law school. Had to—there was no other way. Had to—there was no other way. Had to—there was no other way

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Supply of Bad Eggs

By Helen R. Barton

Natalie jumped as though she had been a mouse the morning the red-haired man stuck his head through the kitchen doorway and asked her timidly if he might please borrow an egg. The second time he appeared, bent on the same errand, she did not scream, but her face turned a wild-rose color with a sudden blush, and she said: "Did you break the other one?"

She was just a bit sorry as he answered honestly like a too-confiding little boy: "Oh, and it spoiled all the other stuff—it was awful."

"I'll let you have another, right now, and I do hope it's good!"

In ten minutes he reappeared, this time carrying a big yellow bowl in which he had placed creamed butter and sugar and the last of the big egg, and Natalie, inspecting the slightly odorous mixture, agreed that it certainly was a very bad egg, and what was it he was trying to make, anyhow?

"Waffles", he confessed, flushing slightly under his stern coat of tan. "I'm just crazy over waffles, and my cook has gone to town."

So she invited him in, then, and he sat in the broad white window seat where the rambler roses made a bower about the big old dormer window and watched her eagerly as she mixed and beat and stirred golden waffle batter, and then, like a small boy, followed her to the dining room where she plugged the waffle iron into the socket, and left him to watch it.

"Do you have the place across the way?" asked Natalie politely as she poured his coffee.

"Er—no, yes, that is, I stay there sometimes."

"It's good thing all those eggs weren't bad, what?" He smiled at her, revealing rows of firm, even white teeth, robbing the speech of any sting. She answered: "Good news yes; just wait till I lecture that Nels Johnson for his cheating! Giving me horrid old case eggs, when I ordered and paid for strictly-fr fresh!"

He grinned at her, saying: "Gosh, I'd hate to be Mr. Johnson. Redheads have fierce tempers."

"You should see my tooth top!" she flamed at him and he got up and fled, laughing.

"Stay J.", implored Natalie a week later, of the invisible, but obviously present occupant of the Monson cottage, "borrow two eggs, please!" And an instant later a tall, red-haired man appeared at her back door, an egg in each hand to answer her with a box of eggs. "Are you a friend of Mr. Monson?" she asked blushing, for she had expected to see her red-haired tormentor of the waffle-egg incident.

"Rather, I'm Rolf Monson," he informed her, smiling quizzically down upon her bewildered uncertainty. "Why, has someone been imposing upon your generosity in my name?"

"Oh, no. That is, I don't think so!" she answered hastily, taking the eggs and turning homeward. Who could he have been, she wondered, as she collected her week's accumulation of mail from the canvas bag on the porch. Opening the New York paper on top of the others Natalie stared at the headlines: "Notorious bank robber escapes guard and flees to Maine woods. Big posse hunts day and night. Big reward offered for capture of desperate criminal with several murders and shootings to his credit\". Then a startling line of type leaped at her: "Bandit is red-haired." But she dropped the paper with a little moan; she could not read any more about him. Why, he was nice! And she read on, she might have read that the crook was also forty-seven years old!

Another item leaped out at her startled eyes, and Natalie looked dismally at the photograph with the title, "Rolf Monson, noted artist, goes abroad for indefinite stay." They must both be crooks.

Just then came a wildly excited yell from across the way, and shortly after the red-haired young man came leaping through the woods yelling like a Comanche Indian: "I've got him. Holy sur- and rushed up here to hunt for him: I just had to find him"

"And you did", murmured Natalie, loudly, "and now you can and I do hope your friend Mr. Monson does not mind."

"Mind what, darling?" he breathed, blowing at the tiny rusty curls over her ear.

"Mind if you use his house," she finished lamely.

"Pooh! 'S my Dad's house; Rolf just rents it from him!" answered Jeff.

"Have you any fresh eggs?" he suddenly demanded. "I've just discovered that I didn't eat any lunch—and I just love waffles!"

And she had! And they're both famous now— even though they married each other!

DEPRESSION OF 1857 WORSE SAYS R. G. OKE

Whitby, Ont., Dec. 15.—(CP)—Celebrating his 81st birthday, Robert G. Oke said today he thinks this is a great age and the past depression "wasn't so bad" as they come.

Why take the depression of 1857. That was "an awful bad time", Oke recalled. "Shop-keepers put up their shutters and wheat dropped from $2 a bushel to 75 cents."

Josephine's Horoscope

Is there such a thing as seeing into the future? Yes. Here is one of the many testimonials to the solemn gift: When the Empress Josephine of France was a girl in Martinique, an old colored woman named Euphemia, told her fortune: "You will marry a fair man. Your star promises two alliances. With your first husband you will have a tragic lawsuit. Your second husband, a dark man of slender means, will fill the world with his fame and glory. You will be greater than queen." You will die unhappy." The entire prediction came true.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As the pygmy warriors stood awaiting the signal to hurl their spears into Tarzan's prison hut, a chorus of angry growls just beyond the palisade stilled the word of command on N'yalwa's lips. The little men glanced toward the palisade and saw dark forms surmounting it.

"The demons are coming!" shrieked one. "It is the hairy men of the forest!" cried another. Massive figures scaled the barrier and dropped into the village. In the vanguard was the little monkey screaming: "This way, Zu-Lho. This way is our friend Tarzan!"

Thus Akima had fulfilled his mission. The spear band had heard the call of distress which had issued from Tarzan's throat; and they had started at once to his aid; but they might have arrived too late had not the little monkey guided them accurately to the village of their chief. "Fight!" he shrieked; and the pygmies lacked no courage.

A huge ape rolled with giant strides toward the band, followed by six enormous bulls. This, thought Nyalwa, was the last chance to prove his right to be chief. "Fight!" he shrieked; and the pygmies lacked no courage.

BLINDING HEADACHES MADE HER HELPLESS

Forced to Lie Down For Hours at a Time

Other sufferers from headaches will be interested to read this letter:—

"Until last summer I was subject to very bad headaches. While they lasted I seemed to lose my sight and all power in my hands, and was forced to lie down for hours at a time. My aunt (who has taken Kruschen Salts for 18 years with wonderful results) suggested my trying them. I did so, and I've had not any return of those headaches for months, in fact I feel quite better. I shall always take Kruschen regularly in future."—(Mrs.) M. W.

Headaches can frequently be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in the complete elimination of waste matter, resulting in a purer blood-stream, and thus helping to bring relief from headaches.

MILITARY

fashno Chiang Kai-Shek, if alive, and avenge him, if dead, was reported unofficially to have been voiced today by the executive Yuan (governing committee) of the Chinese government at Nanking.

The report came from Chinese sources considered authoritative.

The goal of the punitive expedition, it was stated, would be Shaotn, Shensi Province, stronghold of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang who kidnapped the generalissimo and dictator of China, last week.

Official quarters have been unable to state whether Chiang is alive or dead—and there were rumors military operations might have to be in execution, if he still lives.

Chiang's Troops On Move.

Eight or ten Chinese divisions already have been reported moving on Shensi province with modern war skirmishes enroute.

Certain Chinese sources interpreted the report of the decision to send an expedition as indication the belief of government officials further efforts to negotiate in the present chaotic situation were futile.

Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, the minister of war and chief of the Chinese military affairs commission, replacing Generalissimo Chiang in his absence, was reported second commander-in-chief of the force.

Firm Leadership Lacking.

Chiang's uncertain fate spread unrest throughout China. Shorn of his strong man, Chinese leaders foresaw a lack of firm leadership to guide the nation.

The government established "military control"—equivalent to martial law—and gave reassurance to the people and businessmen, there was no danger of the chaos that Tokyo officials prognosticated.

Officials said they believed Chiang to be alive. They had a definite statement from him, they said, that Austrian-born secretary, who sent a message yesterday for the Generalissimo and gave hopes for the captured general's early release.

Chiang, however, said to have sent word he wished the rebel Chang and his forces assailed. It was this that Chinese sources said impelled the Yuan to call conference to determine on an energetic campaign to crush the rebel movement.

J. A. RAYNAULT DEFEATS HOUDE

Contest For Mayor in Montreal, Bitterest Campaign in Record

Montreal, Dec. 16 (CP)—Triumphantly returned to Montreal today with J. Adhemar Raynault elected mayor after one of the most turbulent civic election campaigns in the city's history.

The former Montreal alderman and Union Nationale member of the Quebec Legislature for L'Assomption scored a victory in yesterday's balloting, gaining a plurality of 8,456 votes over ex-Mayor Camillien Houde.

Votes chose the man who promised "Justice for all from an administration with a heart," and triumphantly passed up Candidate Rochefort, third candidate.

Corrected returns from the city's 1,041 polls gave Raynault's total as 52,586 votes. Houde, his old adversary in 1924, scoring 49,128 and Rochefort 17,082.

Rochefort, Union Nationale nominee of the Provincial administration by for Montreal, St. Mary's received so few votes he lost his deposit.

The first city to exceed little change, Thirty-five aldermen were elected, two of them by acclamation. Of the 28 aldermen standing for re-election only 12 were left in St. Paul Ward and Theresa Forbin Ville Marie, lost out. Thirty-five aldermen candidates lost their $500 deposits.

Police, likely busy all day, said there was no "serious" trouble. They said about 30 persons were arrested, 23 of them for "disorderliness" as against more than 150 in the previous election.

Houde, self-termed a "man of the people," and a dominant figure in Quebec politics for the past decade, paid his defeat meant "not adieu, but au revoir." He would return in two or three years, he said, should the people of Montreal call him back into service.

Board Room Gossip

by request to Biggar and Crawford

by Financial Service.

A bull market of major proportions was evident locally at the opening yesterday. With many stocks going into new high territory, and mining stocks and oils were prime participants in the advance, Temagami Canada Valley oils as well as the base metal stocks were exceptionally strong features. Other stocks in boom new highs included Aibona 26A, Bankfield 95-105, Dunlptau 14½ Capps Gold 4½-5, Darwin 41-44 Forty Four 23½ Hardman 37-39 Gold Eagle 70A Lake Cad. 127-142 Gillies Lake 39-42 Hudson Patricia 12A Lamaque 78-82 Leitch Gold 64-74, Maclen Red Lake 14B-15 McCarthy Webb 46-51 Moneta 27-29 Stone Extension 16A Thom. WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—Traders wrestled with double today with resultant indecision marked the stock market.

A few oils and specialties pushed up at the fast opening but most issues failed to get far out in front. Leaders dropped from the start although dealings were comparatively brisk during the first hour.

Oliver Farm shares pushed up 4 points or so and U.S. Steel pfd. and Vanadium about 1 each. Unchanged and slightly higher were Consolidated Oil, Seaboard, Pure Oil, Socony Vacuum, Yellow Truck, Continental Baking "A" Pullman, Goodyear, Allegtte Coast Line, Union Pacific, N. Y. Central and Johns-Manville.

McIntyre and International Nickel were moderately lower among Canadian stocks while dominion prices were maintained by Dome Mines, Distillers Corp.-Seagrams and Canadian Pacific. On the Curb, Lake Shore was in shade down 1. Canadian Dollars were unchanged at 100.13 1-2 cents.

A drop of about 4 in Newport Industries was reduced later. Inclined to give ground were U. S. Steel common, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Gimbel, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, National Biscuit, U. S. Gypsum, International Harvester, Consolidated Edison, Commonwealth & Southern, Amerada, American Can, U. S. Rubber, General Electric and Canada Dry.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 16.—(CP)— The mining section of the stock market lost some of Tuesday's gains in slower trading in base metal issues today. Base Metals and Golds were down but the oil listings continued the advance on the Toronto Market.

Royallte picked up nearly a point, Model Oils and Mark Foy made a gain of about 40 cents. Calgary-Edmonton added 15 cents and Dalhousie about 20 cents.

Prices were lower for O'Brien, Kirkland Lake, Hollinger, Consolidated Patricia, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Wright Hargreaves. Base Metals were confronted with price recessions for the metals on the London Market and the shares of the active issues were inclined to ease off moderately.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Dec. 16.—(CP)— The Toronto Industrials Exchange change was lower in the early session with volume down from that of the previous session. All the Interlisted leaders were off narrow. Off by with exception of Consolidated Smelters and Distillers-Seagrams and the Utilities, Steels and Miscellaneous issues were irregularly lower.

Oil stocks held steady to strong in fair volume and the Brewery Stocks registered minor gains. Mick. el, Brazilian and Ford weakened a bit to 3 and each and issue down a point. Included in the Burt, Hardcury Mills and Alberta Grains Pfd.

MARSHAL CHANG FLEES BY PLANE, REPORT

Nanking Government Sees Hope of End of Civil War

ARTILLERY STRENGTHENED IN MODERNIZATION OF CANADIAN ARMY

Modernization of the Canadian militia with the mechanical arm of defence forces strengthened and infantry and cavalry units reduced, besides reorganization announced by Minister of National Defence Ian Mackenzie. By conversion of cavalry and infantry units and formation of new units the artillery branch has been increased by a total of 62 batteries. Thirty-six cavalry regiments give way to 18 regiments, with an additional four regiments equipped with armored cars. Scenes from the mechanical arm of the Canadian defence force are increased still further, are pictured here. The 2nd Ottawa field battery of the Royal Canadian Artillery, rating the oldest artillery unit in Canada is shown (TOP) in camp at Petawawa. AT LOWER RIGHT, Canadian artillerymen are servicing a 15-pounder at Valcartier, and at RIGHT one of the modern Canadian tanks included in the army's mechanical arm is shown. Machine guns are mounted where the small doors open in front.

6,000 LETTERS A DAY RECEIVED BY ROYAL PRINCE

All From Feminine Admirers Applauding Him For Action

HEARS BROADCAST

Duke of Windsor Likely to Make Shopping Tour

The Duke of Windsor, suffering again from severe headaches received 6,000 letters from feminine admirers today applauding his "romantic gesture" in giving up the British throne for Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Eight hundred of the writers also asked the Duke for jobs, most of them expressing a preference for American citizenship.

Reliable sources disclosed the Duke suffered last night from another attack of severe head pains, which some said might be connected with his ear affliction.

Attendants at the castle of Baron Eugene de Rothschild, where the former ruler is a guest, emphasized however, that the Duke "is really better." They said he intends to continue his golf games and may go on to the hunting field.

The presence of the abdicated monarch brought a new burst of excitement to this little Austrian village where spectators thronged hilltops where getting a glimpse of the man who renounced a throne for the love of a woman.

Slippers Has Companion

The Duke's dog "Slippers" received a companion when a Vienna woman presented the Prince with a great terrier.

He also was offered chances to buy 228 castles, most of them belonging to impoverished nobles.

The Duke will take his first flight tonight on a British Radio broadcast with his personal secretary to cast over his high power receiving set with its portable antennae.

In golf and an evening game of poker joins the former monarch in playing much of his old time gaiety, said those who had access to the castle of Baron Eugene Rothschild where Edward is a guest.

The Rothschild, it was learned last evening won Edward over to her suggestion he make a Christmas shopping tour in Vienna and perhaps even visit some of the Night Clubs which he and Mrs. Wallis Simpson enjoyed during their August visit to Austria.

Someone who witnessed Edward's evening game of polo said he played it with great abandon and a good deal of skill. Baron Rothschild, also a fourth unidentified person were the other players.

NAVAL TONNAGE IS QUITE HEAVY

Five Times as Much Laid Down as Three Years Ago

London, Dec. 17—(AP)— Great Britain has laid down five times as much naval tonnage in 1936 as she did three years ago, it was disclosed today.

Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty who made the announcement in a speech last night, earlier had told the House of Commons he would ask 5½ for new capital ships to be laid down soon.

The new battleships will be the King George V and the Prince of Wales. They already have been authorized but their keels may not be laid until after Jan. 1, under the terms of the 1930 London naval agreement.

The new ships, some quarters said, may be used in a contemplated new squadron of five ships.

In making his announcement that 200,000 tons of new ships had been laid down in 1936, Hoare said:

"I don't take the extreme view that so urgent are our defence needs we ought here and now to impose statutory restrictions on ordinary trade but if European dangers become greater, or if the defence program encounters serious obstacles in its progress, we might well be driven to the restriction.

Sword Used in Days of 1837 Found by Boys Near Enterprise

Three Foot Long Weapon May Have Been Hidden Beneath Tree

DRILLING IN WOODS

Enterprise, Ont., Dec. 17.—(CP)—Boys playing in the woods near this village in Kingston district came across an old sword, believed to be a relic of the troublesome times in Upper Canada in 1837-38.

The three-foot weapon lay near the roots of a large tree which recently had fallen to the ground.

Opinion here was that it probably was hidden beneath the tree during secret training of sympathizers with a movement about 100 years ago for the overthrow of the Government. Considerable drilling was carried out near the woods which at that time were property of Silas Hawley.

Italy Seeks Gt. Britain's Recognition of Italian Conquest in Ethiopia

Should it be Granted Mussolini Could Then Return to The League

FRIENDLY GESTURES

Expect Declaration of Intention to Maintain Status Quo in Mediterranean

London, Dec. 17—(CP Cable)—After months of dispute which brought them almost to the verge of war, Great Britain and Italy again are drawing together.

It is expected Britain and Italy shortly will declare their common intention to maintain the Status Quo in the Mediterranean. Premier Mussolini wants British recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia. Then he could return to the League.

An Italian undertaking to maintain the Status Quo in the Mediterranean would relieve many British anxieties. British concern over the Spanish civil war has been largely due to what Mussolini might do next if General Franco, the insurgent leader, is victorious.

Mussolini might secure from Gen. Franco a naval base in Spanish Morocco which would prove an awkward rival for Britain's stronghold, Gibraltar.

He might establish himself in the Balearics and thus throw a barrier across the British route via the Mediterranean to the Singapore base and the Far East. Italy has given repeated assurances she has no such intention. But the presence of Italian Blackshirts in Spain and the Balearics lends a rather different color to the scene.

MARITIMES VOTE FOR UNION BREAK

Will Follow The Lead of The Parent Body in January

Halifax, Dec. 17.—(CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association gained another ally today—the Maritime Branch of the Association—in its break with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, rulers of the Dominion's Amateur sport.

By a vote of 6-4, the Executive of the Maritime Association decided in the early hours of the morning to follow the lead of the parent hockey body in breaking away from the A.A.U. and members refused to vote.

Five hours of Committee Room wrangling brought the decision and announcement of the resignation of Byron Brown of Charlottetown, second vice-president of the M.A.H.A. It was not disclosed whether the resignation resulted from the decision to stay with the C.A.H.A. when it severs "Articles of Alliance" with the A.A.U. Jan. 1.

The Maritime Association voted specifically on the question of whether the branch should remain with the C.A.H.A. despite any developments. The decision gave backing to the hockey body's stand of breaking away unless the A.A.U. adopted the famed "four-point" proposal for a new amateur-professional hockey set-up.

SIT-DOWN STRIKE IS NEARLY OVER

Employees go Home But Strike is by No Means Settled

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 17.—(CP) — Canada's second "sit-down" strike was over today, eased along by a squad of police, but the strike in the plant of the Kelsey Wheel Company, Limited, was by no means settled. The first strike of this nature was called in Hamilton last week.

Four hours after 140 workers quit their machines and declared the "sit-down" strike yesterday, only 60 workers remained in the plant, the remainder had gone home. The 60 remaining were told by police to vacate and they left without more than murmured protest, determined to carry on the battle by picketing.

According to Tom Parry, organizer for the International Union of the United Automobile workers of America, the strike was called in protest of the dismissal of five workers three days ago.

SENATOR WHITE CRITICALLY ILL

Publisher of Montreal Gazette Suffering From Pneumonia

Montreal, Dec. 17 (CP)—Condition of Senator Richard Scneston White, publisher of the Montreal Gazette, was reported "still critical" today from pneumonia and internal illness.

The 71-year-old publisher and prominent financial figure was stricken by pneumonia from a cold contracted several days ago, and physicians announced last night his condition was becoming more serious.

RETURN OPEN VERDICT

Port Hope, Ont., Dec. 17 (CP)—After inquest into the death of Donald A. McNab from injuries suffered October 17th in an automobile accident, a coroner's jury returned an open verdict.

Police testified the weather was "very foggy" when the accident occurred. An automobile carrying McNab and five other Queen's University students collided with a car driven by William Slater of Toronto.

GENERALISSIMO MAY BE LIVING NANKING HEARS

Rebel Leader's British Adviser Confers With Nanking Officials

SOLUTION FORECAST

Fighting Reported Spreading Around Sian-Fu, Capital of Shensi

Nanking, China, Dec. 17—(AP)—Nanking officials seized fresh hope today for an end to China's civil war and release of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek after conference with rebellious Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang's British adviser, James Elder.

At the same time, a spokesman declared a messenger was bringing an autographed letter from the imprisoned military overlord which would "dispel doubts as to the general's safety."

He also called a telegram, purportedly from W. H. Donald, Chiang's Australian-born adviser, saying he "had returned after Marshal Chang and remaining in the same room with the Generalissimo."

Elder, who arrived in the capital early today, was closeted with government officials for the greater part of the day attempting to work out a satisfactory solution for the crisis.

His movements were strictly controlled by Nanking authorities. Guards were posted around the entrance of the private residence and no outsiders permitted to talk with him.

Council Would Condemn Chang

The Control Yuan (council) approved a motion condemning Marshal Chang to public execution as a result of the military rebellion in which the Generalissimo was seized.

"He (Chang) has shaken the nation to its foundations," the Yuan declared in a statement. "So enormous is his crime it cannot be expiated short of the 10,000 deaths."

(Loyal forces, organized into an expedition to suppress the Shensi Province rebellion, were reported engaged in intermittent clashes with Marshal Chang's soldiers in the mountain passes which form the gateway from eastern China into the interior province situated in the Yellow River valley.

It was reported here fear-inspiring demonstrations of governments, war planes over Sian-Fu had caused the Marshal's willingness to negotiate.

Nanking Premier Chang, one report said, flew the provincial capital to an indication to the rebels of the (Continued on page fourteen)

King George Sixth Proclaimed in Ulster

Belfast, Dec. 17 (CP-Havas)—The Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Northern Ireland, today proclaimed King George VI at a special session of King George VI to the British Isles.

The colorful ceremony was preceded by a meeting of the Ulster Privy Council, presided over by the Governor.

Cotton Mill Town to Honor Comedienne

Rochdale, England, Dec. 17 (CP)—Rochdale, a hearty Lancashire town of 90,000 people, is going to celebrating the forthcoming coronation in part by conferring the freedom of the town upon Gracie Fields, the well-known comedienne.

Miss Fields, the highest-paid British film star, is the first woman to be thus honored.

Born at Rochdale in a modest house, she often returns there to visit friends she knew as a mill girl. She has raised £5,000 for Rochdale charities alone.

RUMOR SAYS CHIANG MAY BE FLEEING CHINA

Shanghai, Dec. 17.—(AP) —Unconfirmed rumors circulating in Shanghai today said Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, captor of China's dictator, General Chiang Kai-Shek, had fled from Sian-Fu by plane.

The rumors said the "Young Marshal" arrived in Taiyuanfu, capital of Shansi Province and approximately 350 miles northeast of Sian-Fu.

Some reports asserted the rebellious Chang might be attempting to leave the country, presumably through Peiping of Tientsin. Taiyuanfu is approximately half the distance between Sian-Fu and Tientsin.

POPE PIUS XI HAS SATISFACTORY DAY

His Holiness Reported to be More Inclined to Obey Doctors

Vatican City, Dec. 17 (AP)—Pope Pius passed a "satisfactory" day during which he insisted on discussing affairs of business with Vatican officials, attendants reported.

The Pope received Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, and his nephew, Franco Ratti, technical director of Vatican City.

Pope Pius was said by Vatican attendants today to be showing more inclination to obey his doctors' orders and conserve his strength.

The 79-year-old Pontiff, kept in bed for 12 days by a circulatory ailment, was still rebellious, however, at his enforced inactivity.

Dr. Aminta Milani and other papal physicians were said to have explained to the Holy Father it was only after overexertion that he suffered setbacks and to have pleaded with him to restrict his conferences on Vatican business today to a minimum as he did yesterday.

Vatican circles were relieved by a report His Holiness might be able to receive the Christmas greetings of the Roman Cardinals and, with a little more improvement, be able to address them.

PRIME MINISTER KING IS 62 TODAY

Receives Messages From Many Parts of The World

Ottawa, Dec. 17 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King was kept busy today reading a great volume of messages from all parts of the Dominion. United States, Great Britain, congratulating him on his 62nd birthday.

Telegrams and messages were received from numerous personal friends, officials and associations, and the prime minister remained at his Laurier House office reading them and preparing for their acknowledgment.

Mr. Mackenzie King was born on Dec. 17, 1874, in Berlin (now Kitchener) in Ontario. In spite of the ordinary demands made upon him during 1936, the first year of his third term as Prime Minister, he appeared to be enjoying excellent health.

Collector of Cuspidors Was Noted Scholar

Oxford, England, Dec. 17 (AP)—Hev. Lancelot Phelps, 83, classical scholar noted for his collection of spittoons, died here after his collection, scattered throughout his home, included many cuspidors which were among the first used in England.

He was an Honorary Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford University, where he was Provost from 1914 to 1920. He was formerly fellow and tutor there. He was a member of the Royal Commission on the Poor Laws and served as chairman of a Departmental Committee on Vagrancy.

M. P.'S DESCEND ON ARCHBISHOP FOR RADIO SPEECH

Disapprove Censure by Head of Church on Former King

WIDE CONTROVERSY

House of Commons to Probe Whole Activity of B.B.C.

London, Dec. 17 (AP)—Members of the House of Commons descended in wrath today on the British Broadcasting Company for the Archbishop of Canterbury's recent radio denunciation of former King Edward VIII and his friends.

Members who disapproved the censure by the head of the Church of England prepared to explore every detail of arrangements by the B.B.C., a government monopoly, for broadcasts concerning the Edward's abdication.

Their fire, however, was expected to centre on the Primate's address on Sunday, after Windsor had gone into voluntary exile, which was broadcast over B.B.C. facilities.

The whole issue was prepared for general debate, possibly tonight, after inquiries into other phases of the B.B.C.'s activities.

The Archbishop provoked a wide controversy by his rebuke of the former ruler for desiring to wed twice-divorced Mrs. Wallis Simpson in "violation of the Christian principles of marriage, and of his friends as a "circle whose standard of right and wrong of life are alien to all the best instincts and traditions of his people."

Try is Unover Details

M.P.'s incensed by the Archbishop's attack declared they would try to uncover the secret details surrounding the former King's farewell broadcast.

They said they wanted to know:

Did the B.B.C. demand—as is customary for all radio programs—a preview of their messages?

Why did the B.B.C. network shut down immediately after the abdicating King had concluded his broadcast?

Were Edward's and the Archbishop's speeches made after consultation with government officials?

Other members declared all programs during the Empire's constitutional crisis were "too mournful and sad," and should have been brighter in order to help Britons take their minds off their troubles.

Stream of Letters

Constituents kept a steady stream of letters, mostly critical of the Archbishop's address, piled in the members' mail. Josiah Wedgwood, Labor member, announced determination to raise the B.B.C.'s broadcast tonight when the general debate on Middle East affairs is brought up.

The Daily Telegraph sought to head off the storm by giving newspapers censuring and applauding the Archbishop's broadcast.

"We publish today a further selection of letters from the great volume of correspondence from our readers on the subject of the Archbishop of Canterbury's reference to the Duke of Windsor," the newspaper announced over a special column.

"While a majority of those who have written us have taken the view public censure of the late King was regrettable the Primate has not been without a considerable body of support for his action.

"Both sides have been sufficiently ventilated and we feel the subject is not one to be kept alive by continuing the controversy..."

EX-MAYOR E. WILMOT'S TURKEY FARM SHOWN

An ex-mayor of Belleville, Mr. Hartley Wilmot, now of Brantford, was pictured in a picture story and news reel at the Regal Theatre last evening in connection with the great turkey industry which he has developed. He was interested in the latter part of the reel to tell of reduction of losses to an insignificant figure by proper feeding and management of the flock. He spoke of this year's shipments to the British market.

The flock of turkeys numbered 4,500 and it was a goodly, plump and splendid while they were shown under care of boys and herded by collie as cattle might be.

Leitch Mill About 75 Per Cent Complete

"Conditions are in every respect satisfactory and the prospect is that soon time toward the end of January or the first of February we will be making gold," said Karl J. Springer, president of Leitch Gold Mines, in Fort Arthur today after a visit to the property in company with the consulting engineer, Vesey, and E. Sagsworth, states the Port Arthur news Chronicle.

The new mill, which will have a rated capacity of 200 tons a day, is the first, which could be stepped up to 100, although the intention is to start at fifty, a about seventy-five per cent complete. Most of the heavy work is inclusive of machinery which should be ready for the mill by turning over about the next month.

Also at the first of the year additional power from the Ontario Hydro-Electric will be available giving the company a supply of 500 horse power as compared with its present 300.

It is intended shortly to resume the development of ore, by sinking to the fourth and fifth levels. The procedure will be much the same as followed after opening up three horizons partially. The new station will be cut and some finishing work is being done before starting again on sinking to deeper levels.

At the sinking of the shaft two new veins of mineralization were encountered. One came in at the fourth level and the other around the fifth. Although not opened up beyond the shaft limits both appear to be important. That at the fifth level looked especially good with values over ounces to the one-half ounce over widths up to eighteen inches. Cross cuts of about fifty feet will be required to reach the downward extension of the mineral veins as worked on the upper levels with encouraging results.

Dr. Harold E. Welsh Honored at Reception Held at PointAnne

Residents of Point Anne of all political affiliations gathered at the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening to honor Dr. Harold E. Welsh, Conservative candidate in the recent by-election of East Hastings. The hall was filled to overflowing and a most pleasant evening was enjoyed, during the course of which the members present heartily turned their attention to cards and later to dancing, which kept the hands busy until the early hours of the morning.

Herbert Station of Point Anne acceptably filling the role of chairman for the occasion and seated on the platform with Dr. Welsh, his wife and mother were Mrs. Harry Rollins, President of Belleville Conservative Association; Mrs. E. Hepburn, President of the Thurlow Conservative Association; Fred Mitchell, President of the Young Canada Conservative Association of Thurlow, Councillor Bruce Martin of Thurlow, Mr. Alfred Hepburn of the Canada Cement Company and Thomas Bowler, President of the Point Anne Liberal Association.

Each of the men on the platform addressing the meeting briefly referring to the fine qualities of the victorious candidate and wishing for him a splendid career. When approached the owner stated he would be glad to sell the hay for $10.00 and added it weighed about one ton.

Mr. Trees, cut into Christmas tree length, and sold to the Belleville firm at 25 cents a piece, at Queen's Park would be a happy one.

The evening was a most enjoyable one and members of both political faiths joined in honoring Dr. Welsh in his recent victory at the polls.

TURKEYS OFFERED 22 TO 25c PER LB. ON LOCAL MARKET

Only Three More Marketing Days Till Christmas But Few Attend

FOWL PLENTIFUL

Despite the fact there are only three more marketing days in Belleville before Christmas a, rather spasiley attended market was in evidence today. One of the features of the market was the variation in the price of turkeys although only a few of these fowl scattered the market and were offered for sale. The price of turkeys ranged from 22 to 25 cts. per pound while a few geese were tendered and sold readily at 20 cts. per pound.

The few turkeys to be displayed for sale were fine specimens, however, and had apparently been prepared for the Christmas market judging from their plumpness and external appearances. One handsome displayed three giant-sized birds, that tipped the scales well over the ten pound mark. The lady was asked the price of the bird, although there was no large quantity of fowl display on the market, the quality was of a splendid variety and found a ready market. Besides the display of turkeys and geese a few ducks, ranging in price from 75c to one dollar, and a few chickens were seen, while the offering of chickens was one of the best for the season, many fine large chickens being offered despite the smallness of the market. The geese sold from $2.00 to $2.75, according to weight and quality.

Barrel and seasonable picture, that brought back memories, of days past when the Belleville market was province-wide known, again made its appearance on the local market today when a load of hay was placed on the south side of the market awaiting customers. When approached the owner stated he would be glad to sell the hay for $10.00 and added it weighed about one ton.

Mr. Trees, cut into Christmas tree length, and sold to the Belleville firm at 25 cents a piece, at Queen's Park would be a happy one.

THREAT LETTERS STILL ARRIVING

Mrs. Simpson Not Afraid of The Poison Pen Writers

Cannes, France, Dec. 17 (AP)—Letters threatening Mrs. Wallis Simpson for causing the abdication of Edward VIII are still being received at the Riviera villa where she is staying, a spokesman said today.

Mrs. Simpson herself, he said, tore up many of the letters, spurning suggestions that some of the more violent ones be turned over to the police.

Mrs. Simpson, it was said "is not afraid" of the poison pen writers and delights in tearing up the letters herself "to show her contempt for that sort of thing."

She hoped, however, the mail would dwindle because of the strict seclusion in which she chooses to remain. It was said her hope was the public would forget her and her romance which almost an empire

Paid for Milk, Enjoys Cream

Instead of having milk on his breakfast cereal, a Belleville and district citizen sat down to his cereal dish, after shaking cream poured over his cereal and all because of a mistake. Instead of the cream between a bottle of milk and a bottle of cream obtained from a local milk wagon.

Upon his return from delivering milk in the vicinity of City Hall early this morning a local milkman found an empty milk bottle, containing the right amount of cash for a pint of milk, placed on the front door step. The purchaser had merely walked up to the milk wagon and without knowledge of the manner in which the milk and cream was placed, helped himself to a bottle, after leaving an empty bottle and the purchase price for a pint of milk. Quite naturally the purchaser was of the opinion that he had obtained the proper and honest methods, however.

The ultimate result simply terminated in the fact that the citizen enjoyed cream instead of milk on his morning repast, while the milkman is financially minus the difference in price between a pint of milk, and cream, and a pint of cream taken in mistake.

Two James Taken Into Police Custody

James and James were arrested on James Street last evening when the Belleville Police Force apparently celebrating the coming holiday season, became a little boisterous and too prematurely. Early last evening two truculents, who gave their names as James Thompson, Toronto, and James Stewart, Owen Sound, were arrested by local police on James Street and tossed into "the jug" and today remanded in custody on charges of Intoxication. Enroute to the police station it is understood that considerable effort to the investigation, that James Stewart, a burly fellow, broke and kicked out a window of the police car during a struggle with the long arm of the law. He will appear in court for trial on Friday. Plainclothes Constable Ed. Lane and Fred Ash successfully landed their quarries in the cell block following complaints received from citizens of the district, where the pair were found creating and disturbing peaceful citizens.

Thefts of Seed Grains Reported to Police

Provincial Police today are investigating the reported thefts of large quantities of seed grains, that have been stolen in Hastings County of a recent date. John Douglas, 82, concession of Huntingdon, reported the theft of five bushels of clover seed and three bushels of flax seed to Provincial Constable Dennison at Madoc, yesterday. Mr. Douglas' attention to the matter was drawn when he saw a quantity of seed strewn on the ground near the rear of his barn recently. Subsequent investigations proved the granary had been entered and some of the seed had fallen to the ground as the robbers were making their escape. Early today Inspector P. Gardner received a second report of a similar nature, when it was disclosed that five and one-half bags of seed grain had been stolen from a farmer's barn in the vicinity of Wooler. This robbery is being investigated by Inspector Gardner himself.

Retiring Officer Honored by W. A. Of Kingston Rd.

On Wednesday, Dec. 16 Mrs. A. Maguire, Frankfort Ave., invited to her home, the Women's Association of Kingston Road United Church to pay tribute to the retiring President, Mrs. J. Donaldson.

The entire membership responded to the invitation. After an hour of friendly intercourse, the President of Christmas cards, Mrs. H. Walkom, the new President, called the ladies to order. Mrs. T. Logan read an address of appreciation to Mrs. Donaldson and Mrs. E. Gasley made the presentation of a beautiful pyrex casserole and pie plate set in silver.

In her reply, Mrs. Donaldson, although taken by surprise, voiced her gratitude for the co-operation of the members during the years, and the inspiration she had received from several of the oldest members who have now passed on.

After singing "Blest be the tie that binds" the hostess and her daughter, Doris, served a delicious lunch with Mrs. R. Farnsworth pouring tea.

The address ... Dec. 16th, 1936

Dear Mrs. Donaldson:

We have met today to express to you our appreciation of your services as president of the Women's Association of Kingston Road United Church.

For the past six years you have very ably filled that position, and under your leadership our society has become a strong and flourishing organization.

Your faithfulness and unselfishness in this labor of love, has been to each of us an inspiration.

We realize as God's word says, every act of kindness done in His name will bring its reward and while we may not have the full reward in this life, you will surely receive it in the life to come.

As a slight token of our appreciation and love we ask you to accept this casserole and as you may often use it think of your friends in the W. A.

We trust God may continue to bless you physically and spiritually, that you may continue to fill service many years.

Mrs. H. Walkom
Mrs. E. Gasley
Mrs. T. Logan
Mrs. C. MacDiarid.

Christmas Concerts

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL

BEFORE a crowded audience last evening pupils of Queen Alexandra School presented their annual Christmas entertainment which reached a high standard in almost all of this type. A program varied and appealing was given with distinction by the talented youngsters whose perfect performance showed careful training and splendid ability. Throughout the entire entertainment the singing, dancing and acting of the little ones reflected credit on their teachers who were warmly praised for the enjoyable evening.

The stage settings and the costumes for the different numbers were works of art, adding greatly to the success of the production. Mr. Fowler and a teachers' committee designed the scenery. The teachers were assisted in the preparation of the costumes by members of the Home and School and other mothers, and the smart dresses and suits were very well designed. The auditorium presented a most attractive scene with the Christmas trees at each side of the stage, and a blue background studded with stars.

The audience was welcomed to the school by Principal Mr. W. G. Anderson, in a brief address in which he extended a cordial welcome to the visitors. The splendid response was encouraging to those who spent months of work in the preparation of the concert. Mr. Anderson thanked those who had assisted with the costumes and expressed confidence in a happy Christmas season and a prosperous New Year.

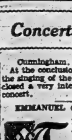
The concert opened brilliantly with a Fashion Show by the juniors who exhibited gowns that won the hearts of the audience. The mannequins, juniors of the school, included a tiny miss beauty and the fashions concluded with a bridal scene which was perfect in every detail and handsome groom (Barbara Davis and Gordon Strickman). A group of little ones sang "The Wedding of Jack and Jill."

J.R.C. Capers introduced a school boy, Tim, (Howard Hart) who very quickly got into A.B.C.'s boy. Tim suddenly interested in them when the letters of his name come to life. In white and red costumes, with wands announcing the season, the capitals and children trooped in and executed with utmost precision a fascinating drill. Miss Betty Wilson played the drum major, Mary Wismart, Miss Joyce Cooper was the flaming torch and danced in this number.

This number was followed by Woodland Scandals a lovely little scene with children perfect as fairies gracefully revelled in the fact that there was no snow to cover them. Dozens of little snow fairies danced in, and made a pretty picture against the green of the trees. The tiniest one tree (Bobby Dickens) was very loath to leave the stage, and, under the spell of the Snow Fairy (Joan Isabelle) took part in the efforts of the Woodcutter (Ronald Aitchison) to cut this tree. But when the Fairy Queen heard that it was destined for a Little Lame Girl (Helen Liddle) the fairy recalled the spell.

Tap dances by Dorothy Taylor and Gloria Mason were delightful parts of the evening's entertainment, while the Pirates' Dance, by members of the second class, wearing dashing pirate garb was a colorful spectacle.

One of the major numbers was the Mad Tea Party from Alice in Wonderland. There took part Alice (Mary Jane Mitchell) as the Dormouse and Joan Hamilton as the March Hare. These small players played their parts to perfection. The scene was the garden of a very charming little house of the tea party and at the scene a chorus sang "Alice in Wonderland." The most beautiful of Christmas was interpreted in a splendid portrayal of "The Christmas Story" by the Junior Third Class. Familiar Christmas hymns by angels, shepherds and the birth of the Saviour to the shepherds opened the scene to Bethlehem, when three humble men grouped about the Manger. Then the Wisemen arrive, and the final scene showed boy and girl choristers taking up the words of Christmas carols.



Complete variety was achieved in the program by the finale which proved to be an amusing operetta "A Trip to Japan." As the curtains parted, the audience broke into applause as a splendidly painted Japanese scene at the back curtain came into view. Of huge proportions the vivid silk showed the ingenuity of those responsible for the scenic effects.

The operetta, in three scenes, was done in a finished manner by the young actors, dancers and singers. The passengers, boys and girls under the leadership of Aunt Sue, are seen first at the dock at Montreal, then on board ship and not very happy about it, as the motion of the boat is felt, and finally at Liverpool. Dock where Aunt Sue copes with the customs in a way which makes world travellers most envious. This happy little operetta was presented in lively style. The principal characters were:

Aunt Sue ..... Jane Weller
Captain ..... Jack Carefoot
Dick ..... Ray Martin
Baby ..... Henry Abbot
Customs Officer ..... Dean Wilson
Girl Tourists ..... Elinor Pinkle,
Mary Elizabeth Hyde
Boy Tourists ..Jack Marsh, Gerald Hyde.
Two Sailors.. Douglas Evans; Alex Cunningham.

At the conclusion of the operetta, the singing of the National Anthem closed a very interesting Christmas concert.

EMMANUEL CHURCH S.S.

THE Emmanuel Church annual Christmas Tree and the distribution was well attended in the Sunday School last evening. The program was rendered in splendid manner and at its conclusion Chubby prizes were awarded and candies distributed to all the scholars.

Bishop Marshall acted as chairman, and the program opened with prayer.

In words of welcome the Chairman said that he was glad to see such a large number of the parents of the children present, it was an indication of interest which he hoped would develop and increase as time went on. Proceeding he said that parents were responsible for the Religious Education of their children, and having regard to the fact that parents often found it impossible to attend to this duty themselves, he urged upon them the necessity of sending their children regularly to Sunday School. He further said it was a well known fact that young people who grew up Christians were able to withstand the allurements and temptations of life better than those whose religious training had been neglected. Unfortunately the young people in the large part of the criminals of today were those who had received a happy when, in a general way, they were Christians, but had neglected to attend Sunday School. In further said it was a frequently criminals who appeared incurable. Parents were exhorted to remember that while they send their children to day schools for at least 30 hours per week there were only one hour with their teachers in Sunday schools, yet all admitted that religious education was far more important than secular education, neither of which should be neglected.

The interesting program follows:

Christmas Party At Regular Meeting Of Women of Moose

The regular meeting of the Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter 435 was held on Tuesday evening with a good attendance. Reports were read by Mrs. E. Brown in regard to a banquet served by the women to a large gathering at their recent convention here. The proceeds were considered very satisfactory and a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mrs. T. Yorke, convener. Mrs. McGinnis invited Mrs. T. Holland on behalf of the Chapter to present Mrs. G. Monman, convener of the euchre, with the Moose cushion in appreciation of her untiring work during the past year.

After the closing of the meeting a social evening was spent in cards. Euchre prizes were won by Mrs. F. Ashmore and Mrs. T. Holland. Rummy prizes went to Dorothy Hamilton and Mary McGinnes. All were invited to lunch at a table decorated in Christmas colors. The role of Santa Claus was played by Mrs. L. Connell, who appeared on the scene with bells. Turning the evening into a Christmas party a brilliantly lighted Christmas tree was the next attraction and each one present was given a small gift from the tree. The members were brought to a close at a late hour, all complimenting the hostesses on the splendid success of the evening's entertainment.

CARMEL W.M.S.

The annual meeting of Carmel W.M.S. was held at Mrs. P. Hicker on Tuesday, December 1st. The meeting was opened by the president with a short devotional period, assisted by Mr. Merrick. A hymn ended the devotional part.

A very lovely letter was read from Mrs. Roman, Sr., who has been very ill, thanking the members for remembering her, also a word of regret in her absence, but wished that she would be able to attend in the near future. She trusted that God's richest blessing would rest on the members and on the work of the Missionary Society. The roll was answered with "a verse beginning with "Jesus". Nine members were present. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Mr. Merrick then conducted the election of officers which are as follows: Hon. President—Mrs. J. Reynolds. President—Mrs. V. Simmons. 1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. C. Morman. Treas.—Mrs. J. Reynolds. Cor. Sec'y—Mrs. R. Reeves. Rec. Sec'y—Mrs. J. B. Patterson. Sec'y of Christian Stewardship—Mrs. R. Simmons.

Strangers' Sec'y—Mrs. C. Brintnell.

Associate Helpers' Sec'y—Miss Fern Patterson.

Temperance Sec'y—Mrs. H. Homan, Sr.

Supply Sec'y—Miss Mildred Jones.

Peace Sec'y—Mrs. M. Rose.

Pianist—Mrs. B. Pitman.

Auditors—Mrs. Brintnell and Mrs. Reid.

Heralds—Canada, Mrs. Prindle; Japan, Mrs. H. Howes; China, Mrs. E. Hicton India, Mrs. Jas. Brownscombe.

Group Leaders—No. 1, Mrs. Frank Hicks; No. 2, Mrs. E. Horton: No. 3, Mrs. C. Brintnell; No. 4, Mrs. E. Rose.

Mrs. Simmons conveyed thanks to the members for their efficient work and help in the past year, and hoped this year they would support her in the same way they had in the past; working for the interest of God's Kingdom. Mrs. Morman then took charge of the program. Hymn 299 was sung and a Christmas reading was given by Mrs. Ross. Mrs. W. Simmons sang a delightful solo, "Christ of Galilee." Mrs. Seldon Homan and Mrs. Geo. Morman gave readings. Mrs. Morman then led in prayer. Mrs. Reid gave a very interesting reading, "Pray for Peace." The meeting closed with singing "God Save the King."

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Morman's Group and the hostess at home for the occasion.

BRITAIN'S VOICE

Having dealt with a national problem, Britain has again been heard in international affairs in the words of Anthony Eden in which the plea is made for the maintenance of the sanctity of treaties, for co-operation to prevent war and to restore the sense of economic security.

Recognized as one of the great influences in the world, Britain feels her duty to insist upon the spirit of fraternity among the nations. She knows that her word is listened to by the great and small states of he earth and hence keeps before the world the ideal of peace and fraternal relations among nations.

NATIONAL RELICS

A few days ago the story leaked out through a church paper that two or three years ago the Stone of Destiny or Stone of Scone which reposes under the seat of the Throne in Westminster Abbey was the object of an unsuccessful attempt to remove it. This was not the first event of the kind, though never has success attained the efforts.

Another piece of recent news was the story of the theft of the sword of the Scottish hero, Sir William Wallace, which was stolen from its case in the Wallace national memorial at Stirling, Scotland.

Both these relics of the past of Scotland are considered precious to Scots and all other Britishers at home and abroad as they were so closely associated with the days when England and Scotland were at strife. The sword of Wallace has always remained in Scotland while the Stone of Scone has been in England since the year 1296 when the First Edward removed it to Westminster Abbey from Scone, a town in Perthshire, situated on the left bank of the River Tay, one and a half miles north of Perth. It is in the ruins of the palace at Scone that the kings of Scotland were crowned. The palace at Scone was destroyed in the riots of 1559 and the new palace completed in 1808.

The theft of the Wallace sword was marked by rather odd circumstances. After the old caretaker had been locked in his room by the masked thieves, some one telephoned from Edinburgh so that the man might be released.

What use either relic would be to any individual is difficult to see for it would be next to impossible to sell it, great as is the sentimental value.

CHRISTMAS IN RUSSIA

While Canadians naturally at this season of the year are greatly absorbed in the manner in which they and their friends and neighbors are going to observe the Christmastide, they still can take some interest in learning that in Russia Christmas will be marked with shining trees and Santa Claus visits, that the Russians are buying Christmas gifts. It seems that all the efforts to remove from the mentality of the Russia associations with Christianity and the state religion of the Czarist days are in vain—so potent is the appeal of "Grandfather Frost" as Santa Claus is known in that land. The mark of repression is still seen as the trees are called, not Christmas trees But "New Year's trees." So while the state does not officially recognize Christmas and calls this a New Year's feast, which has always been a day of feasting rejoicing in Russia, it is expected that most of the New Year's trees will remain in the homes until after Christmas which falls on January 7th, under the old Russian calendar. Russian toys are more numerous than in other years but are very primitive as compared with those which Canadians are accustomed to see. Despite the high prices, 15 rubles, more than a day's pay for a doll, the buying outstrips the supply. The rise in prices has called for action with the possibility that prices will be revised downward.

There are treasures laid up in the heart, treasures of charity, piety, temperance, and soberness. These treasures a man takes with him beyond death when he leaves this world.—Buddhist Scriptures.

As soon as a true thought has entered our mind, if gives a light which makes us see a crowd of other objects which we have not perceived before.—Chateaubriand.

Knowledge is a comfortable and necessary retreat and shelter for us in advanced age, and if we do not plant it while young, it will give us no shade when we grow old.—Chesterfield.

No external advantages can supply the place of self-reliance. The force of one's being, if it has any, force, must come from within. No one can safely imitate another; nor by following in the footprints of another can he ever gain distinction or enjoy prosperity.—R. W. Clark.

THE WIND

I saw you toss the kites in high
And blow the birds about the sky;
And all around I heard you pass,
Like ladies' skirts across the grass—
O wind, a-blowing all days long,
O wind, that sings so loud a song!

I saw the different things you did.
But always you yourself you hid.
I felt you push, I heard you call,
I could not see yourself at all—
O wind, a-blowing all day long,
O wind, that sings so loud a song!

O you that are so strong and cold,
O blower, are you young or old?
Are you a beast of field or tree,
Or just a stronger child than me?
O wind, a-blowing all day long,
O wind, that sings so loud a song!

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

NEW YORK MERCHANTS ARE REVELLING in the greatest Christmas business since the bottom dropped out of Big Business in 1929. R. H. Macey and Co., big Manhattan department store with the slogan "It's Smart to Be Thrifty" has plugged sable wraps at $22,000. Regularly advertised are Capehart radios at $2,500. Wall Street Journal rhapsodized about the greatest prosperity Christmas ever in big headlines proclaiming "Not Since '29—So Much Extra Cash to Spend"—drawing attention to record automobile show attendance, a coming Florida boom, and fat extra dividends, besides a flood of cash bonuses to employees, New York retailers saw in the rush a possibility of some lines being entirely exhausted and took precautions accordingly. From all parts of the United States comes the same story, while Canada with its customary Scotch caution and cannyness makes haste toward the same goal more slowly but none the less surely.

SMITH'S FALLS "GREAT WHITE WAY" HAS BEEN DARK FOR SOME TIME but the local Hydro Commission refuses to permit Smith's Falls business area hide its light under a bushel, or several bushels any longer, and has turned on plenty of juice to make the business district a bright and shining delight, a thing of beauty and a joy for the holiday season, if not forever. Brockville Recorder Times tells the story of how light came to Smith's Falls, as follows: "Smith's Falls White Way on Beckwith Street was bright again Friday night for the first time since the Town Council ordered the cutting off of some 250 street lights as an economy measure two years ago. Hydro Electric Commission officials decided to turn on all lights again for the Christmas season. It is probable that the full light system will be maintained after New Year's as members of Council have intimated their intention to rescind the previous decision."

IRRITATING

The Christmas shopping season reminds us of the clerk who returned home after a hard day at the store, to find his son studying his chemistry lesson.

"What is a counter-irritant, dad?" he asked.

"A woman who shops all day but doesn't buy anything," replied his father absently.

Discovering yet another mistake in his letters, the enraged employer summoned his new typist.

"You came here with good testimonials, Miss Brown," he barked, "and do you mean to tell me you don't know the King's English?"

"Of course, I know it," she replied, indignantly. "Otherwise he wouldn't be King, would he?"

A Neighbourly Act. Thanks are hereby tendered to Mr. T. S. Carman, proprietor of The Ontario, for printing the second side of "The Intelligencer" yesterday evening, when our machinery was stopped by lack of sufficient water power to run the latter.

A meeting of the Executive Committee in connection with the city council was held yesterday, December 16th, with Ald. T. F. Wills presiding. The following members of the committee were present: Aldermen Palmer, Doyle, Bell, Mallinger, Johnson, Collins and Campion. Seven tenders were opened for $50,000 consolidated debentures, 40 years at 4 per cent, to realize a sinking fund, among interest at 6 per cent. The offers were most satisfactory. The highest was 104, and after full discussion, the committee decided unanimously to accept the offer which was made through C. Ernest Gault, broker, Montreal. The committee interviewed Mr. J. P. Thompson, city treasurer, who said it was the best rate ever realized on Belleville debentures and it is an evidence of the confidence and standing our city occupies in the money market today. The rate obtained is equivalent to obtaining money at 3 9-10 per cent. The bonus amounting to $2,000 will be invested in the sinking fund, as required by statute, to pay off these debentures at maturity. The usual arrangements in this matter will be made by Mayor J. N. Walmsley and the proper city officials.

IN MEMORIAM

WATKINS—In loving memory of a dear father, who passed away December 17, 1935.
Inside your grave you often stand,
With hearts both crushed and sore,
But in the gloom the sweet words come
Not lost, but gone before.
God knows how much we miss you,
He counts the tears we shed,
And whispers, she only sleeps,
Your little one is not dead.
So we'll be brave, dear Mother,
And pray to God each day,
And when He calls us home to you,
Your smile will guide the way.
Sadly missed by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gerow and Family.
d17-1i

YATEMAN—In loving memory of Annie M., wife of W. Yateman, who passed away December 17th, 1933.
Dearest loved one, how I miss you,
Oh, dear, how I cry,
God alone can tell the heartaches
And the thoughts that bring you nigh.
But He called you from your suffering,
To that land so bright and fair,
Where we'll meet you, there will be no parting there.
—Sadly missed by Husband and Family.

Public Notice

NOTICE is hereby given that a correct statement of each of the questions to be submitted for a vote of the Electors at the Annual Municipal Elections for the election of a Council for the Corporation of the City of Belleville to be held on the 4th day of January, A.D. 1937, is hereinafter correctly set forth:—

FIRSTLY

Electors shall have the opportunity to express whether or not they are in favour of and desire the formation of a Public Utility Commission and Electors may so express their opinions by voting either affirmatively or negatively, that is, either "Yes" or "No" on the following question:—

"Are you in favour of the provisions of a Public Utility Commission under the provisions of The Public Utilities Act, by which it would vest the control and management of all utilities owned and so operated by the Corporation of the City of Belleville?"

SECONDLY

Electors shall have the opportunity to express whether or not they are in favour of and desire the formation of a Municipal Board of Education, and Electors may so express their opinion by voting either affirmatively or negatively, that is, either "Yes" or "No" on the following question:—

"Are you in favour of the establishing of a Municipal Board of Education?"

THIRDLY

Electors shall have the opportunity to express whether or not they are in favour of and desire an application to the legislature for an Act empowering the Council to appoint and employ a City Manager, investing authority to manage and control generally the affairs of the City of the Corporation of the City of Belleville and to perform such duties as the Council from time to time by By-law, may define?"

FOURTHLY

Electors shall have the opportunity to express whether or not they are in favour of and desire an application to the legislature for an Act reducing the number of members of the Council to six Aldermen and a Mayor, and Electors may so express their opinion by voting either affirmatively or negatively, that is, either by "Yes" or "No" on the following question:—

"Are you in favour of an application being made to the legislature to pass an Act reducing the number of members of the Council to six Aldermen and a Mayor?"

FIFTHLY

Electors shall have the opportunity to express whether or not they are in favour of providing by means of taxation for the establishment and maintenance of a fund for the purpose of a band or bands of music, and Electors may so express their opinion by voting either affirmatively or negatively, that is, either "Yes" or "No" on the following question:—

"Are you in favour of providing by means of taxation for the establishment and maintenance of a fund ..... thereof ..... a band ..... contributing ..... thereto ..... $1,000 annually for the support and aid of a band or bands of music and for making annual or other grants to the said band or bands and for ..... to the members ..... thereof?"

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the Mayor of the Corporation of the City of Belleville or a member of the Council duly appointed for that purpose will attend at the Mayor's office in the City Hall in the said City of Belleville on the Thirtieth day of December, 1936, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon and if necessary from day to day thereafter, in writing signed by him, two persons to attend the final summing up of the votes for and against the Questions, and one person, to attend as such person on behalf of the persons interested in, and desirous of promoting the proposed Questions and voting in the affirmative thereon.

AND FURTHER NOTICE is hereby given that those entitled to vote on the last recited question, namely that pertaining to the establishment and maintenance of a fund for the support and aid of a band or bands of music are the Duly Elected Electors who are qualified to vote on a money by-law, and no others shall vote on the said question.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that if a majority of those voting on said last mentioned question vote in the affirmative the Council may thereafter pass a by-law providing for a fund for the support and aid of a band or bands of music and for levying annually upon the whole rateable property within the limits of the Corporation of the City of Belleville by means of taxation a sum not in excess of $1200.00 to provide said fund.

Certified Correct and dated at Belleville the 16th day of December, 1936.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Auction Wife"

At last it's here. Something new and altogether different. Every Friday Nite starting tomorrow nite at the Capitol Theatre, we present "Auction Nite", with an auctioneer who buys articles, not sells them. He buys from you. Think of it ladies and gentlemen, for such articles as you might call for from the auctioneer, he will pay you in cash, and it...are no lucky numbers, or any lottery or like scheme connected with it. He buys and you sell for CASH and there will be positively NO embarrassment to anyone. Come tomorrow night and enjoy the laffs and also the thrills you get when bidding your money if you have what he wants to buy. He might offer to buy a pair of socks or even the sleeves out of your shirt or a lady's hat, but all in fun and the main thing. Cash is given in exchange for everything he buys from you. Remember the date Friday at 9 o'clock.

Also on the screen two swell pictures in addition to the auction.

"Case of the Black Cat" and "Straight from the Shoulder"

Most baffling of all Erle Stanley Gardner mysteries is revealed in "The Case of the Black Cat," the First National production which held audiences fascinated at the Capitol Theatre yesterday as hit No. 1.

The plot is most unusual in that the first "murder" is a hoax and the man supposed to be killed turns out to be alive. The man accused of slaying him, while two actual murders are committed as a result of the trick. Six persons are suspected by the police, all of whom are proved innocent. The real killers are exposed at the trial of an innocent man, Perry Mason, a...

Ricardo Cortez gives an unusually strong portrayal of Perry Mason as does June Travis as Delia Street, his worldywise secretary. Craig Bryan is lovely to look at and effective as the romantic ingenue daughter of the millionaire, who has been cut off by his latest will.

Hit No. 2

Tender romance between a boy and a girl, with a dash of heavy-handed love of a small boy for his dad, and straight-shooting mysteries in "Straight From the Shoulder," new Paramount picture starring Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke, Andy Clyde and David Holt, which opened at the Capitol Theatre last night as hit No. 2.

"Straight from the Shoulder," based on the famous "J. M. Pyne" stories which Lucian Cary writes for the Saturday Evening Post, is the tale of a young widower who finds that his son's best pal in the boy is jealous and resentful of his dad's love for the woman who has come into his life, fearing that their companionship will be broken up.

In order to win the boy's love his father's sweetheart must 'sell' herself, and this opportunity comes when a gang of desperadoes capture the youngster and lay in wait, intending to do him the rest of the party. How she succeeds in turning the tables on the killers in a thrilling climax makes action entertainment of the first order, and ...ions to her eagerly-awaited reconciliation with the boy whom she wants to love.

"The Wedding Present"

Joan Bennett and Cary Grant are co-starred in Paramount's "The Wedding Present," "Wedding Present", the feature attraction on the Belle screen today and Friday, matinee and evening.

The picture is based on a hilarious Saturday Evening Post story by Paul Gallico, and was produced by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Screenplay and his thick-skulled stooge, a writer of impossible Dixieland, a German "Schnitzelbank" band and a staff of wise-cracking newspaper people, keep the yarn moving at a fast rate.

The "Wedding Present" which Grant plans for Miss Bennett when she learns him to be a newspaper...ist provokes the picture's climax and...ile. It is such a startling present and so well-timed that it results in a reconciliation of Cary Grant with Miss Bennett at the final fade-out.

Conrad Nagel, as the man Miss Bennett plans to marry; Gene Lockhart as Cosmo Archduke; William Demarest as the gangster; Inez Courtney, Edward Brophy and Edmund Ford add to the general levity of the story.

AT THE REGENT

Gripping

Lovers of primitive melodrama have a great treat in store when "Sea Devils", the brilliant Warner Bros. picturization of Somerset Maugham's romance of Devil's Island Seas "Three in Eden", announced for the second Regent attraction of the same program.

The hero of the thrilling story is Clive Brook, a man of primitive instincts and a refugee from the clutches of the law, who has built up a profitable pearl fishery on a remote Pacific Island. . . . He is compelled to do battle for his beautiful young bride, against a polished villain who has designs on her, whom he has rescued from a shipwreck, and portrayal of Fernando Mason as does June Travis as Delia Street, his worldywise secretary. Craig Bryan is lovely to look at and effective as the romantic ingenue daughter of the millionaire, who has been cut off by his latest will.

"The regular" ambulance crew was absent so police officer Alex Gregor was pressed into service as an emergency ambulance driver. At the theatre Grand Jury hearing he was he mother, stricken with apoplexy.

Komal and Housely Stevenson. A tuneful and merry cartoon will be exhibited on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10, the last complete starting at 9 p.m. "Wedding Present" is on at 2.40 and 8.30. "Isle of Fury" begins at 3.46 7.20 and 9.30.

ITALY SEEKS

Now from all indications Gen. Franco is running behind schedule. Russian help for the Madrid government has blocked his efforts to seize Madrid.

The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Telegraph asserted today that Germany and Italy were in disagreement over the payment of Gen. Franco's expenses. Gen. Franco also was reported to have informed the German government he needs at least another 80,000 men if he is to win the Spanish war.

Abdication Brings Up Question

The abdication of Edward VIII obviously brought the question of recognition of Italy's Ethiopian conquest to the front. Ambassadors abroad therefore require new letters and credentials. Mussolini's idea is that Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador to Rome, should be according to King Victor Emmanuel as both King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia.

That would mean in effect recognition of Italy's conquest. But Britain has not given De Jure recognition of the Italian conquest and it is believed in official circles that she is unlikely to give the letters of credence indicated. Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons yesterday Britain is not ready formal recognition of the Ethiopian conquest.

But it is a ticklish point. ...suggested is that Sir Eric might be accredited to the King of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia. Apparently a majority of the employees concerned have not paid the tax since its inception on May 1, 1933. It was since its inception on May 1, 1933. It was ...emergency measure by Premier Bracken's administration.

MANITOBA TAX ON FEDERAL CIVIL SERVANTS UPHELD

$2,000,000 to be Collected From Those Resident Within Province

London, Dec. 17.—(CP Cable)—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today dismissed the Appeal against the assessment of Manitoba's special levy per cent. income tax against the Dominion civil servant within the province.

The Appeal, which came from the Supreme Court of Canada, was to test the competence of the Manitoba Provincial Legislature to impose the tax under its special Income Tax Act.

The Appeal was heard Dec. 4.

To the appellant's contention that it is incompetent for the provincial legislature to tax the income of a Dominion Civil servant, their Lordships pounded in upon Lord Lerd Lordships pounded in upon Lord Lerd's blobbing as a case described as a "Bank of Toronto versus Lambe."

"Any person found within the province may be legally taxed there if taxed directly. That Dominion cannot conceive that when the Imperial Parliament conferred wide powers of local self-government on great countries like Quebec, it intended to limit them on the speculation they would be used in an injurious manner. People trusted a local power for making laws for property and civil rights may well be trusted to levy taxes.

$200,000 To Be Collected

Winnipeg, Dec. 17—(CP)—More than $200,000 will be collected by the Provincial Government in the paid wage taxes as a result of the decision of the Privy Council interpreted in the province who attended the Provincial Government's special two-per cent. wages tax was ...a violation of the constitution, Premier John Bracken and the Supreme Court of Canada decided in a unanimous opinion.

A majority of the employees concerned have not paid the tax since its inception on May 1, 1933. It was since its inception on May 1, 1933. It was ...emergency measure by Premier Bracken's administration.

Stirling and District

Stirling—Great interest was shown in an unusual Christmas meeting held by the members of St. Paul's Young People's Union in the church parlors on Monday evening. Miss Mary Hulin, President of the organization, was in charge of the opening exercises and devotional period and the hymns selected were all Christmas carols with the exception of the "Theme Song". Mrs. H. Moore presided at the piano. The Scriptures lesson was read by Miss Hulin followed by prayer by Mr. W. J. Scott. Mr. Fred Rice, 2nd vice president, was in charge of the remaining portion of the program and gave a very interesting illustrated address entitled "The First Christmas Morn." A set of very lovely tinted slides illustrating the facts of the Christmas story and set forth in a most capable fashion were greatly enjoyed, and the fine manner in which the lantern was operated with the twenty lovely pictures being thrown on the screen, blending one with the other, and restfully fading out, was a treat. Several illustrated Christmas carols also appropriate to the occasion were sung during the evening and at the fine address concluded with the singing of a hymn. The final musical number on the program was an instrumental number by Mrs. Bishop. A contest, of a versatile word was conducted by Mr. Rigle for the social period with the Rice Division gaining first honors. The attendance recording system revealed the attendance of over fifty members and friends. The meeting closed with the Mispah Benediction. It was decided to withdraw the regular meeting next week because of the annual Sunday School Christmas concert.

St. Andrew's Young People

The regular weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Guild was held in the Sunday School room on Monday evening, one of the best attended of the year. The program was under the direction of the literary department led by Mrs. Duncan Montgomery. Mr. James Johnson presided over the meeting which opened with a brief song service and the Lord's Prayer. Mr. Scott read the scripture lesson and the secretary's report of the previous meeting was given by Miss Gena Spry. During the business part of the meeting it was decided to withdraw the next meeting in favor of the Sunday School Christmas concert. The next number was a clever reading given by Shirley Montgomery. Mrs. R. H. William then offered a piano solo. The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Harper Rollins who gave a splendid address dealing with the life and work of the famous American song writer, Carrie Jacobs Bond. Mrs. Rollins proved by her fine address, that she had made a careful study of the character with which she dealt, and the story was one containing a wealth of romance. One containing a wealth of romance. At the conclusion of the address Rev. J. A. Kotfend sang her famous song "Perfect Day" accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Williams. Miss Jean DaSoe also gave a fine reading and the final musical number on the program was a tenor solo by William Dermidy. At the close of the meeting a brief social period was enjoyed during which Mrs. F. Hulin directed a musical contest. The meeting closed with the Mispah Benediction.

Minister Uses Etching Equipment In Pulpit

Observing that different methods are sometimes needed in presenting the Word of God to his people, Rev. J. A. Koffend of St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, conducted an unusual service on Sunday evening when he employed the use of a large etching easel and charcoal pencil, in his pulpit with which he clearly sketched out his message. The sermon was the first in a series entitled "Dispensational Truths as revealed in the Prophecies of the Old Testament." Rev. Koffend has from time to time in the past introduced several unique methods of presenting his message and is always ready and willing to attempt anything which he feels will benefit his congregation. His vivid explanation of the first twenty six chapters of the Book of Genesis were unique, illustrating his points by the use of colored crayon. He impressed his audience in a convincing manner regarding the truths found therein, and emphasized the fact that when correctly interpreted these written in no way conflict with the discoveries of modern science.

ROYAL LINK FOR LINERS

Named Duchess of York seven years ago by Queen Elizabeth, who as Duchess of York sponsored the launching, the Canadian Pacific liner bearing the name of the Royal Duchess has two distinctions. She was the first passenger liner to be launched by a member of the Royal family, and is the only merchant ship decorated with a signed photograph (reproduced above) of the reigning King and Queen. The portrait, a favorite one of Their Majesties, was presented as a souvenir of the launching.

Tweed and District

Tweed—The Tuxis Boys' Class held a social evening on Monday night in the basement of the Union Church for the purpose of raising money with which to purchase clothing for some of the less fortunate children of the community. An amount in excess of twelve dollars was raised and the boys are to be congratulated for undertaking which to purchase this work. The evening was devoted to progressive crequinole and monopoly. A brief sing-song directed by Mr. S. H. Connor with Mr. Geo. Lofthouse at the piano preceded the games. Rev Nicholson spoke briefly complimenting the boys on their laudable undertaking. The crequinole prize was won by Mrs. Albert Sheppard, and the prize for monopoly by Miss Dorothy Barnett. Lunch was served by the boys of the Tuxis group. Mrs. W. S. Gordon, teacher of the class and Jack Timmons, President, and the officers are to be congratulated for their enterprise.

Clothing Thieves are active again in this community. Early on Monday evening the clothesline of Rev. R. R. Nicholson was robbed of three large flannelette blankets. Mrs. Nicholson discovered the loss when she went to bring in the clothes about six o'clock in the evening. The thief was disturbed in the midst of his operations but made good his escape with the blankets. The semi-darkness makes it impossible to identify him, but Constable Hayes who was summoned, was able to follow his footprints for a considerable distance. The investigation is continuing and it is anticipated that an arrest will be made.

The C.O.I.T. held their Christmas meeting at the United Church on Tuesday evening. Thirty girls, with their leaders, Miss Bessie Gordon B.A., and Miss Reta Palliser, B.A., attended the supper at six-thirty. After supper a programme of games and songs of a Christmas character were enjoyed by the girls. The program consisted of a duet, "Silent Night", Marion and Marjorie Tummon; "The First Nowell", Camille Leal; Helen Austin, Dorothy Lucas; A Christmas Reading, Phyllis Austin. The meeting closed with a Christmas Hymn and "Taps".

The business sections of the village has taken on a decidedly Christmas aspect with the erection of a Christmas Tree at Kerr and Ob's corners. Several strings of coloured lights placed at intervals across the street and small evergreens secured to the Hydro and telephone poles are evidence of the imminence of another Christmas season. The merchants are vying with each other in making their show windows attractive, and in displaying seasonable goods to induce Christmas shoppers to shop at home.

The Young People's Union sent a fine shipment of Christmas parcels to the Western Provinces last week to be distributed among the children in the dried-out areas.

COLE'S 'GOLDS' DEFEAT PURPLES

Stage Last Half Rally to Win Out by Four Points

Trailing four points at the halfway mark Art Cole's 'Golds" staged a hectic last half rally to down Vic White's purple-clad cagers 27 to 26 in the old Y.M.C.A. house basket ball league game played at the Armouries counte last evening, the remaining game of a twin bill being postponed.

Strengthened by the additional services of the elongated Ab "Squeeze" Faulkner, the Purples proved an inspired quintette during the initial half and not only checked well, but outscored the veteran Golds. Experience took its toll in the second half, however, as the veteran hoopsters, clad in their Gold sweaters and led by Ernie Smith, proved far more effective around the basket, as the younger and less experienced purples failed to penetrate the Golds' defense and faded before a determined onslaught.

Ernie Smith of the winning Golds led the scorers with three speedy baskets as Captain Art Cole sank four while "Runt" Miller bagged three and a free foul shot. Ab Faulkner with five points and Kerr with six led the losers offensively.

The Golds only counted one point in their five attempted foul shots, while the Purples successfully scored two points in the same number of free tries. In preparation for the Provincial Ontario Amateur Basketball Association season, that opens after the New Year, the Belleville intermediates and the Deacon A.C. juniors will play an exhibition basketball game at the Belleville Collegiate gymnasium on Friday night. Both squads boast some splendid raw material and a real good game is assured the lovers of this fast indoor sport.

The box score:

	FG.	F.	Pts.
Golds	4	0	8

RUNS BATTED IN TITLE TO TORSKY

First Baseemen Seem to Rule in This Part of Baseball

Chicago, Dec. 17. — (AP)—Hal Trosky, husky young Cleveland slugger, added another year to the growing tradition that first baseemen rule the American League in the art of batting in runs by belting mates across enemy plates 162 times in 1936.

Trosky, who finished fourth last years with 113 runs batted in behind Detroit's Hank Greenberg, Lou Gehrig of the World Champion New York Yankees and Jimmy Foxx of Boston—all first baseman—led another four-man set of first-backers at the top of the list.

Gehrig whose total a year ago was 152, again finished second, the time with 152. Foxx jumped from 115 to 143 to retain third place, while Zeke Bonura of Chicago White Sox moved up to fourth position with 138.

Trosky grabbed his first runs-batted-in title with the lowest total since 1920 when Al Simmons, then with the Athletics, got in with 157. Gehrig, who started the first baseman's parade in 1930 with 174, established the junior circuit record of 184 in 1931. Foxx was high man with 169 and 163 in 1932 and 1933 respectively, and Gehrig bounced back in 1934 with 165.

Greenberg Wen in 1935

Greenberg, out of all but 13 games last season because of a wrist fracture, won 1935 honors with 170.

Gehrig was over the 100 mark for the 11th straight season, tying Simmons' Major League record. Simmons, whose string was broken in 1935, came back for his 12th season in which his bat sent 100 or more runs home, one short of Babe Ruth's all-time standard. Gehrig also passed the 150-mark for the sixth time of his durable career, tying one of the Babe's records.

Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee freshman sensation, batted in five runs in one inning to equal the league record set by Ty Cobb in 1909. Another Yankee, Tony Lazzeri hammered home 11 runs in a game against Philadelphia, bettering the former league mark of nine set by Foxx in 1933.

A new Major League mark was established when 18 players knocked in 100 or more runs. The former standard of 17 was set by the National League in 1930.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Although George Herman "Babe" Ruth is reported to have rejected an offer to manage the Albany Senators in the International League in 1937, more prevalent rumors are to the effect that he may be at the helm of the Jersey City Skeeters in the Pacific Coast League. Ruth gave as his reason for not managing the Senators the fact he had spent 22 years in the major leagues and thought he was still in the major league caliber. Perhaps since making that statement the "Sunshine" has thought things over and discovered he commenced his baseball career in the minor and maybe it would be a good idea to launch his managerial career there also and there is no more fertile field than the Pacific coast loop. In the 1926 world's series Ruth hung up the all-time batting mark of .625, cracking out ten hits in 16 times at bat. The Babe garnered nine runs in those four games, with the Cards, and this is also a record. During his lifetime as a major leaguer, Ruth received 2,000 base on balls.

"That man's in again"—but perhaps we're getting ahead of the commercial part of the story. Last spring the Peterboro sport scribe suddenly broke 155 news regarding the discovery of a new golf phenom named Whitehill, who was found in the wilds of Peterborough County. Nothing seemed to be known of the lad's golfing past, who was reported to be visiting an aunt on the outskirts o' the Liverpool metropolis of Peterboro. Seemingly it came as a surprise only to person around the Peter baseball circles knew anything of it that "twas many queer that this young man happened to be a brother of Earl Whitehill, a pitching baseball League hurler. Of course the Peterboro sheleaguers could not be even suggested as an import. Oh yes!

Now comes the real chuckle—the most recent reports on Eddie Dancer" Whitehill inform us he is back home in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, 'n' that all very crudely presented—the discovery of an unknown hurler on the part of the Peter baseball fans, the sudden fade out at the end of the season recently and subsequent fade in second Clancy. The only difference between Whitehill and Clancy was that Clancy was a ball player and cashed in on his ability.

Marconi, the first horse to run under the colors of King George the Sixth, finished eighth in a field of nine yesterday in the Duke of Windsor handicap steeplechase. Recent announcements stated His Majesty would continue to race horses.

Getting back to baseball we understand the members of the executive of the Belleville Senior Baseball Club will reign in a body when the annual meeting of the club is held right after the holidays. Persistent rumors are to the effect that providing the season is also of offers heading the local ball club reign, another organization is ready to assume the responsibilities of sponsoring a baseball club in this city. At least that's the information related along to us by Umpire H. G. Wooding. If you think it is any fun operating a losing baseball club in Belleville you are badly mistaken and I can truthfully say the whole executive of last year will gladly relinquish their positions if others desire to sponsor a ball club in the city, and we won't leave any back debts to be met either," said President Clarence Clapp after stating he would call the annual meeting of the fans and the club executive right after New Year's.

Despite his rejuvenation and the splendid showing of the Leafs since he has joined them, the veteran George Hainsworth says he is through with hockey and means it. George stepped into the gap created when Wilf Cude, regular Canadien goalie was forced out by injuries recently and the Kitchener cucumber came through with flying colors. George says he has accepted an excellent position with an Ontario business house and says he is too old for hockey and knows it. Cecil Hart, manager of Les Canadiens is endeavoring to persuade Hainsworth to at least remain with the colorful Montreal club until Cude returns and is ready to play. Doubtless nothing would gladden Hainsworth's heart more than to step into Toronto and in his lap N. H. L. game about out. Connie Smythe's Maple Leafs while wearing a Canadien uniform. That would be reason enough for George to hang up his goalkeeper's paraphernalia once and for all.

S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, convener of the local junior and intermediate O.H.A. groups, announced today the groups would be called together sometime over the week and to talk over schedules, etc. Peterboro, B. A. F. Tweed and the Belleville clubs have been notified.

The R.C.A.F. "Fliers" completed their schedule in the Kingston City League last night by winning over the saddler-boys from the Garrison by the score of 2 to 1. Incidentally when the "Fliers" skated off the ice they had completed their schedule of four games without having sustained a loss. They now enter the league final play-offs when the three clubs they have already soundly trounced upon previous occasion will have another opportunity to try their luck against the "Airmen". What if the "Fliers" dispose of the boomers then? All say' rais the Kingston loop play-offs get under way next Monday and judging from present indications the "Fliers" should cop the bunting. Of course Flight-Lieutenant Samson informs us the Limestone City betting circles were "laying it in" on the Garrison squad last night, so maybe some good opposition will yet be afforded the "Airmen."

With four clubs entered the schedule in group No. 1 of the intermediate O.H.A. was drafted yesterday, Kingston, Canadoque, Queen's and R.M.C. comprise the loop, which opens Jan. 7th.

Where the Cleveland Indians fell down last summer seems to have been the pitching corps. The Indians fielded fairly well, had the junior loop in team batting and had Lou Agnello as the league's champion batter. Now along comes reports that Hal Trosky, Indian first sacker, led the league with runs batted in—162, to be followed by Lou Gehrig, who jumped from fifth place ahead of him. Statistics show Trosky's league record of 162 to be the lowest since 1920 when Al Simmons won the R. B. I. honors with 157. The American League players set a new record last summer, when 18 batters got in 100 runs or more, topping the previous record of 17 set by the National League in 1930. Jimmy Foxx led the hitters in the Red Sox dandy striking out 119 times. He was Babe Ruth's successor—a new major league record—at out-fanning all league rivals. The New York Yankees, heading the other record for the year and Dapert's Rifles batted in 905 runs against 882 of the second-place Chicago team.

AIRMEN WIN ALL GAMES PLAYED IN KINGSTON LOOP

Down Garrison 3 to 1; Commence Play-offs Next Week

Completing their part of the schedule without having sustained a single loss in the R.C.A.F. "Fliers" defeated the Kingston Garrison 3 to 1 in the final game of the regular schedule in the Kingston District Hockey League last evening. The "Fliers" defeated every other club in the league to finish the schedule without a loss. The league play-offs commence on Monday when all four clubs in the league will meet in a knockout round series.

The "Airmen" opened the play-offs versus the third-placed Garrison while Massouds and Prescott battle in the other half of the semi-final round.

Playing a hard game throughout the "Fliers" scored one goal in each period to run their score to three-nil. Garrison's lone counter managed to bulge the twine late in the final stanza. The "Airmen" presented a defence and were shorthanded when Corporal Lac. Leonard, Carling-Kelly and McNeely were the marksmen respectively for the Kingston leading R.C.A.F. "Fliers".

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Marshal Goldberg's dad, who runs a hardware store in Elkins, W.Va., couldn't get newsreels of the Notre Dame-Pitt game, so the rival boys pecked 'em in by advertising "See Marshal Goldberg against Notre Dame" . . . Cincinnati Reds have the shortest manager in Major League baseball—Charley Dressen . . . Sid Hudson and the tallest coaches in Tom Sheehan and Long George Kelly . . . Moe Berg, educated catcher of the Red Sox (he speaks seven languages) is doing the town with Al Schacht.

They say Frank Higgins is pretty sure to wind up playing the hot corner for Cleveland—a storm is brewing over the firing of Bob Harrison . . . At the meeting of Pacific Coast Football Coaches the other day, Bernie Bierman was a guest and told the best story . . . While en route to play Washington, Missouri, the team stopped overnight in Missoula, Mont. . . . Fire broke out in the hotel during the night, and Flames were shooting all around and some of the gridders couldn't decided what to do . . . Shall we jump for it, or try the fire escape?" One of them yelled, through the smoke the answer came back: "If you are subs, go ahead and jump; otherwise use the fire escape."

Now that his title shot with Braddock is assured, Max Schmeling has gone uppity uppity. . . One of the newsvets missed out on the contract signing ceremonies last Saturday and asked Braddock and Max for a special pose. . . The champion was glad to oblige and made the fatty down low. . . Mr. Schmeling was "too busy" to accommodate, Les Scamells, Cincinnati's big first baseman, claims he can hit better under the Ares than in the day time. . . POPE PIUS XI HAD BAD NIGHT

Still Adamant His Illness Nothing to Worry About

Vatican City, Dec. 16 (AP)—Pope Pius XI awoke today after an uncomfortable night following a relapse from the ailments which have kept him bed-ridden for 11 days.

The 79-year-old Pontiff, however, was reported still adamant in his determination to regard his illness lightly as the inescapable effect of old age.

Dr. Amanti Milani, his physician, went to the papal apartments equally determined the Pope exert himself as little as possible.

He tried to persuade the Holy Father rest, and nothing but rest, could safeguard him against a relapse such as he suffered yesterday when his breathing became difficult.

Dr. Milani administered a heart stimulant yesterday. Vatican circles said but the Pope rallied only temporarily. They said he seemed to feel great fatigue later and still was depressed when he retired.

Merry Makers' Minstrels Delight Marmora Audience

Marmora, Dec. 17—Deuire J. the Bourque of the Bourque Production Company presented on Saturday afternoon, Saturday evening and Monday evening to large appreciative audiences the Merry Makers Minstrels. The show was put on in the Town Hall under the auspices of the Marmora Legion Band.

The local cast of one hundred did through justice to the heavy training given during the past week in the Town Hall by Mr. Bourque. In the marvellous costumes supplied by the company the revue created spectacular scenes which held the attention of the enthused audience.

The minstrelsy which composed the first section of the revue deserves the highest praise. The minstrels, young men of Marmora and Deloro were under the direction of Mr. Bourque and Mr. Bourke as principals executing some modern tango steps, a group of modern sophisticated young men and women between the ages of six and eight years, resplendent in full evening regalia, accompanied Miss Dorothy Ferguson in the chorus of "Sweetheart." "The Summer Boarder" a sketch featuring Peggy Hewitt and Mavis Hawes provided many a smile from the audience. The greatest impressions success of the evening was the short play "The Man From Brandon," the various characters of which were ably sustained by Misses J. Farley, H. Thompson and G. Lumsden. Mrs. K. Armstrong and Messrs. D. Bourque, F. Woodhouse and D. Gray, Clen McColl then followed with two cowboy songs with guitar accompaniment, after which Peggy Hewitt and Marsh Hawes appeared in another short skit "He Makes a Jill."A few members of the cast with Eileen Doyle and Rita Johnston as principals portrayed "The Voice in the Old Village Choir." Percy Gray then sang "Etiquette" and a burlesque "Grand Opera." Mrs. Bourque daughter Miss Miriam Nobes very trim and dashing in her military uniform sang "Something About a Soldier."

The grand finale was of a military character and the cast, the greatest part of which were in uniform, paid homage to the Queen of the Merry Makers, Marguerite Reynolds.

During the course of the evening O. Woodhouse and C. O'Neil spokesmen for the band presented gifts to Miss Mabel McCarthy, who pianist for the Merry Makers and Mr Bourque director, thanking them for their co-operation and work.

Shower Honors Popular Couple

A number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burnham Lott, 6th Line Sidney on Thursday evening, December 3rd to do honor to their son, Anna, and her husband, and presented them with a miscellaneous shower of pretty and useful gifts. The address was then read by Miss Mildred Paul followed by singing "They All Sang Should Good Fellows".

"Dear Anna and Allen—

"There are three important milestones in one's life. They have reached of the second—a very important one, since you have launched your ship upon the sea of matrimony.

"We your friends and neighbours have gathered here tonight to rejoice with you on this happy occasion of your marriage and to wish you all the joy and happiness possible.

"Anna, we will miss you from our community, but are sure that with your winning personality you will soon make many new friends in your new home, and our loss will be another's gain. We heartily congratulate Allen on his splendid choice of a partner even although he has stolen you away from us. We felt we could not let this event pass by without expressing our esteem for you in a more tangible way, so we ask you now to accept these gifts from the community and also this bread tray from the Institute.

"We trust that as you use these various gifts you may be reminded of your friends on the fifth and sixth concessions.

"Signed on behalf of the community—Mildred Paul, Jean Hanley, Eileen McLaren, Eleanor Chapman."

Following the opening of the gifts, fitting replies were given. The remainder of the evening was then spent by having lunch and followed by two violin solos with piano accompaniment given by Mrs. Thrasher and George Brown, also two piano solos were given by Donald McLaren which completed the evening's entertainment.

3RD SIDNEY

3rd Sidney—The spirit of Christmas was evident, and the church suitably decorated, at the "White Gift" service, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society, at Aiken's Cliffs on Sunday morning. The choir led by Mrs. Frank Wallace led the service with members of the choir taking part. Christmas carols were sung and a solo by Mrs. Harry Hamilton was much appreciated.

Following a reading by Miss Edith Hagle, who commended the "Spirit of Christmas" the gifts, beautifully wrapped in white were brought to the front of the church where the Misses Dean and June Aikens placed them on the table.

"Inasmuch", a reading by Mrs. Catherine Weyburn, added greatly to the impressiveness of the service. The gifts donated are to be sent to the Supply Centre, Toronto, by Mrs. M. S. to be sent on to needy families.

Mrs. Oden Penn of Toronto spent the week-end visiting friends in this neighborhood.

Mrs. Harley Hubble spent a day last week with Mrs. Lorne Hubble, 2nd concession.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wheeler visited friends in Picton on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Westover, Mr. and Mrs. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ham family spent Sunday with Mrs. Wm. Hamilton, Mrs. Ham and Mrs. Jackman, Sidney.

Mrs. Ernest Jay Grills visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald, Shannonville on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald were guests of Mrs. Grills' sister, Mrs. Ernest Jay, Belleville, who is leaving for New York on Thursday, where they will sail for Bermuda to spend the winter months with Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Grills.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubble and Mrs. R. Hubble attended the funeral of the late Mrs. George Rowe, at Wooler on Sunday afternoon.

Friends from this line attended a party given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Spencer, 4th line, to do honor to their son, Allen, and his bride, formerly Miss Anna Hamlet. A happy evening was spent, games being led by pastor of the Trinity-bridge Church, Rev. H. B. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson. An address was read by Miss Mae Shorey and Mr. and Mrs. Spencer were presented with a beautiful chesterfield suite and Anna were taken by surprise but made suitable replies. Allen is a great favorite in this neighborhood, which is joined to welcome his bride. Following a dainty lunch

Frankford, Dec. 14, 1936

Dear Anna and Allen—

We, your friends and neighbors have gathered together this evening to convey a social evening with you and to extend our best wishes and congratulations on your long, happy and prosperous married life.

Anna, although some of us do not know you very well, we hope to get better acquainted with you and trust we will see more of you at both church and community work.

Allen, you have always lived among us, gone to school and those of us who have had the pleasure of knowing you intimately in many ways found you to be a sociable and genial character. We feel sure that we be sincerely congratulated on your choice of life partner and trust that you will both have much joy and happiness as you go through life together.

Very often married life is made up of a mixture of joys and sorrows, so just in passing here's a recipe that will help you for a happy home:

The ingredients of a home are: Love, Honor,

The Prince of a home is hospitality. The blessing of a home is piety. The happiness of a home is contentment."

Now with yourself your joy rests. Your marriage vows are sacred ties Your hearts with joy doth bind Let each mutual privacy cause Your lives be more enwined. We wish you every happiness Bless your wedded life. And may your days be full of bliss As husband, friend and wife."

Now on this occasion, we have brought with us a gift which we hope you will like.

"Please accept this little gift, As a token of love for a prize Of the love and esteem. We shall bear You always."

HOW JOAN LOVED THRU

by ANNE FORESTER

Chapter 30
Mark Accepts

Mark Havens continued to regard Joan with that disbelieving smile. It maddened Joan, she felt that she hated him. Trying to convince the man was like pounding with clenched fists on a stone wall.

"You think I don't mean it! You want to think that. You feel it's easier to buy me off and forget all about me than to go to the trouble of personally looking after me. What are your fine words worth now, Mr. Havens! You're only doing what the rest of the world has been doing." Joan's chin was imperiously high, the grey eyes bright and scornful. "Very well, Mr. Havens, I've shown you up. Now I'll tell you this, you may keep both your money and your help. I'll get along without either."

Havens was both interested and amused, his sardonic fancy caught by the spectacle of this little dirt-ed valiant trying by swift egotist the current. An idealist, thought Havens, who so seldom had found his ideal mirrored in flesh and blood that he had grown a trifle cynical. The struggles of this girl—profiting she would struggle—might prove interesting.

"Wait a minute, Miss Allen, you're leaping to conclusions. I have not said I wouldn't help you. On the contrary, I'll make you a very definite proposition. Come on down to my office tomorrow. I'll find a place there for you."

Mark Havens he had amazed her, but there was no change of expression in the grim face. She felt a stir of admiration. The little devil could play poker! he told himself.

Joan spoke slowly, as though the words were dragged from her. "I think you should understand, Mr. Havens—maybe I haven't made myself clear—but I meant what I said—I have had no experience at all in office work." Then she saw his lips widen and her color rose. "You think I'm trying to back out? I'm not! I'll be down there tomorrow morning." She knew by her face turning scarlet. "There's another thing Mr. Havens. My name isn't Allen, it's really Joan Ormond. I don't know why I did that—" She could, amused eyes were disconcerting her; the more she stammered, the more confused she grew. "It was impulse—not to be —well, not to be bound to this—you Ker—" her hands vaguely indicated Esmee's apartment. "But now I'd like to use my own name."

Joan had never felt more at a disadvantage. The man would despise her now. But with one of his astonishing changes, Mark Havens did nothing of the sort. She could read no expression in the grey fastened steadily on her own but his voice was lower, more gentle than it had been at any time in this amazing interview.

"That's a bargain, Miss Ormond. I'll give you a start in the office. A living wage with opportunity for advancement as you earn it—that is—if you care to continue—"

"You don't think I mean to do you"

Havens shrugged and slightly raised his brows, but ignored that last contention. "In return, I want you to break this absurd engagement with Ted. I don't refuse to let you go on acting, although I can't be the surest way to set the young man on fire. But I warn you, that's the thing off so it doesn't hurt the be-loved Ker's pride." He rose, walked to the door, then paused as though a thought had overtaken him.

Selecting three bills from his wallet, he extended them to the girl. "Prove what you can do for me. I imagine you can use this—" Then impatiently, as she drew away, "Oh, don't strain at gnats. Call it your first week's salary, if you like —in advance."

Joan regarded the man steadily for a moment, trying to read his face. The bright brown mockery of his eyes were now her bright hair, down the gentle curve of her breast, the slim, shapely legs, like a caress. It came back to her, condemning face. His words were low, as though they also were for him rather reluctantly.

"What an attractive little devil you are, Joan Ormond! How you could tear a man's heart if he were ever fool enough to let you into it! I hope Ted isn't too hard hit."

He was gone—the place seeming strangely devitalized now that his tall figure had vanished. Joan found herself watching the closed door, as though the man had cast a spell upon her. Not until she heard the distant slam of the elevator door down the hall was she brought back to her self. She came back slowly into the living-room, the three bills pressed hard against her breast. She was astonished to find her cheeks flaming and her heart racing as though she had had a long way . . . with it.

Chapter 31
Facing the Piper

Joan's vanity was wounded. Mark Haven's words had stripped any glamour from her mind. The memory stung like acid....a quitter!...sliding into the first alien refuge presented!

He was right—she had done just that. Deliberately turned traitor to the high ideals and the breeding passed on to her. Ted, who had been her mother's double could realize now that gentle, artistic Ruth Ormond had never been happy with the dry matter-of-fact man she had married. But during her years on ranch—a poor bargain. She had made a comfortable and harmonious home for the little town where she was marooned. She had created for her daughter, Ruth, for her little daughter, had rooted her deep in pleasant childhood memories, in happy traditions. Ruth, for all her delicacy, would have been quite capable of walking across the prairie at 49; her hands—the slender, blue-veined hands which Joan remembered now with a rush of tears —could have helped carve an empire out of a wilderness.

Joan suddenly burned to be worthy of this mother. And at the same time she burned remembering Mark Havens' eyes as he looked about the apartment. He had not been openly insolently superior, just disdainful, as though he viewed something commonplace and tawdry.

Impulsively Joan flew into the bedroom, slammed open the closet door and pulled on her hat and coat in a hurry. Her face at the last moment she paused to examine critically her reflection in the glass. Had that sojourn in Esmee's bet-light world put some mark on her, some slant on her eyes? Would Havens' kind of men?

Stark the mirror gave back a slender patrician with anxious grey eyes. She looked—clean! The word leaped into her mind, and it stayed. There was some centre purity of thought and integrity in Joan that cheap surroundings could not reach; they served only to emphasize the contrast.

The autumn wind was brisk when she reached the street and was plunged into it gladly, fancying that its fresh strength blew away months of dank smoke and heavy perfume. For the first time she felt in her penny coin the joy of concealment had ceased to gnaw, her mind was relieved. It was going to smile, swinging along through the clean wind this way. No longer did she have to shrink—shrug when passers-by glanced at her. A kind world—Oh, a friendly world! She felt herself to be part of a decent and well-regulated plan.

Joan had missed the sub-conscious brooding over the bitterness and bad-tempered gloom of last night with Hugh. Esmee and her world were already dim and vaguely slipping over the horizon. And Teddy—with a warm little gush of daughter love Joan felt she recognized her feelings toward Teddy. He was a boy who had cut chap that any girl would want to have—for a brother! And a kind-minded enough to give Joan a engagement still, after all, it had served its purpose.

But with the thought of Mark Havens Joan's smile faded. A curious person—she wasn't sure she liked him—but interesting, of course. Would you give a man's heart if he ever let you into it—" His very words! Joan shuddered afresh. Pity the woman who could dash her own against it.

Joan found a modest apartment on a side street. A half-way station was, she knew, the equator of those first desolate grey days and the Byzantine luxury of Esmee's apartments. It looked a trifle forlornly onto a paved court, where rain dripped in wet weather and only the pale ghost of sun ventured timidly in. But Joan's face was sober as she looked around on its brown papered walls, the grim, woodenbed and chairs and the unassuming table. The luxury of the last few months had pampered her for self-denial. A bromide, much quoted by her father, leaped into her mind—"They who dance must pay the piper. She could almost hear his dry, dry voice quoting it and unconsciously she made a little face at the memory.

All right, she would pay the piper for those last few weeks of dancing! She put down a deposit and hurried back to Esmee's to pack her things.

Ted was nervously pacing up and down the hall when the elevator bore her to the third floor. His face was flushed and scowling. Jaw belligerently shot forward, the first words told that she had come here direct from an interview with the attorney.

He strode to the girl and grasped her by the wrists.

"What's this rot Mark's trying to tell me—that it's all off—you and I? That you're going to work in his office....."

"Ted—wait!" Joan was frightened at the intensity of him. Outwardly calm, she unlocked the door and drew him into the apartment. "Sit down—don't get all burns up over it—" She was trying to force him down on the chesterfield. But Teddy's six feet of brawn, hardened on the football field, would not give in to the strength of those slender arms.

The boy gripped her by the shoulders, dragged her to him so that his face was thrust over hers and Joan's heart sank in dismay at the passion blazing in his eyes.

"It's damned hunk!" he got out between his teeth. "You think I'll be put off like this? He frightened you—Mark did! Well—I'll finish him!"

They must be kept warm!

Remember—coke will heat your home at a lower cost than other hard fuels.

COKE NOT A SUBSTITUTE BUT A FUEL PREFERRED BY THOUSANDS OF USERS

As a result of actual experience in their own homes, winter after winter, it is to be noted that more and more household-holders are realizing that coke has and its own merits as the ideal fuel.

This is not a new fact. For scores of years it has been known that coke has certain advantages not to be found in other hard fuels. By heating coal to a tremendous heat, gas and tar oils are driven off. The result is that while only 62% of bituminous coal is fixed carbon, the carbon content of coke is more than 88%.

Repeated usage has shown that there is no finer coke on the market than Hamco Coke, made in Canada by the most modern, scientific process.

When you consider that Hamco Coke costs considerably less per ton than any other hard fuel of comparable value, the monthly savings in your own home are obvious.

Fuel experts say: "Stop thinking about coke as a low-priced substitute. Irrespective of cost, it is the perfect fuel. You can't buy a better fuel no matter how much more you pay—the money you save is an extra asset."

CONTROLLING TUBERCULOSIS

Everyone knows about the disease and at this time caused great loss of life and that have been brought under control by modern methods. There are a number of incidents locally that should serve to give timely reminders. Typhoid fever is one illustration. Twenty-five or thirty years ago, it was not uncommon for cities to have death rates of 100 per 100,000 and more. Now the death rate of every city is trying for records of 10 or less. A degree for a city to have a typhoid rate of from one or two per 100,000, and in many cities rates for typhoid are far below even less than one.

Other fevers are also when proper precautions are taken almost unheard of.

Diphtheria, the killer of children a few years ago, is today becoming a rare disease. Only a few years ago, Belleville had a death or even a case of diphtheria in every week. Thanks to modern methods of immunization against diphtheria, that scourge has been almost conquered, but it is encouraging to learn that those precautions are helping in conquering the enemy during the past year. Belleville had only one death from diphtheria and that was from a carrier case. In Ontario in 1900, shortly after the National Sanitarium Association was organized, the rate was estimated at 180 per 100,000. To-day it is 3.

It is a pleasing knowledge to know that the end is in sight, and everyone knows the last lap calls for the greatest energy and if we are to record a victory in the complete mastery over this plague we have been raised over centuries, we must strive as never before. Hospital facilities, a progressive, financial support, the Muskoka, the Toronto and Kingston Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives will continue to lead the way.

Frankford and District

Frankford—The evening service of the United Church in charge on Sunday evening Dec. 13th was conducted by members of the local branch of the W.M.S. and other Missionary Societies of the Church.

Mrs. Gerald Dickson, President of the Frankford W.M.S. was in charge of the service. Prayer were offered by Mrs. Arthur Ford, Mrs. W. H. Landon and Scripture lesson chosen by Mrs. H. Gonder, one of the oldest members of the W.M.S. who was unable to be present, was read by Mrs. F. Lane.

The speaker for the evening Mrs. S. L. Terrill, President, Dickson Presbyterial of the W. M. S. was welcomed and introduced by Mrs. Charles Peacock, president of the Mission Circle. Mrs. Terrill's address was thoroughly enjoyed and through her long association with the Missionary work, she was able to explain clearly what is being done and that which is being accomplished. W.M.S. as well as standing for what it does, could be taken to mean Women Must Serve or Women Must Sacrifice and instead of stressing the financial side too much, more effort should be expended in interesting and getting more people to join or take part in the work," said the speaker.

Special music was rendered by the choir and prayers for the new King and the royal family were offered by Rev. J. F. Lane. The service closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Terrill of Wooler were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Dickson.

Mr. J. A. Biddle spent Monday in Peterboro.

Mr. D. S. Austin of Wooler visited friends in town on Monday.

Miss Marybelle Rogers of Stirling spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. Peters of Belleville visited friends in Frankford on Tuesday.

The Public and Continuation schools were closed on Monday in honor of the birthday of His Majesty King George VI.

Mr. Charles Hick of Belleville spent Monday in the village on business.

Mr. Hugh Montgomery was the Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Montgomery, Sidney Township.

Mr. Sam Taylor is visiting his sister Mrs. John W. Rose.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Matthews of Stirling called on Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer on Monday evening.

The school teachers are having a busy time getting ready for their long looked for event, the Christmas concert. Practices are held each day. One of the chief problems is to work out a program so that everyone can recite, or take part in it by dialogue.

There is no scarcity of willing workers but nevertheless the teachers are trying to produce a concert that will come to a close somewhere before time to break off the evening meal.

Mr. Fern Lockwood has been appointed caretaker of the arena for this winter. The ice-bed is getting everything in shape and hopes to have a good sheet of ice ready very soon.

The United Church Y.P.U. met in the church on Monday evening, December 14th with a good number present. The meeting opened with a Hymn and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. Gerald Snider took charge of the business program. This was followed by a hymn, prayer led by Arvella Conley and Responsive Reading led by Doris Embury. The topic was read by Sadie Welbourne and the Scripture Lesson by Reta Hendrick.

Rev. J. F. Lane then conducted the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Past-Pres., Freda Rodgers; Vice President, A. Foster; Secretary, Kathryn Hilliard; Treasurer, Sadie Welbourne, Christian Fellowship convener, Arvella Conley; Missionary convener and Mission study treasurer Preston Chase; Citizenship Convener, Reta Hendrick; Christian Culture convener, Gerald Snider; Pianist, Gerald Snider; Assistant pianist, Ruby Hendrick; Representative to O. B., Roy Pollard; Auditors, Miles MacMurray and Gerald Snider. The meeting closed with prayer by Rev. J. F. Lane.

Rawdon and District

Rawdon—On Friday evening over sixty members of Wallbridge Young People's Union journeyed to Mount Pleasant Hall where a goodly number were gathered to enjoy a friendly evening. Mr. John Cuggia opened with a hymn of consecration and Rev. J. R. Beckel offered prayer especially for the new King and Queen and for the young man who left the throne. The president paarty welcomed the guests and spoke of the happy time our league had in December 1935 at Wallbridge. Mrs. Hudson Ketchen, convener of the Social, Dept. of Wallbridge Society presided and graciously replied to the welcome. The service opened with quiet music by Miss Helen Crane and a Christmas hymn. Miss Audrey Nicholson read the Bible lesson and Mrs. Barton Hinchcliffe gave the Devotional period based on "The Song of Mary". All joined in a hymn of Quickness and Rev. H. R. Johnson outlined the topic for "What Christmas means to us" as we contented with a pagan Christmas or do we make it real. Many took part in attendance to remember that the greatest gift we can give is the spirit of Christ through ourselves.

Rev. Beckel briefly addressed the gathering on "Current Events of the week" After a hymn Messrs Jack Ketchenon and Jack Millar delighted with a cornet duet. Mr. Sam Nicholson rendered a humorous selection. Mrs. Jack Millar delighted Sonny sang a duet with Mrs. Edgar Cane as accompanist. Miss Lorra Sine gave a timely recitation. Mr. Hudson Ketchenon delighted with a solo. Miss Muriel Sowery gave a humorous reading.

A quartette by Mrs. James Sine, Miss Helen Lash, Messrs Sam Nicholson and Hudson Ketchenon provided much amusement. Games closed with a hymn and the National Anthem. The Young People of Mount Pleasant served a dainty lunch and all enjoyed a social half hour and votes of thanks were reciprocated.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spencer recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Reid, John and Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Reid and Edwin and Mrs. John Reid.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Weaver, Belleville, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Johnson.

Mrs. Ernest Carlisle attended the funeral of her cousin, Mrs. Ed Sharp in Belleville on Thursday afternoon.

Frankford and District

Frankford—The evening service of the United Church in charge on Sunday evening Dec. 13th was conducted by members of the local branch of the W.M.S. and other Missionary Societies of the Church.

Mrs. Gerald Dickson, President of the Frankford W.M.S. was in charge of the service. Prayers were offered by Mrs. Arthur Ford, Mrs. W. H. Landon and Scripture lesson chosen by Mrs. H. Gonder, one of the oldest members of the W.M.S. who was unable to be present, was read by Mrs. F. Lane.

The speaker for the evening Mrs. S. L. Terrill, President, Dickson Presbyterial of the W. M. S. was welcomed and introduced by Mrs. Charles Peacock, president of the Mission Circle. Mrs. Terrill's address was thoroughly enjoyed and through her long association with the Missionary work, she was able to explain clearly what is being done and that which is being accomplished. W.M.S. as well as standing for what it does, could be taken to mean Women Must Serve or Women Must Sacrifice and instead of stressing the financial side too much, more effort should be expended in interesting and getting more people to join or take part in the work," said the speaker.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Not in the Picture

By Kate Edmonds

"No," said the landlady stonily, there was a gir—

"I'm sure I don't know where Miss Ford went to—some one said she had given up her position and gone West to act in the movies."

Dick Reynolds nodded—"Yes, I got sick, and lost my job— and I just thought she'd forget."

"Yes—you look like the picture she had on her bureau. She didn't get any letters from you and so she just got pale and sick and went away, dearie."

"Thank you," said Dick as he turned away. He wrote a letter to Marcia, addressed it care of her old employers, marked it to be forwarded and waited. At last after months of fruitless waiting and searching he found a position in Chicago. Night after night he went to the movies, hoping for some clew, and then came a time when he saw his own Marcia kidnapped by a dark villain in a black evening cloak.

Also he shivered a girl sitting next to Dick.

Her companion giggled. "It looks real, but 'tain't!"

Dick found it difficult to believe that the characters were not real, with Marcia's face so clear, so agonized.

"Hi!" yelled Dick, and everybody laughed. He looked fiercely around and said "Sh!" with a stern and alert. He watched the picture until the doors closed on the next day's show, and he saw it again. By this time he was sure that his own sweetheart was acting in the movie. Then he saw the manager of the theatre.

With the name of the producers he found the location of the company—Hollywood, California— and packing his grip he set out in the search for Marcia. By this time he knew the picture by heart, learned that the name of the actress was Elizabeth Jayne, but strong in his own belief he declared the girl to be none other than Marcia.

At Hollywood the studios were all so busy that he barely escaped becoming famous because he had refused so many chances to act as a substitute ... also in one of the many comedies. Once he had an adventure that he never forgot.

"Say, young feller," yelled a big looking man, as Dick approached a studio, "Want a job?"

"Looking for a girl," returned Dick. "Plenty of girls here— can you ride?"

"Yes".

"Skunks?"

"I—I—... came in. Man gone sick a m... ...uz you got to shoo. a m... ...l carry off a girl."

Dick grinned and followed the excited director. He was led into a dressing room, given a cowpuncher's outfit of clothes and came rolling out with a swagger that made the director stare.

"Say, you're been a puncher?"

"Yes."

"Steady job, maybe— now you hop into my car, the rest of the bunch waiting out on location ten miles away; just sent in word that Anne has broken his leg; cain't now."

He drove the car recklessly while he poured into Dick's ear the instructions he was to follow. "When I've called you ride up to the door of the cabin, shoot Arnold— he's the leading man—and grab the girl up and ride off with her, anywhere—out of the picture;— until you've called again, and then you —— and so on—until Dick felt qualified to do his part perfectly; yet when he saw the expectant company his wits almost deserted him. He watched the progress of the play with feverish interest because she had appeared at intervals in the play, and while there was a vague familiarity about her face and even her graceful walk, he could not make up his mind whether it was his Marcia or not. Her face was made up a little, as was his own, and both were part of a grotesque looking company. Some one told him her name—Elizabeth Jayne—and because he was afraid to have his dream shattered, he did not pursue the subject further. Then it dawned upon him that this was the girl he was to rescue surely he would know then!

He played his part extremely well and found a strange fascination in the work; the girl looked at him once or twice with a faint show of interest, but the grease paint disguised him well. Then came the moment when Dick, the hero, was to kidnap the hero's sweetheart, Dick mounted his horse, dashed up to the cabin door, shot the hero with a blank cartridge and swooping down, gathered the light form in his arms and dashed away to the big tree, where he had been told to wait like the lion of the director's megaphone. "That was fine," said the girl, cordially, as they stopped under the tree. "Set me down, please."

"Finding! Keeps," grinned Dick, looking her straight in the eyes.

"Oh!" she cried, then "Dick!" and she was hugging him tightly.

"Hi!" the megaphone blared at them angrily. "Quit that—it's not in the picture!"

"It's in our picture," grinned Dick as he rode up to the director. "I just found my girl and—"

"Excused!" bellowed the director; "play out for awhile and come back when you get over it—meals while we'll do something else. School!"

PLAINFIELD

Plainfield—Among the oldest of married couples in the township of Thurlow is Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert Latta, who recently celebrated their 52nd wedding anniversary amidst many congratulations from their host of friends and neighbors.

The aged couple who live in a comfortable little home a few rods removed from the highway where they are spending the twilight days of life in supreme happiness were married on Nov. 26th, 1874 by Rev. Mr. Wills, Methodist minister at the home of the bride's parents the late Samuel Latta and Caroline Stapley at Latta village. They have spent all their lifetime in this area but have visited in different parts of Canada and the United States, having lived for some months in Florida.

Mrs. Latta, who is the youngest and only surviving child of a family of ten, is in her 81st year. She does her own housework and continues to keep canary birds for a hobby.

Mr. Latta the son of the late Gilbert Latta and Margaret O'Donnell is in his 85th year. He cares for a large garden in summer and some considerable wood for his own use in winter.

One son Norman Latta resides at Dartford, Ont., and an only daughter, Mrs. Alfred Wright lives at 46 Millicent Street, Toronto. Both Mr. and Mrs. Latta exercised their franchise at the East Hastings by-election held on Dec. 9th.

The members of the United Church Sunday School are busy practising a pageant for their annual Christmas tree.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hall and family of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Weir and family of Hillier and daughter and son-in-law and little grandson of Belleville were the guests on Sunday of Mr. Robert A. Hall.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

HORNED OWL CAPTURED BY J. W. COULTER AFTER BATTLE

Above is a picture of the large owl which figured in a battle with a Prince Edward County farmer, J. W. Coulter, R.R. No. 1, Belleville, some days ago, the story of which was first related in Monday's issue of the Ontario Intelligencer. The bird with a wing spread of five feet paid a visit to the poultry shed of Mr. Coulter some days before and shredded the bodies of a dozen chickens, 24 to 25 lbs. each, and two hens, disappeared and was captured the next morning on its second visit to the hen shed. Mr. Coulter struck it down and seized it by the neck and the bird turned seizing the farmer by the wrists in a vice-like grip, the talons entering the wrists through clothing and causing Mr. Coulter injury. The bird was carried across the road to Owen, Kehoe's house in this locked position and only after repeated efforts of Mr. Coulter and Mr. Kehoe was the owl forced to release its hold on the man's arms. It is now kept in the Coulter yard during the day time, tethered to a twelve foot rope. In the picture it is shown on a post. It eats meat and has become a pet.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Although great variations exist in the fortunes of individuals and industries, for the country as a whole the emergence from depression into relative prosperity has become sharply defined, with the immediate outlook for further improvement probably as heartening as at any time in Canada's history. Rising demand and rising prices for many of our important export commodities are having strikingly favourable results in our foreign trade figures. Money being plentiful beyond all past experience, the financing of the indicated expansion both in internal and external trade can be done with great ease.

Constantly tightening pressure, tending to restrict free trading, is far from Wall Street's telling. Commenting, an old-time tape watcher remarked: "If the S.E.C. keeps it looks as though a 300,000 or 400,000 share day will be normal for the Street in a year or two." Every thinking person agrees that legitimate speculation is the life-blood of progress, but there is an agreement as to what constitutes "legitimate" speculation.

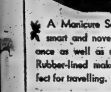
One nationally known U.S. market commentator believes the high for the year have been seen. Which, in view of the short time remaining is not too hazardous a prediction. But the market has a disconcerting habit of confounding its prophets. December, owing to large year-end disbursements, is a good month for rallies, and has often been the period when a sustained move began.

Copper Lifted to the 11-Cent Level, the Best Picture in Six Years

Here is some bullish news for the base metals. Lead quotations were marked up another $3 a ton on Tuesday, following a succession of advances in the last few months, and then domestic copper was lifted to the 11-cent level, the best figure in six years. As a result of these and several other developments, metals have returned to public favour.

Home Oil Company

The advance in Home Oil Stock in the past few weeks is a direct reflection of the advance recorded by Royalite—in which company Home holds 22,000 shares. The current market value of such a holding is approximately $1,100,000. It also owned at the date of the last report 640,000 shares of Pacific Eastern Gold. Since midsummer an extensive drilling campaign has been carried on by Home Oil in Alberta.



On The Street

Brazilian Traction is favored by some for a move of fifty per cent over the next few months... Western Oils are in the limelight now that three crude oil gushers have been found within weeks before long...Each one might have a capacity of 1,000 barrels a day... Buying of Nickel on the New York Stock Exchange is said to be of an excellent calibre...Further news on Price Bros. financing expected this week...Bethlehem Steel Income Bonds much in demand...Political situation clearing steadily...The one thing bothering the bull contingent at the moment is the fall-off in dealers' offers days such as Imperial Oil, Montreal Power and National Breweries to participate in the forward movement... Market experts some large orders to be given to the equipment companies by the railways.

Detroit, Dec. 17 (CP)—Has anyone seen 459 white ducks? Detroit Chief of Detectives William Collins has received a letter asking him to be on the lookout for them. They may be in Detroit.

Deputy Sheriff C. L. Felker of Putnam County, O., wrote Collins he shot the ducks. He explained they had been stolen near Ottawa, O.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Dec. 17 (Special)—Yesterday morning when a rear leaf axle broke on a Koolmotor gasoline truck proceeding west on Dundas Street near the town bridge the vehicle was suddenly halted. When the back of the machine dropped to the pavement the 400-1bs. load-wheel kept on going and headed straight into approaching traffic. Thomas Embelt the driver of the truck saw the runaway wheel pass and jumped from his seat and steered it out of danger after a short chase. The eight hours motorist travelling highway No. 2, were forced to slacken their pace as the truck in the middle of the road blocked traffic. A quantity of gasoline was spilled on the roadway when the rear end fell.

Mrs. Mary Cassidy

The death occurred at the home on Prong Street at noon yesterday of Mrs. Mary Josephine Coughlin, 82, widow of James Coughlin. The deceased was born in Trenton the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Miron. Previous to her marriage she was an ardent member of St. Peter's Catholic Church and was active in church work prior to her lengthy illness. Surviving are: one daughter, Madeline; two sons, Leo and Gordon all at home. Other survivors are five sisters, Mrs. David, Mrs. Henry LePleur, Mrs. M. Pow all of Trenton, Mrs. H. McCrea of St. Catharines, Mrs. R. Alexander of Buffalo, New York and one brother Napoleon Miron of Trenton.

V.O.N. Christmas Tree

Mothers and kiddies totalling one hundred and fifty attended the annual V.O.N. Christmas tree in the town hall yesterday. The tree was supplied by Mr. Kenneth Church and beautifully decorated by John Cota. During the afternoon Santa Claus arrived in full dress and presented the entire gathering with presents and candies. The gifts were donated by W. A. Fraser, M.P., of Northumberland, Ernest Hendricks, A. Lemoore, Mrs. MacKenzie, Andrew Shurie, Mrs. W. J. Potts and the Riverside dairy. Afternoon tea and biscuits were served to the mothers while the children drank milk. Trenton police department, the Provincial constable, clerk and a reporter were guests of the V.O.N. and enjoyed tea. Convener Mrs. Haslam of the V.O.N. was assisted by Mrs. N. Kidd, Mrs. J. Cole, Mrs. W. B. Wilson, Mrs. W. Powers, Mrs. W. H. Ireland, Mrs. W. J. Potts, Mrs. H. Bowers and Miss Cummings.

Keene-Lowry

In St. George's Anglican chapel on King Street last night, Ana Lowry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lowry, Lewis Street was united in marriage to Gordon Bowen, son of Capt. and Mrs. B. M. Bowen, Simmons Street her. F. A. Smith officiated. The bride looked lovely in a gown of azure blue taffeta with silver accessories and a corsage of Killarney roses, bouvardia and heather. The matron of honour, the bride's sister, Mrs. William Fuller was crowned in mulberry chiffon velvet with accessories in gold and a corsage of Talisman roses and heather. Mr. William Fuller was best man. After a dinner at Mr. and Mrs. Fuller's home the happy couple left for points west. The bride travelled in a brown ensemble. On return they will reside here.

Obituary

MRS. HARRIET L. MARTIN
(Hamilton)

The death occurred after a brief illness at the Chatham, Ontario, General Hospital on Monday, June 14th, of a former resident of Belleville in the person of Mrs. Harriet Louisa Martin, widow of William Martin.

The late Mrs. Martin was born 85 years ago on Jersey Island (Channel Islands), her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William Sailer, who at one time were residents of Belleville, having left Belleville, Mrs. Martin resided at New Westminster, B.C., for some years and for the past fifteen years she had made her home with one of her daughters at Blenheim, Ont. She was a member of the United Church and by all who knew her she was highly esteemed.

Surviving her are three daughters and two sons. One son was killed overseas during the Great War, Mr. Frank Sailer, Belleville, is a brother of the late Mrs. Martin, and he is the last surviving member of the family.

The funeral took place at Blenheim on Wednesday, Dec. 16th.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP) — Buying orders flowed in for Distillers-Seagrams and the price was advanced to 28¾, on Toronto Stock Exchange industrial section today. Other features were the Abitibi issues with the preferred up a point. Beauharnois was up nearly a point. Morrow narrow loses than gains were showing on the board at early afternoon.

Consolidated Smelters and Walkers Common declined a point each and preferred were a little lower for C.P.R., Ford "A" and a majority of the Golds and steels. Volume had a pre-holiday tempo among 75 per cent of the listings.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP)—Mining listings drifted downward on Toronto Stock Exchange today from the opening, particularly in the golds. Base Metals were less active than usual and the losses were mainly of minor importance. Another bulge in the oils marked the opening stage but the greater part of gains were erased in the late morning period.

Royalite weakened more than a point in light profit-taking. Calgary-Edmonton dropped 4¢, and Calgary and Dalhousie and Home Oil held narrowly to last ago. Ajax and golds Pioneer was sold in volume for its recovery loss to its former low for the year.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Selective buying provided a new spur for today's stock market although most of the leaders continued somewhat shaky.

There was little change either for better or worse, in the market picture and brokerage analysts were inclined to believe the halting movement of the list largely to year-end influences such as reinducing of holdings by investors and a little tax selling.

Caution was held about even. Distillers Corp.-Seagrams improved a bit while International Nickel and Canadian Pacific were unaltered. Doma Mines and Hiam Walker moved slightly lower. Other dollars were unchanged at 100.12.1-2 cents.

Gains of fractions to a point or so were registered for Westinghouse Airbrake, Washington Pump, U. S. Rubber, Validium, A.M. Byers, Distillers Corp.-Seagrams, Electric Power and Light, Standard Gas.

Narrow were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Monigomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, Anaconda, Kennecott, Standard Oil of N.J., American Can, General Electric and Goodyear.

In the lower clique were General Motors, Chrysler, Woolworth, Douglas Aircraft, American Smelting, Westinghouse, Canada Dry and Newport Industries.

GENERALISSIMO

The nation's highest authorities announced the rebellious Marshal had released General Chiang Tsung Wen, trusted lieutenant and fellow captive of the dictator, to convey a personal messages to Minister of War Ho Ying-Chin, commanding the punitive expedition against Sian-Fu.

Protection Afforded is Report

All the same time the foreign office reiterated the Generalissimo "remains safe" and T. T. Li, director of intelligence, announced "Chang Hsueh-Liang broadcast a statement that protection" had been afforded the Generalissimo."

It was believed the rebellious Marshal Chang who seized China's dictator and 30 other dignitaries in a sudden coup d'etat last week at Sian-Fu had outlined his terms for settlement of the mutiny in his message to the .Minister of War.

Earlier in the day James Elder, Chang's American adviser, flew to Nanking from Sian-Fu, mountainous stronghold of the mutiny in remote Shensi province.

Although Elder was held incommunicado by officials of the Central Government, it was learned he had paved the way for considerations of the proposals Chiang Ting-Wen was bringing.

Following the conference between Elder and Nanking officials a government spokesman said:

'Beneath Dignity'

"One thing is certain. It would be beneath the dignity of the government to negotiate with Marshal Chang whom we consider a bandit.

"Nanking might be prepared to offer Chang assurances for his personal safety but the government will never come to political terms with him."

Quickly whisked through the streets in a closed motor, Elder went immediately to the residence of Dr. H. H. Kung, acting Civil Head of the Central Government, for a conference with Dr. Kung and Madame Chiang, the Dictator's wife.

Chang's rebellious legions were reported cut off from all aid by the relentlessly advancing divisions of China's Central Army, ordered to move in force to rescue their imprisoned chieftain.

Washington, Dec. 17.— (AP) — James Elder, adviser to Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, is known in diplomatic circles here as a British subject.

Available information identified him as James K. Elder, born in Mukden, China, of British parents and a full-fledged British subject himself. As a boy, he was reared with the young Marshal, who is about his age, and became the latter's adviser when Chang became War Lord of Manchuria on the death of his father.

Fighting Around Sian-Fu

Shanghai, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Fighting around Sian-Fu for the release of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek was reported today to have spread in a wide circle about the capital of Shensi Province where the Generalissimo was held captive.

Loyal troops of the Nanking Government and the Rebel Army of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang were reported by the official Central News Agency to have clashed 10 miles east of Sian-Fu.

The News Agency described the encounter as spreading from the battle which began yesterday to the west of the city.

The Rebels, guarding the approaches to their headquarters, were said to have attacked the Central army at Hwayin, first stop on the important Lunghai railway in Shensi Province.

(Reports from Nanking said the Division pressing to the rescue of General Chiang were victorious in the fighting both to the east and west of Sian and had forced the rebellious army to retire on their Capital.)

SENATOR R. WHITE DIES IN MONTREAL FROM PNEUMONIA

Publisher of Gazette And Joined Paper as a Boy

PRESIDENT 26 YEARS

Travelled Widely And Was Decorated by French Government

Montreal, Dec. 18 (CP)— The ranks of Canadian government, finance and journalism were thinned by the loss of an outstanding figure today in the death of Senator Richard Smeaton White, publisher of the Montreal Gazette for more than a quarter century.

His death at 71 came after several months of failing health, aggravated by a chill contracted six weeks ago. In the last five days he had failed swiftly and the end at 10 p.m. last night was not unexpected.

By the last, Senator White's 52-year devotion to newspaper work asserted itself in his demand for news of current events. On his deathbed, he was kept informed of the swiftly-moving British constitutional crisis of a few days ago and other important news items.

On his death, legislators, businessmen and others paid tribute to the late publisher, a man whose words, though few, carried weight in the Senate and a powerful influence in Canada's affairs.

Sir Herbert Borden, who as Prime Minister selected him for the Senate in 1917, declared he had published a considerable place in the public life of our country." He sat in the red chamber for fisherman.

CUBAN PREMIER TO VETO BILL

Impeachment Proceedings Likely to Follow This Action

Havana, Dec. 18 (AP)—A commission of Senators and Representatives met early today to draft impeachment proceedings against President Miguel Mariano Gomez because of his opposition to the $1,500,000 sugar tax bill.

President Gomez incurred the political enmity of the commission members because he said he would veto the bill sponsored by Cuba's "strong man," Col. Fulgencio Batista, to provide revenues for armytaught rural schools.

Several Congressmen, who declined to be quoted by name, declared impeachment proceedings would be forced regardless of the Congressional vote on the bill which would create a nine-cent tax on each bag of sugar.

Gomez asserted he feared the possibility of the next generation of Cubans being educated in the "fascist manner," because of the army instructors urged backing of the tax measure and declared if it were passed he would refuse to sign it.

It would then be up to Col. Batista to force passage over the veto. A move last night have serious political consequences.

BARN DESTROYED NEAR MARMORA

Lantern Believed Cause of Fire—2 Cows And Calves Die

Marmora, (Special)—The farm of Mr. Howard Hamilton was the scene of a disastrous fire, on Thursday evening, near eight o'clock when the barn was burned, beyond repair. Inside the barn burned in the fire were two cows, two calves, a year's supply of grain and feed and the season's hay. The fire was believed to have started by the explosion of a lantern in the barn. By the time the news of the fire was received at Marmora, and the fire brigade had reached the scene, the fire had gone beyond control.

Hepburn Charges the Globe With "About Face" in Policy On the Quebec Contracts

Premier Replies to Editorial Criticising Gov't. For Repudiating Contracts

TELLS OF NEGOTIATIONS

States Taschereau Threatened to Cut off all Export of Power to Ontario

Toronto, December 18.— Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario in a statement yesterday charged the Toronto Globe and Mail with reversing its policy and sacrificing the interests of the financial ring, whose yoke the Government has struck from the backs of the power users."

The Premier's statement was the result of the leading editorial in yesterday morning's Globe and Mail which criticized the Premier for his his "repudiation" of the power contracts.

In the statement the Premier also charged that at .e time the Government was contemplating cancellation of the contracts, ex-Premier Taschereau of Quebec threatened that unless Ontario paid all the power it had contracted for, the entire export of power from Quebec would be shut off, and a great part of Eastern Ontario thrown into darkness. The Premier declared that he had defied the threat.

The Premier's statement:

"Let me nail it on the bag; when one hears that a multimillionaire has opened his money bags to the extent of three and a half to four million for fair fun, one is surprised and pleased. It is pretty good then when you learn that all this money is being used to purchase a great newspaper with a national circulation and historic prestige, in order that the philanthropy of the multimillionaire may be used for the furtherance of public opinion in the interests of the humanity, rectitude, good government and every thing else that is high-minded and noble. To paraphrase, and to distinctively apply, "all is the game!"

"Now we know. In Thursday morning's issue of the Globe and Mail there appeared the most drastic right-about-face in question of outstanding public importance that has characterized the policy of any newspaper in Canada in modern time.

"For ten years the Globe has been consistently supporting the Government's policy on power to divided many years in the matter of the repeating of the discussions in the Legislature and in this country.

Baldy the Horse 'Scaredy' in Dark, Turns on Lights

Sandusky, Mich., Dec. 18 (CP) Baldy is a story. Also, he solves prove he's afraid of the dark.

Baldy is a horse on a farm near here. His owner noticed the light flash on in the barn one night, apparently with no one around. The same thing happened the next night.

On the third night the mystified farmer discovered that Baldy, the "scaredy," was turning on the lights after dark by pushing the switch with his nose.

Screams of the Roomers Served as a Fire Alarm

Four Burned to Death And One Man Jumped to His Death

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—Five persons were killed at dawn today when fire swept through a rooming house on West 73rd Street.

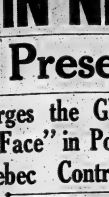
Four were burned to death inside the three-storied brownstone building and one man jumped to his death from a third-floor window when the fire cut off his escape down the stairs.

The man who jumped to his death was August Frank, 43.

The screams of the roomers in the building served as a fire alarm.

Chester Morash, the house detective of a hotel, three doors away, heard the cries and turned in an alarm.

From radio car policemen, the first to arrive, learned the bed and the burning building as the third floor when were driven back, unable to locate all the occupants of the structure.



Fire Undetermined

The fire started from an undetermined cause in the room of William Hoffman; third floor rear. Hoffman, awakened by the flames, reached the street safely.

Four perished on the top floor when escape was cut off. They were Elinor Duffield, 32, and her eight-weeks-old son, Henry, Jr.; Nancy Davis, 25, a sales clerk, and her sister, Margaret, a bookkeeper.

Frank, who lived in the basement, was aroused and rushed into the hall screaming as loudly she awakened many tenants. Fireman credited her with saving a number of lives.

Hoffman said he thought he had dozed off on the bed in his room while smoking a cigarette. When he awoke, found the bed and the room in flames, he said, and ran out of the building.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Outcome of a fire which destroyed his clothing factory when three firemen were killed and fifty persons driven out of them permanently, Julius Cohen (ABOVE) is on trial at Montreal on charges of murder and arson. Chief Christopher Carson of the Montreal fire department, testified that the explosion which wrecked the factory was "no error."

REPORT IS STUDIED

Ontario Securities Commissioner Suggest Quebec Take Action

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—Mining men today studied the report of Colin A. Campbell, mining engineer, containing his opinion assay samples sent from Rubec Mines Limited property in Caddon Township, Quebec, were "salted."

Named by John M. Godfrey, Ontario Securities Commissioner, to investigate the property after the firm requested such an inquiry, Campbell reported last night and recommended an investigation "in an effort to find the guilty party or parties."

Campbell said he was asked to check diamond drill cores and assay, results of holes 18 to 20 inclusive. The last hole had not yet been completed. He gave details of his check and set forth "peculiarities noted in the handling of the samples and reasons for believing the cores were "salted."

"I suggest Quebec take appropriate action," Mr. Campbell said. "There should also be an investigation of the market in the stock in Toronto and Montreal. If it can be found out who profited by this, parties should be done.

Ontario to Look After Market

"Ontario cannot take action but we cannot take action here in regard to anything done to assay samples at the mine. We can and will look into the market action of the stock."

MRS. W. SIMPSON STAYS AT CANNES

American Divorcee Enjoys Drive And a Few Rubbers of Bridge

Cannes, Dec. 18.—(AP)— Mrs. Wallis Simpson apparently has decided to lie about time for a welcome and go as she pleases from the villa where she is staying without being bothered or tired of staring at her.

She gave evidence of some such decision last night when she went twice from the villa to visit Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers.

In the gloaming she took a short drive through the countryside and later on played a few rubbers of bridge with friends at the villa.

As she left for her drive, a lackey following the Simpson car, started the motor machine on the road thus blocking all pursuit until the car ahead was out of sight on the road.

Many rumors, all without foundation, continue to be started on the rounds of Cannes.

One was that Mrs. Simpson plans and a trip to Egypt but all outward appearances led to the belief she was settled down for a long stay, possibly until April 27 when her divorce from Ernest Simpson will become final and she will be free to wed Edward, Duke of Windsor.

PROPAGANDA ISSUE

Ministers of Justice And Labor Meet Three Organizations

Ottawa, Dec. 18 (CP)—In the face of problems now facing the world this was no time to set one nation against another or one class against class, Prime Minister Mackenzie King today told a delegation representing the Confederation of Catholic Workers of Canada.

For the second time today the full cabinet council received a large delegation representative of labor, bringing recommendations for legislation at the forthcoming session of parliament.

Feature of the Catholic Workers recommendations was the urging by Communism be barred from Canada, and that the Dominion, as a member of the League of Nations move to have Soviet Russia tried on charges of fostering and using commercial relations to disseminate Communist and revolutionary propaganda.

The Prime Minister made no reference to that phase of the memorandum but it was taken up by Justice Minister Lapointe who spoke in French.

Impedes Refers to Communism

The government, Mr. Lapointe said, did not like Communism, nor did it like Fascism, and the government aims to the democratic principles which prevail in Canada. But this was no time to stir up hatreds among countries. The best way to combat Communism in Canada was by so caring for the economic forms of government unwelcome to democracy would not gain a foothold here.

Gas Masks Sold Spanish Gov't By Britain, Eden Tells House

Fortunately, He Adds, No Gas Has Been Used in Civil War

MEDICAL NEEDS

London, Dec. 18 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's declaration to the House of Commons that the British government has sold gas masks to the Spanish Socialist government but has refused requests for authoritative assertions such that equipment is actually available to insurgents.

Eden told Commons: "We have sold a small consignment of gas masks to the Spanish government at their request. We sell them to anybody when we have any to spare."

Official sources explained 5,000 masks had been sold to Madrid in the last 24 hours but the Burgos Fascist regime had not requested any.

Masks Not Included.

Those sources also pointed out gas masks are not included in the international neo-Intervention agreement to isolate the Spanish civil war.

(Havas News Agency said Eleanor Rathbone, Independent M.P., queried Eden on reports in British newspapers that the Reich now has 50,-000 gas "respirators" for the civil population.

"Ready to start" exclaimed Eden in reply, but nothing required without making a verbal reply, Havas said).

The foreign secretary's declaration, in response to a question from the Labor benches, came as a complete surprise to the members. A labor member then asked whether the non-intervention agreement precluded sale by the British government of gas masks to the Socialist administration in Madrid.

No Knowledge of Gas Used.

Eden replied with the announcement of the mask sale and added: "Fortunately, I believe there has not been any gas used in this grossly uncivilized form in relation to prevent any private organization from

Would Try Russia at Bar Of League for Spreading Communist Propaganda

3 LABOR BODIES MEET

Trades And Labor Congress Deplores Tendencies And Dictatorship

Ottawa, Dec. 18 (CP)—A recommendation that Canada, as a member of the League of Nations, cause Soviet Russia to be tried at Geneva on the charge of disseminating Communistic propaganda through commercial channels was the feature of representations made today by leading Labor federations of Canada to the federal government.

Following is a summary of the recommendations made by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the All-Canadian Congress of Labor made identical recommendations for legislative action which they believed would improve the lot of the working class and make for better conditions in general.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and a large number of his cabinet colleagues heard the delegations in sequence, starting at 10:30.

Dictatorship Deplored.

The congress deplored tendencies toward dictatorship in some countries and urged that the government take steps to prevent any similar tendencies gaining ascendency in Canada.

Representations regarding unemployment were similar to those of last year with the exception that the estimate of unemployed was given as 1/11 of the population where it was 1/10 last year. Public works were again held out as a means of combatting unemployment.

Housing legislation was given prime but it was said the assistance necessary for a borrower to furnish from his own resources 20 per cent and the time for repayment on house improvement loans be increased.

Abolition of Camps Praised.

Abolition of the camps for single homeless men, established this year, won praise from the congress. However, it was contended that steps should be taken to prevent other evils arising, such as establishment of soup kitchens, the use of former single men on railway construction that should be carried out at regular wages and working conditions.

Immediate start on the drawing of future power development sites were urged as occupations for these men. Labor should be given preference, it was urged, a cash allowance system be adopted.

Unemployment, despite gratifying improvement in 1936, was still the most urgent national problem, the memorandum of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor said. No immediate work to be done. Raw materials are available, as was an abundance of labor. The problem was organization in which the government could "render the lead by view of the inability or unwillingness of individuals to do so.

RANKS MURRAY SECOND IN EMPIRE

C-B-C General Manager Called Next to Head of B.B.C.

(By Thomas T. Champion)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
London, Dec 18.—(CP Cable)—The name of Major Gladstone Murray, General Manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and a former official of the British Broadcasting Corporation, was mentioned in the House of Commons last night during debate on the B.B.C.

H. B. Lees-Smith, Postmaster-General in the last Labor Government, asked Major Gladstone Murray, next to Sir John Reith, Director-General of the B.B.C., was the most important broadcasting official in the British Empire.

Earlier in the House was based on the findings of an inquiry by a special board into the B.B.C. The inquiry was ordered by Prime Minister Baldwin after evidence had been given in the case of a slander action by Richard Stanton Lambert, editorial B.B.C. man, against Sir Cecil Levita, B.B.C. barrister. Sir Cecil contended that high personages in the B.B.C. had slandered the corporation's counsel from his action under threat of dismissal.

The slander action itself arose out of Lambert's belief in the existence of a Mahatma mongoose in the Isle of Man; Lambert wrote a book about it. Sir Cecil, formerly chairman of the London County Council, considered Lambert's behavior slanderous.

Lambert was awarded £7,500 damages.

The Board of Inquiry did not criticize the B.B.C. for the situation.

Lees-Smith, however, said the inquiry passed a severe criticism upon Major Murray and now in Canada. He said Major Murray offered to come over to London and give evidence as he could not leave in air days. The offer was declined. His offered to give evidence that he was not taken up, declared the former Postmaster-General, but the Corporation's counsel had his version of the reasons for steps he had taken but that was not asked for.

KICKED WINDOW OUT OF POLICE CAR

Owen Sound Youth Found Guilty of This Offence

Samuel Stewart, 20 year old Owen Sound youth, who was arrested in Belleville on a charge of intoxication on Wednesday evening and during which time he battled with the police and was alleged to have kicked a window out of the local police car, appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in today's local police court on two charges, one of intoxication and a second of the accidental destruction, or wilful destruction of property, to wit the breaking of a window glass in the Belleville Police Department, owing to the initial charge of intoxication and was sentenced to serve ten days in the common jail. He pleaded not guilty to the malicious charge of wilful destruction, however, was subsequently found guilty, and sentenced to one month in jail.

Constables Constable Fred Ward was the first witness called by Crown Attorney A. C. Donman, K.C. The officer told of answering a call to the corner of James and West Bridge Sts. on Wednesday evening. "Upon my arrival I found the accused man and another man and they were intoxicated. When I went to place them under arrest, Stewart put up a fight," he said. "I could not handle both the men at one time I got him on to the police patrol car and P. C. Arnott came to my assistance. We got Stewart in the car and he kicked out the right window with his foot," stated the witness.

"I didn't kick the window. I was shoved into the car and my elbow struck the window with the force of the push" interrupted Stewart. The accused man was instructed to hold the peace during such time as he could give his evidence. P. C. Arnott corroborated Constable Ward's statement adding that they had put Stewart into the police car and he jumped out the opposite door. "When we put him in the second time he deliberately kicked the window out," stated P. C. Arnott.

Stewart, in evidence, stated— "I didn't know this man was a policeman and he was in plain clothes. I put up a fight. I tell you they threw me in the car and I put my foot through the window breaking it." His Worship interrupted the accused at this point. "You knew Officer Arnott was a policeman, when he arrived in uniform but you continued to fight, didn't you?" asked His Worship.

"Yes sir," answered the accused. A sentence of one month in addition to the ten day sentence received for the drunk charge was imposed.

Magistrate Shows Christmas Spirit

A rather amusing incident happened in today's Belleville police court held before His Worship Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook. A transient, who said his name was Joseph Lynch, and resided in the Maritime Provinces, appeared charged with intoxication. The accused man walked briskly into the prisoners' dock and pleaded guilty. His Worship could pass sentence interrupted the proceedings.

"Your Honor, could you fix it so I could get out and be with my friends for Christmas? All you'd have to do is include the time I've already spent on remand and suspend the rest. I would be just dandy," pleaded Lynch.

Smilingly His Worship nodded his head and replied—"All right, we'll see you get out in time to spend Christmas at home, if you can make that. I'll sentence you to four days, that will let you out on Dec. 22nd and you can strike for the eastern provinces early that day and maybe be surprise your relatives on Christmas morning. Now that's that!" concluded His Worship.

"Just fine, thanks yer Honor," smilingly came back the reply as he walked out of the court room with a satisfied look upon his countenance.

2 BRIGHTON TWP. RESIDENTS HELD

Will Appear at Cobourg Charged With Theft of Grain

As they walked into a local seed store to dispose of over five bags of red clover seed grain, valued at $161.00, Provincial Constable Ross McBrien apprehended two brothers, who gave their names as Gordon Horsley, 22, and Kenneth Horsley, 17, Brighton Township, and were taken into custody, later being charged with the theft of 5½ bags of seed grain from F. E. McColl, Wooler. The Horsley brothers were given into the custody of Provincial Constable G. D. Campbell and later lodged in the County Jail at Cobourg awaiting their appearance.

Provincial Constable McBrien was investigating the report of the theft of a quantity of seed grain reported stolen on Thursday, by Mr. McColl. During the course of his investigations, Constable McBrien visited local seed stores in search of the names of persons who might have offered red clover seed grain for sale recently. As he was emerging from one local seed store the officer observed two men carrying a bag that resembled a grain bag into the store. Subsequent investigations revealed the grain to be red clover seed. Constable McBrien held the Horsley brothers for questioning. Constable Campbell subsequently laying the charge when he arrived in the city and was given the custody of the accused men.

Other reports of alleged theft of seed grain throughout the district are also being investigated by the Provincial Police.

U. S. TRANSIENT GIVEN 3 MONTHS

Three Bottles of Native Wine Found on His Person

"This just shows you how much these transients appreciate the good things of life," declared Chief Detective Joseph Lalonde, as he detailed how a transient in the city was brought to justice in police court this morning.

Late last evening Lalonde appeared at the police station seeking a night's lodging. Sergeant Boodle was on duty at the time and after he had talked closely to the man, in opinion he was intoxicated. The sergeant's theories resulted in Lalonde being searched with the astonishing result of finding three bottles of native wine secreted upon his person, one of which had been partially consumed.

When charged with the illegal possession of liquor today Chief Kidd commented upon the matter. "There is altogether too much panhandling going on in the city. There's an example, it just shows you what these men do with the money given to them, by hard-working citizens, for food. This is not the first case we have had with liquor in the possession of transients when arrested," Chief Kidd as he asked for the maximum sentence. The automatic sentence of three months was imposed, which goes with the default of payment of the fine levied under the L. C. A. for such charges.

Attractions of Winter Cruise Described

Cold, wintry weather was forgotten last evening by visitors at St. Andrew's Church Hall, when as Miss Hilda Heaton, noted travelogue speaker and directress of C.P.R. Steamship Tours, illustrated lecture on "The Golden Islands of the Caribbean." She pictured the beauty spots to be found there, and Miss Heaton in a gifted manner, described the scenes and told of the people one found there and of interesting incidents in visits to the Islands. The enchanting trip visited Martinique, Trinidad, Barbados, Jamaica, Curacao, Canal Zone, Jamaica, Cuba and the Bahamas.

Miss Heaton was introduced by Mr. J. W. Davison, C.P.R. agent and a vote of thanks to the speaker was extended on behalf of the Parish Guild which sponsored the program, and the audience by Miss J. A. McFee.

New Hula Doll Softens Men's Hard Hearts

"The fact that Christmas comes on Friday next year may have something to do with the slackness of the buying public up to present time", commented a department store manager this morning. "Last year the Christmas rush of business was done on the week-end before Christmas, but the reaction this year owing to the fact that the holidays come near the week-end, will likely take place the two days preceding Christmas. Our receipts are holding about even with those of a year ago with the exception of the slump in the grocery merchandise."

Another store manager stated that his business was well over the figures ago for this time of the year with a decided increase in the sale of toys. "The girls seem to lean more toward the mechanical toy rather than the usual dolls", he said. 40 YEAR BONDS RETIRED THURS.

Records Show Bonds Had Been Sold to London Stock Exchange

Belleville City bonds to the amount of $20,000 were presented for retirement on Thursday through the local branch of the Bank of Montreal in city treasurer Harry B. Stone. These bonds were the last 10% conversion bonds issued by the city, they having been retired by the city some years ago.

The records made upon these bonds show that they had been purchased by The Lee Association of Scotland, and sold by them to the London, Eng., stock exchange. These facts were interesting as they show that the City of Belleville was favorably accepted in the Old Country money market.

At the time these bonds were issued, Mr. J. E. Walmsley was Mayor of the city and his signature appears upon the documents. The members of the executive committee which passed upon the offers made for the debentures were as follows: Ald. Wills, chairman; Aldermen Palkner, Doyle, Harris, Lattimore, Johnson, Collins and Campion.

These bonds, which brought a price of par, were issued in order to replace bonds issued at 8 per cent. The saving obtained amounted to $2,000.00.

POLICE COURT

William Yale, Toronto truck driver, appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in today's local police court charged with causing an unnecessary noise and disturbing peaceful citizens by permitting the motor of his truck to run in an unnecessary upon Front Street. This second man pleaded guilty and was fined one dollar and costs. "All the police do is receive and answer complaints regarding truck drivers leaving the engine of their machines running and annoying residents on Front Street, I am going to make it common fine this time with the understanding that another and similar nature will be severely dealt with," explained Chief Kidd, Prosecuting Officer of the court this morning.

Leonard Chappelle, Huntingdon, appeared charged with assaulting Chief Constable Ward, which was being arrested on a charge of the possession of illicit liquor some time ago. Chappelle pleaded guilty as charged. Mr. J. D. Corcoran, barrister, appeared on behalf of the defendant and requested leniency. Chappelle has the family and also due to the fact Chappelle was already serving a jail sentence in connection with the illegal possession of illicit liquor charge. Crown Attorney, A. C. Donman, K.C. Crown Attorney, opposed the plea for leniency. As sentence at one month, added to the previous sentence of three months, was imposed by His Worship.

George Stapley, of this city, failed to appear in court this morning when arraigned on a charge of drunk. Bail in the sum of $5.00 was forfeited. Stapley is charged with the theft of $45.00 from his employers, the Belleville Metal and Supply Company. Stapley will remain in custody his trial on Saturday.

A case heard in the Juvenile Court this morning resulted in a 14 year old local youth appearing on a serious charge that implicated his father. The case in the matter was remanded, the boy being released in charge of Inspector T. D. Ruston of the Children's Aid Society.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 18.—(CP)—Synopsis—Pressure is high over Ontario and Quebec and is moderate elsewhere while the Eastern disturbance has passed over Newfoundland to the Atlantic. Strong winds and gales with rain or sleet and snow prevailed over the Maritime Provinces, the gulf of St. Lawrence and Newfoundland, but in nearly all other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair. It is considerably colder over Ontario and Quebec but continues mild in the Western Provinces.

Lake Superior—Fresh south and southwest winds, mostly cloudy and somewhat milder tonight and Saturday, a few snowy flurries.

Western Provinces—Mostly fair and mild today and Saturday.

Christmas Concerts

SALVATION ARMY

At the Citadel last evening the Salvation Army Sunday School held their annual Christmas concert which was attractively decorated for the occasion, and a good crowd was present and a well rendered and varied program was enjoyed.

Much credit is due to the teachers who carefully trained the children in their well-enacted numbers.

Great excitement was caused at the conclusion of the program when Santa Claus made his appearance in his usual jolly manner and distributed candies and apples to the children.

Mr. Fred Wardle acted as chairman and the program opened with singing of "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," Prayer was offered by Capt. W. Saunders and suitable Scripture portion was read. The program was as follows:

Recitation: "Welcome." George Elarby and Edward Brown.

Dialogue: "About Jesus. They Learned Something." June Wardle.

Recitation: "If Jesus Had Not Come." Mary Frost.

Dialogue: "Be Truthful But Courteous." Ivan Allen, Glover.

Euphonium Solo: Selected, Mr. Art Wynne.

Dialogue: "Radio Puzzles", Y. P. Legion.

Recitation: "A Farmyard Epic, Gerald Wardle.

Pantomime: "Away in a Manger" Mrs. George Wardle's Class.

Monologue: "Be the Best of Whatever You Are." Alan Glover.

Recitative Solo: Selected, Glenna Green.

Recitation: "Santa's Mistake," Gladys Hatfield.

Dialogue: "The Christian Clock," Six Boys and Six Girls.

Benediction.

On Monday evening a Christmas party was given at the Salvation Army Branch on Station Street. More than one hundred children with their parents were present. Games were played with neat and Christmas carols sung lustily.

"Sang Tray" Class rendered "Yuletide Joy" their teacher being Miss Hilda Reid. Music was supplied throughout the evening by Capt. Houlandre, guitar, Mr. Arnold, violin and Miss Hilda Reid, piano. Refreshments were prepared and served by Mrs. Wiltshire, Mrs. Mae Edmondson, Mrs. H. Reid, Mrs. Howard, Miss Hilda Collins and Mrs. R. W. Brown. After lunch was served Santa Claus appeared and distributed candy and apples.

The Singing of the Doxology and Benediction brought the pleasant social evening to a close. Much credit is due to Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Brown who arranged the proceedings.

HOLIDAYS NEAR

The last few days before Christmas are here. Those who buy and those who send parcels are now faced with the necessity of speed so that they may not disappoint those whom they intend to remember at the annual festival.

Gradually people are more and more finding it advantageous to do a great deal of their Christmas buying and shipping of parcels earlier than usual, a development which has proven a boon to merchants and their assistants.

The volume of Christmas buying should be higher this year. The Hon. David Croll, Minister of Highways, expects the improved condition of the economic situation will result in greater generosity and so he said the Department of Welfare lent moral though not material support to the scheme of higher relief at the holiday season. The easier flow of money which has been felt must no doubt make itself felt. This shows the urgency of sane early buying.

THE ORIENTAL SCENE

The Chinese scene the past few days has attracted world attention with Chiang Kai Shek, dictator and generalissimo, reported kidnapped, released, murdered, and now alive, and with the "Young Marshal" Chang, reported captor, and said to have broadcast the news of the killing of Kai Shek and other leaders, and latterly to have fled by plane from the city of Sian-Fu. With the difference in time in the Orient and the Western World and with the conditions in that land, which are so different from the situation in the West, such divergence of reports is to be expected. How long before the truth comes out is hard to guess.

China is passing through a momentous stage and Japan realizes the situation which is developing. The Orient is awakening. Chiang Kai Shek is credited with being one of the outstanding figures in the world, his task being no less than the unification of China. He is in control of the army and directs the foreign policy, domestic arrangements and every department of the Nanking Government.

Chang, the "Young Marshal" is a big figure too. He was governor in command of Manchuria in 1931, when Japan took Mukden. It has been charged that Chang is favorable to Japan. On the demand of Nanking that there be war with Japan, that it get back Manchuria and recognize communism. The present situation with civil war would be a factor favorable to Japan, which has been credited with statements of the need of protecting her interests and opposing the Communistic situation.

What the outcome will be is impossible to know. Nanking authorities have been reported as saying that the outlook for the end of the civil strife seems bright. Even if it does, the situation in the Orient will likely continue such that the world will be uneasy while China is comparatively weak and Japan is goaded by imperialism.

SECURITY IN NEW WORLD

How the Monroe Doctrine which has hitherto meant to the United States protection of Latin-American Republics from European invasion and to those republics only intervention, will be converted as a result of the Inter-American Conference at Buenos Aires, for the Maintenance of Peace from a mere international declaration to a settled treaty-sustained policy of collective security for peace by formal and assured ratification at the next plenary session of the delegates, is told by the Montreal Gazette. The Gazette goes on:

"The significance of the measure, which marks a momentous development in inter-American relations, is that it binds the nations who are parties to it to consult together for common defence should any one of three conditions arise. These conditions are, first, war between any two American countries; second, war between any American country and any other country; and, third, a war anywhere in the world that might threaten the peace of the Americas. It is further noteworthy that the conference approved a recommendation that the treaties and conventions adopted "shall be open to other American states" the obvious purpose being to enable Canada to adhere to Pan-American pacts if and when she may wish to do so. The delegates at the conference were a unit in discarding proposals that had been mooted for an American League of Nations on lines something like those which the late Woodrow Wilson, former President of the United States, induced Europe to adopt after the World War, only to have his plans repudiated, and United States' membership in the League rejected by his countrymen because of aversion to the possibility of the country becoming involved in foreign affairs. But the Buenos Aires conference nevertheless has made a very appreciable contribution to international understanding by translating President Roosevelt's theory of a Good Neighbor policy into a concrete fact, to set Europe, constantly terrified by the spectre of warfare, a fine example in the matter of mutual protection and collective security against war. The main outcome of the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace will constitute a great triumph for President Franklin Roosevelt's leadership."

DEVOTION

"Did I possess the sun and all the stars,
I'd give them then to you, nor ever cease
Myself the cheapness of the gift to chide."
This mystery is writ along the march
Of Time, since first was feeling born in man
To sense the surge and sob of Nature's tides,
And long to merge himself in conscious plan
With the vast music of eternal change,
The power that launched the might of Greece to sea
Was moulded in the contour of a face
By forces which would give to mortal man
This solace, in the face of imminent death.

"POLICING THE ARCTIC" a Story of the Conquest of the Arctic by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, is another worthwhile chronicle of some of the most interesting and romantic phases of the building of Canada. It is noteworthy that this chronicle of the daring and empire-extending deeds of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police should be written by Harwood Steele, M.C., F.R.G.S., Historian of the Canadian Government Arctic Exploration of 1926. Harwood Steele is the son of the late Major General Sir Samuel Steele, M.C., a well known O.C. of the famous "Riders of the Plains", who rose from the rank of constable in the Northwest Mounted Police to the position of commanding officer, and whose volume of reminiscences of Forty Years In Canada when he grew up with this splendid force and afterwards made history and won glory for Canada and himself in the South African War and after—a worthy forerunner to this chronicle of supermen-courageous written by his son. The conquest of the Arctic by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is a record of heroism and unselfishness unparalleled in the history of the world. Underpaid, facing starvation, and death in its most harrowing forms the spirit and corps of this great organization carried it through seemingly impossible hazards triumphantly. The narrative begins with the story of the Yukon and how The Force established order out of chaos and made the Canadian Yukon too hot for bad characters and forced upon them the conviction that crime did no pay even in the far north where thieves and murderers looked for such a sweet harvest. Just across the border in the United States hinterland at Skagway "Soapy" Smith, underworld king, with his gang of cut-throats imposed his will upon that community and took toll of everything and everybody passing that way until shot down in the street and his band hunted and killed by an outraged citizenry. From the taming of the Yukon The Force turned its attention to making the lands on the Arctic Circle and beyond safe for white men and Eskimos and Indians, so detachments and police stations were established all across the frozen north and The Law brought to The Lawless. Many lonely outposts were maintained and the dignity of The Force and the power of The Flag by its constantly in the fore even though the expected patrol or supply boat failed to make an appearance for weeks or months after being due. Herschel Island, on the top rim of the world, where a Belleville lad who rose from constable in the ranks to Inspector Colonel, reigned and made splendid Canadian history by courage, kindness and honesty to win the respect of Arctic traders, whaler, Eskimo and Indian alike is an interesting chapter. Many tales of individual heroism, suffering and death illumine this narrative of the Far North, and the almost unbelievable Odyssey of the lads who served Canada in the Yukon for a daily stipend of $1.25 and up—but not up very far, despite all the temptations which a get-rich-quick mining camp can furnish. This interesting and instructive volume has been secured for the Corby Public Library.

EDWARD MAY REPLY TO ARCHBISHOP'S ATTACK

Under fire in the British House of Commons for a radio attack broadcast by the government-controlled British Broadcasting Corporation, in which he attacked former King Edward and his circle of friends is His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang (LEFT). He further embarrassed the government with a speech in the House of Lords, decrying "gramaphone" speeches in a debate over conditions in the depressed areas. The former King may reply to His Grace it's a later date, and in the meantime it is said he has asked King George to halt further attacks that cannot be answered. The strike affected 4,300 workers in Toledo, Shreveport, La., and Charleston, W. Va.

TWO STORES IN BLYTH BURNED

Nine Persons Occupying Rooms Above Forced to Vacate

Blyth, Ont., Dec. 19 (CP)—A $10,000-fire that destroyed two stores and their contents was brought under control early today in this village 60 miles north of London. Nine persons who occupied rooms over the two stores were forced out into the street. None was injured.

The fire was believed to have originated in the basement of J. C. Munro's hardware store. It spread to a shoe store owned by W. J. Thompson and for a time threatened three other stores in the same block. A brick wall between the hardware store and a bakeshop was believed responsible in keeping the flames in check.

For more than two hours a volunteer fire brigade poured water through four hoselines on the flames before the progress of the fire was checked.

Mr. and Mrs. Munro and their three children who lived above the hardware store were compelled to leave their homes. Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Tatman and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Wallis abandoned their rooms over the shoe shop.

A strayn brown rooster was wandering on Front Street last evening when the eagle eye of Police Constable Ellis saw it and a brief but exciting chase the bird was made a prisoner. We desired to have the quietude, which pervades the police station disturbed by the crowing of the rooster assembly room, the officer stepped into fowl in safe keeping with an uptown merchant where it is feeling quite at home.

In its issue of Nov. 30th, 1918, "Canada", an English publication, makes the following reference to Major Roscoe Vanderwater of Sidney Township: "For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded the attacking party with great determination and held and consolidated the captured trench. He personally supervised the digging of the new communication trench. Set. On other occasions he has done fine work. As a reward of Major Vanderwater's bravery, as above recorded, he received the Distinguished Service Order.

The local lodge of the A. O. U. W. has offered a handsome cup for competition between the city hockey teams.

At a meeting of the city council Ald. Knox asked if the snow bylaw was to be enforced this year. In the case of vacant property would the city clear off the snow on the sidewalks and charge the cost to taxes? Ald. Peters said that the Public Works Committee would not clear the snow from the sidewalks along vacant property until a new arrangement was made. In the past, he said, it had been understood that the Public Work Committee would remove the snow and be reimbursed when the taxes were collected. A lot of snow had been removed on this understanding and a lot of money spent, but not one cent of the taxes collected had ever been credited to the Public Works committee. Ald. Knox insisted that something be done in this connection, but the matter was dropped.

SENATOR R. WHITE

His death reduces Conservative representation in the Senate to 61 as against 31 Liberals, leaving four vacancies.

Senator White, born in Hamilton, Ont., had been with the Gazette since his first year out of school and had been its President and Managing Director since 1910. The newspaper came to him as a heritage from his father, Richard White, and his uncle Thomas, who bought the paper, 1823 years old then, in 1870 and set it on its feet.

Great Interest in Paper

Richard Smeaton White was a man of many facets, political, financial, educational, philanthropic, social. Yet more than any of these, one great interest impelled him through life; an attachment for the Montreal Gazette, that never weakened through the half-century and more, that passed since he joined it a boy a week out of school.

At the age of 22, in 1889, he was a director of the paper. One year later he was its assistant Manager under his father. And from 1901 on, it was under his hand that the Gazette expanded steadily to its present-day proportions.

His fame naturally lay in Interest. When young Richard Smeaton White came to the paper his father, Richard, was its business manager, and his uncle, Thomas, was its editor. The brothers, natives of Montreal, had bought the paper in 1870, coming back from Hamilton, where they had owned the Spectator.

The son, joining the paper at the age of 19, gravitated to the business department under his father. Soon he was showing qualities of his own that marked him for control upon his father's death. By 1901, he was manager; in 1910 he was made Vice-President and Managing Director; and, on Thomas White's death in that year, he became President. He was destined to fill that position 26 years.

Paper Grows Apace

His management saw the paper grow apace. Forty-year-old quarters were abandoned in 1907 for a new home. Again on a 1925 Saturday night, the Gazette moved, and Sunday nights staff could walk the street as though nothing had happened.

Senator White was appointed to the red chamber by Sir Robert Borden on the death in 1917 of Senator Owens, who represented Edna and Inkerman. During the war years, he had been a member of the Military Hospitals Commission, a new body supervising hospitals housing returned soldiers and drawing up for their future administration. He served with the commission until its functions were merged with those of a permanent government department.

In the Senate he sat for many years on the Banking and Commerce Committee and on the Railways and Canals Committee. For a long time also, he was chairman of the joint committee of House and Senate on printing.

In 1913, Prime Minister Borden made him as a member of the Royal Commission on industrial relations which travelled the Dominion visiting industrial areas for three months, Senator White tyfed a minority report.

In the business realm, the Senator, especially in later years, sat on the board of many companies. He was a director of the Steel Company of Canada, the Montreal Trust Company, the Canada Steamship Lines, the Dominion Engineering Works, the Guarantee Company of North America, and the Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills of Quebec.

Supporter of Hospitals

He was, besides, a strong supporter of hospitals in Montreal, and he was a governor of three. He kept up his interest in education also, and he regularly attended meetings as a governor of McGill University's College at Lennoxville, Que., his Alma Mater, received him as a freshman in 1877, and in 1932, the college conferred upon him a doctorate in Civil Law, Honoris Causa.

Two years later, another honor came upon the President, of France, made him an officer of the Legion D'Honneur. As a member of the Franco-Canadian Society, he had done much toward cementing relations between the two great linguistic divisions of Quebec.

Richard Smeaton White was born March 17, 1865, at Hamilton, Ont., his parents Richard and Jean (Riddell) White. Five years later, his family moved to Montreal, and he was educated at Montreal High School and at Bishop's College School in Lennoxville, Que.

Later, much of his political ardigacity and business acumen were to be directed toward advancing the interests of his adopted province. As a Senator, he brought fellow Red Chamber members to Quebec to see the Province first-hand for a better understanding of its problems and its industries. He brought the Quebec viewpoint forward in his contracts with them.

Senator White felt public men should have a better knowledge of their own country, and it was his belief sectional conflict could be spanned if those responsible for dealing with such problems knew their country.

Strictly Non-Partisan

Ideas along this line, and in other directions of Government, he usually advanced in personal meeting rather than from the floor of the Senate. The Red Chamber heard him speak infrequently, only when he felt the importance of a topic demanded debate. When he did speak, his business experience and training enabled him to discuss with authority such subjects as commerce, banking, railways and labor.

He was a firm believer that the Senate should function, on a strictly non-partisan basis, as a reviewing body where measures could be considered with detachment. So strongly did he feel on the point that for years he did not attend a caucus of the Conservative party. Senators, he felt, should be above party on public questions.

In the newspaper field the Senator's activity concerned itself perhaps more with the business than with the editorial side of his newspaper. Nevertheless, the Gazette's editorial page reflected his vigorous interest in Canada and particularly his strong stand for economy and incorruptibility in the country's government. In this field, too he played a considerable part in developing Canada's present system of collective news-gathering and distributing.

He belonged, during sterling the globe several times, and he was a member of the Canadian Travellers' Club of New York. In 1925, after a trip to South America, he wrote a book entitled "Notes by the Way", which he distributed among his friends.

Senator White was an Anglican in faith, and a lifelong member of St. George's Church in Montreal.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. C. J. Hodgson and Mrs. C. A. Peters, a sister-in-law, Mrs. R. H. White, and two brothers-in-law, C. J. Hodgson and Dr. C. A. Peters, all in Montreal.

GAVEL STARTS ON NEW JOURNEY

Been in Forty-two Lodges in The Last Five Years

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 18.—(CP)—An "Ambassador of Goodwill" in the form of a valiant gavel, with a silk cushion ended a five-year cycle of travel and started out on a new journey at the Oddfellows Hall, here last night.

N. J. "Mac" Lockhart of St. Catharines, M.P., for Lincoln, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, Past Grand Representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge and present Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of Ontario was the Central figure in the impressive ceremony witnessed by several hundred Oddfellows.

Five years ago, Mr. Lockhart presented the gavel to Harold E. Wass, then District Deputy Grand Master of the Windsor District, with instructions it should pass from Lodge to Lodge as a symbol of goodwill. In the ruling 42 lodges in Western Ontario, the Niagara Peninsula and Northern New York State, the gavel was last night returned by Mr. Wass to Mr. Lockhart.

But the gavel did not rest with Mr. Lockhart. He immediately presented it to Elmer J. Rose, District Deputy Grand Master of the Windsor District, who said it would start on another cycle of travel among lodges scattered throughout the country.

Return of the gavel to Mr. Lockhart was preceded by its presentation to Mr. Wass by L. H. Fisher, Noble Grand of Chatham Lodge No. 39, last of the 42 lodges to have it in its possession during the past five years.

Champion Liar Tells of Buck That Grew Old

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 18. —(CP)—Embarrassing honors were thrust last night on Clarence Moore of Algoma contest which featured a "buck dinner" providing a somewhat belated finale for the big game hunting season in Algoma.

Clarence told of the lone shot that downed a beast he and a companion made out, with the aid of binoculars, to be a Spadonian buck dozing in the Mississauga country. By the time they reached the lucky wounded quarry, however, it had developed into a splendid six-point buck.

Elmer Hosey, President of the Sault Ste. Marie Canada Club, could not do better than second place.

Forty years ago he was duck hunting on Lake Couchiching with some of his grandsons and he lost his powder horn overboard. A kindly Indian offered to dive for it. He was down five minutes and Elmer began to wonder. Ten minutes and Elmer was worried. Fifteen minutes and Elmer began to be suspicious. He dived down himself. Sure enough, the Indian was dumping Elmer's powder into his own horn.

CRACK NANKIN TROOPS MARCHING TO RES CUE CHIANG

Confident that Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, Nanking government premier, is still alive or determined to reverse him if he is dead, these troops of the 19th Route army—the army which made such a gallant stand against Japan at Chapei some years ago—are attacking Marshal Chiang Hsueh-Liang's strongholds of Sian-Fu, where Shek and his fellow prisoners are held. The Nanking government has ordered an imperial army into the field to smash the rebellious Chang (LOWER RIGHT). Chiang Kai-Shek (UPPER LEFT) had king been his efforts to unify ing China and building up a formidable army and air force and his crack troops are now fighting against Chang's communistic forces in China's new civil war. MEMBERS TAKEN ON TRAVEL CRUISE

Miss Hesson of C.P.R. Travel Bureau Gives Fine Lecture

Personalities which leave vivid impressions on even casual acquaintances were given members and guests of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E., yesterday afternoon. As world traveller, cruise director, and ship's hostess, Miss Hesson's adventures have taken her into many far off places. She has the happy faculty of picturing clearly the people and scenes in which she was most interested.

Her talk yesterday was not, as she explained after her introduction by Mrs. R. A. Green, regent of the chapter, on famous people. Rather people were often very dull. She would give an informal talk about "interesting" people.

And interesting they were. There was Odile Hesson herself, the daughter of a Scottish family that was in the Governor-General's medal and the honor of driving in a carriage with Lady Aberdeen.

"And what are you going to do with the medal when you receive it?" asked the distinguished personage of her frightened little companion. "I think of nothing else to answer but simply: 'Keep it.'"

At the time Lady Aberdeen and her party were entertained at home by Miss Hesson's servants. The young daughter of the house donned the maid's apron and cap and served as waitress, then in a charming frock met the guests in a drawing room. She is now Kathleen Bowker, London correspondent "Maclean's."

Captain Henry Munn, soldier and explorer who kept the spirit of adventure all through his life; Dr. Haldane, renowned scientist of Oxford University who had merited almost every honor the British Empire could bestow and whose researches in poison gas proved and saved airmen and troops; Lady Haldane, then in a charming frock met the guests in a drawing room. She is now Kathleen Bowker, London correspondent "Maclean's."

Tea at Kensington

Miss Hesson had tea on one occasion at Kensington Palace, the guest of honor the lady of eighty, Hon. Harriet Philipps, who for forty years was Lady in Waiting and friend of the Reichsamber to Queen Victoria. Her room was filled with treasures of royal friends. For photographs of royal friends. For Queen Victoria she cherished in her memory. The picture of a marvellous and charming woman whom had been the greatest pleasure to serve.

The Hon. Mrs. Moncrieff, a Scottish woman, for whose home birds winged their way, so instinctively did they find those who loved them, the American wife of Mr. Findlay Muir, whose love of cats was the talk of London, the gardener in the greenhouse in flower pots, as the colder climate made its appearance, outside as possible, were others in Miss Hesson's gallery of interesting people. At the Findlay's old Georgian house, Miss Hesson heard many ghost stories.

"Our house isn't haunted", her hostess explained "at least, not yet. They are tearing down a house down the road, which has three ghosts. Maybe they'll be looking for a home."

Among memorable cruise acquaintances was the woman whose aim it was to travel one million miles before she died. She was then 72 and had covered 750,000 miles.

She had not the slightest admiration for the wonderful scenery about her. Her only interest was in individuals.

Perhaps the most thrilling experience that Miss Hesson had was the pleasure of attending in 1935 the last garden party of King George and Queen Mary. The radiant personality of the King and the more than magnificent dress of the Queen made an unforgettable impression.

"That's just a little corner of my shelf of interesting people met in my wanderings" concluding Miss Hesson. "But you don't have to travel to meet interesting people. They're all about you if you seek them out."

Mrs. Geen expressed the keen appreciation of those present.

At the session of next month Miss Hesson ten was to be taken by Chapter members.

Antioch, Calif., Dec. 18 (CP)—William Schmidt went bear hunting on the San Joaquin River Whambel he snagged a big one.

As he was lifting it into a boat, the bear, like Uncle Remus, without another strike. Collapsed and disgusted Schmidt hauled in the another. There was his big bear on the broken line, married with the another rope.

WOMAN, WORKER GUILTY OF MURDER

Mrs. C. M. Fogmore And Emmanuel Ernst to Hang For 'Window Slaying'

Ned Dear, Alta., Dec. 12—(CP)—Mrs. Christian Maud Fogmore, 38, and Emmanuel Ernst, 36, were under sentence of death today for the "window slaying" of the woman's husband, George Fogmore, at their farm home last October 31.

Ernst, formerly employed on the Fogmore farm in the Byemoor District 130 miles southeast of Edmonton, was convicted of murder by an Alberta Supreme Court jury last Saturday and was sentenced by Mr. Justice A. F. Ewing to be hanged March 3.

Mrs. Fogmore was convicted last night of "murder by counselling" by a jury which added a recommendation for mercy. Mr. Justice A. F. Ewing also sentenced her to hang March 3.

Fogmore was shot through a window of his home while he sat playing cards at night with three other men.

At the woman's trial, Ernst testified he shot and killed Fogmore after an agreement with Mrs. Fogmore to commit the offence.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw—The annual banquet of St. Mark's Sunday School was held in the S.S. Room on Wednesday evening of this week about ninety persons sitting down to tables tastefully groaning under the abundance of good things.

Among those at the head table were Canon W. D. Swayne, teacher of the Adult Bible class, Mrs. W. G. Swayne, teacher Boys' Bible Class, Mrs. W. J. Barlow, teacher Senior Class, Mr. W. J. Barlow, People's Warden, Mr. J. F. Baker, G.S. Supt. and Rector's Warden, Mrs. J. F. Baker, Mrs. Jasel Baker, Asst. Teacher Bible Class, Mr. Jasel Baker, Miss Iva Brown, Teacher Primary Class and Supt. Little Helpers, Mrs. T. H. Frost and Mrs. Rook, Pulsby.

At the close of the meal, Canon Swayne acting as chairman in his usual efficient style, called upon the various officers and teachers for short addresses. Messrs. W. J. Barlow and J. F. Baker responded. Mr. Barlow stressing the importance of attending the vestry meetings of the church and Mr. Baker urging the adults to put forth greater effort to attend Sunday School. During her address Mrs. W. G. Swayne presented to the scholars of her class who attended the church services most regularly during the year, Master Kennard Baker, a beautiful book, and Mrs. W. J. Barlow announced the winner of the prize in her class as Mr. Clyde Eastwood who had attended every Sunday School session except two.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games, etc., and all report a splendid time.

MORE TO IT THAN MEETS THE EYE

Some Do's and Don't for Those Who are "From Missouri"!

The ease and comfort with which a pair of glasses rides the wearer's nose does not only on the kind of frame or mounting but also very largely upon proper adjustment. There is a special knack in bending and adjusting frames to fit each individual nose that is only mastered by years of practical frame fitting and a thorough knowledge of facial contour. There are no two faces alike.

You can have exactly the right kind of frames and nose guards to insure absolute security and comfort and each pair of glasses can be made to fit each individual nose and also harmonize pleasingly with the wearer's features and personality.

It is unreasonable to expect to get a satisfactory pair of glasses just by buying two lenses and a metal frame. No two eyes are exactly alike, yet both lenses in all "stock" glasses are identically the same. The first thing to do to insure getting satisfactory glasses is to have a scientific eye examination at Mc-Gillivray Optical Ltd., 288 Front Street, Belleville, who will take all the time that is required to make such examination thorough one, and it is this thoroughness that has been a key factor in the success of their work. ...

EDWARD POSES FOR NEWSMEN

Appears At Villa Hatless And in a Serious Mood

Fenestella, Austria, Dec. 18. — (AP)—The Duke of Windsor terminated his voluntary seclusion today to pose for a battery of photographers on the grounds of Baron Eugene de Rothschild's Austrian Castle.

Hatless and in a serious mood, the former British King walked alone to the courtyard where 17 camera men awaited him. He appeared fatigued.

"Gentlemen, how do you want me?" he greeted the photographers. "Shall I sit or stand?"

A flood of replies and subsequent questions followed his remarks as the business of snapping pictures of the abdicated sovereign began.

Three minutes later the photographers, clutching their plates began a 800-yard sprint to automobiles and motorcycles to carry them the 20 miles to Vienna.

The Duke replied to only one direct statement made by a British photographer who said:

Wished Them Luck

"We wish your Highness every happiness."

"I wish you luck also," Edward responded.

The activities of the former King were not disclosed prior to his appearance before the cameramen.

Other news direct from the Austrian source with the villagers learning only the Duke had declined with thanks a little present him by a local Fenstella admirer.

He opened the box containing the animal, a terrier, looked at it and then was said to have returned the gift with a polite nose which said "I have enough trouble with the dog I've got."

His reference was to his Cairn terrier "Slippers", reported the day before to have had an entirely discourteous spat with the dog of his master's host, a beast named "Chew Chew".

"Chew Chew" the villagers said bit the blame out of "Slippers".

He announced a sub-committee would convene a day earlier to prepare agenda for the general session.

SAMPLES OF ORES

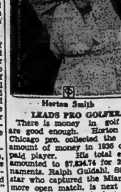
Willis Amyot, registrar under the Quebec Securities Frauds Prevention Act, said at Quebec last night his department would take "whatever action is deemed necessary," on receiving Campbell's report.

"Since with one exception the highest assay received by my check of the sampling was .01 ounce or $0.35 per ton," Campbell said, "I have come to the conclusion that the reported assay results of holes No. 15 and 18 should be disregarded entirely. Further I have no hesitation in saying that forward material containing free gold was placed in the four samples of hole 18 which I inspected in Montreal."



The report said records showed drilling of hole 18 was completed Oct. 13 "and samples not shipped until Oct. 16." The report added the assay showed these samples "were not received until Oct. 19 in Montreal."

Campbell's Finding

Discussing in detail assaying of holes 15 to 18, the report said samples one, two, three and four were found on examination to contain "a much larger amount of small chips and 'fines' than is usual in split core" and it was found "these 'fine particles' contained several pieces of free gold, some of which were contained in clear colored quartz, which did not appear to be similar to any of the larger pieces of the core."

Campbell said G. W. Bell, a member of his staff formed an opinion, with which he agreed, "that the 'fines' and free gold were not portions of the core as drilled and were added at some history time."

The investogator added he had

"Not the slightest hesitation" in saying he believed officials, directors and promoters of Rubec Mines knew nothing of the "condition" his report showed.

Campbell said he did not wish the report to be construed as a report of the property and all its features. Campbell said he made a further check of drilling and would make a further report in a few days. While not wishing to raise false hopes, he said, he found in further examinations of the other drilling "some favorable geological conditions."

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Oregon Trail"

In a picture filled with romance, color and action, John Wayne rides across the screen of the Capitol Theatre for one day Saturday only in "The Oregon Trail," fourth of his sensational series of historical epics.

The new Republic photoplay is marked by excellent performances on the part of all of its principal players.

The story concerns a young army captain who pales leave of absence to search for his father, last with his entire command in one of the trackless western passes. He uncovers a scheme conceived by a renegade army major, who plans to take possession of the outlying California settlements and form a great new empire.

In breaking up the plot, Wayne finds himself in situations fraught with danger, and encounters romance in pretty Ann Rutherford, who gives a distinctive performance in her role of a pioneer daughter.

Added Sheric

A Sheemp Howard comedy, "Beach of a Pair," a new musical comedy sensation, "Dublin in Brazil", a Vanderville variety short, "We Do Our Part" and also the Capitol News Events.

Astoria Nite

Tonight is the night when the Capitol presents something that is different to Belleville. Everybody is welcome to come and enjoy the fun on our stage at 9 o'clock, "Auction Nite" when the auctioneer buys from the audience for cash any articles that he desires. He may ask for anything, so befor he begins to. He may ask for anything from a peanut to an elephant, and if you have the articles he will pay cash, with no lucky tickets or lotteries. Tonight at 9 o'clock.

AT THE BELLE

"Wildest Orders"

The rugged, mountainous country of the Northwest forms the setting of "Without Orders", RKO Radio's exciting romance of commercial aviation.

The producers have packed plenty of thrills and a notable amount of heart interest into the screen version of this Peter B. Kyne story and a finely chosen cast and excellent direction combine to make the picture an outstanding offering.

The plot centres around the professional rivalry of two transport flyers and their personal rivalry over a pretty air hostess. One of the pilots, the son of the owner of the line, comes to work for the company after a sensational career as a stunt flyer, but his unfitness to handle a big transport plane is evident to everyone but his doting father. The flyer's reckless endangers the lives of his passengers by his foolhardiness and cowardice.

Add a clean-limbed romance, and a gripping climax when a plane is lost in a storm over the Idaho mountains and the reckless pilot deserts his post, afford absorbing moments to filmgoers.

Robert Armstrong and Sally Eilers in the romantic roles of an experienced pilot and his stewardess, turn in finely characterized portrayals, while Lyle Talbot as the pilot.

Vivian Haworth, a newcomer to pictures from the radio field, gives an excellent performance as the ex-stunt flyer, and the various supporting roles are uniformly well-played, while Charley Grapewin, Frances Sage, Arthur Loft and Ward Bond being outstanding.

"Adventure in Manhattan"

The mantle of the screen's premier comedienne has fallen gracefully on the shoulders of Jean Arthur, whose delightful new gay comedy romance entitled "Adventure in Manhattan" with Joel McCrea as her newest swain. This new special feature comedy is announced at the Belleville theatre attraction on the same program.

Miss Arthur has been accepted as an outstanding screen favorite as a result of the fine performances with Gary Cooper in "Mr. Deeds" and with William Powell in "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford." Joel McCrea is still taking bows for his distinguished portrayal in "Three Three." In addition to these two stars, the cast of "Adventure in Manhattan" includes Stanley Ridges, Reginald Owen, Herman Bing, the famed stage star Thomas Mitchell and Victor Killian, John Gallaudet and George Cooper in lesser roles.

Gally spiced with romantic comedy and farcical melodrama, "Adventure in Manhattan" provides the amusing adventures that come to a successful writer of mystery stories when he enters the newspaper field and there disrupts all known traditions by successfully predicting a series of involved robberies long before they are committed.

Joan Arthurs appears as a Broadway actress, who in the course of her engaging romance with MacCrea, brings him all manner of woes in his crime detection efforts. Reginald Owen is seen as the polished, continental criminal genius who hides behind the mask of a theatrical producer in order to commit the intricate thefts without suspicion.

The Belle Late World News will be exhibited on the same program. Clyde Beatty in "Darkest Africa" will be shown at Saturday matinee.

POPE IS ORDERED COMPLETE REST

Physicians Advise Pontiff To Rest if He Would Recover

Vatican City, Dec. 18 (AP)—Attending physicians prescribed complete rest today for Pope Pius XI if he would recover quickly from a serious attack which he did not wish the report to be construed as a report of the property and all its features. Campbell said he made a further check of drilling and would make a further report in a few days. While not wishing to raise false hopes, he said, he found in further examinations of the other drilling "some favorable geological conditions."

The pain in his legs caused by swollen blood vessels continued despite frequent applications.

NOMINATED TO MEET WASHINGTON IN THE ROSE BOWL GAME AT PAS ADENA

Surprise of the Rose Bowl selections for the year was choice of the Pitt Panthers, who meet University of Washington Huskies in the annual grid classic at Pasadena on New Year's day. Washington captured the Pacific coast title, losing only to Minnesota on the season's play, while Pitt dropped a game to Duquesne and was tied by Fordham. Here is the Pittsburg line that does are: Hoffman, Daniels, Delle, Tvens, Adams, Glassford, Matisi and Daddio.

Injury-Weakened Leafs Win From Amerks 5-1 and Move to Within 2 Points of 2nd Place

Harvey "Busher" Jackson Scored Two Goals by Himself

BRUINS WIN

Shutout Maroons 5-0 With Shave Being Quite Costly

By A. E. FULFORD

There was a widespread desire today among hockey followers to take Toronto Maple Leafs apart and see what makes them tick so queerly. The injury-weakened works are speeding up instead of slowing down. It has the experts puzzled.

Leafs have been losing games so consistently there was little doubt in anyone's mind when Conn Smythe's ace was ordered out of the game for five weeks they would keep on losing, perhaps more consistently.

Instead they sailed into New York Americans at Madison Square Garden last night and handed them the worst whipping Red Dutton's lads has absorbed this season. Without the injured Conacher and Speedboil Foster with a broken arm, their attacks should have been disorganized. They were enough for them to win 5-1.

Leafs' gorgeous win brought them within two points of Americans and Montreal Maroons, tied for second spot in the National League's Canadian division. Weakened even more than Leafs by injuries, Maroons dropped a game to the Boston Bruins in Montreal last night by 5-0. The win brought Bruins within half a game of Detroit and New York Rangers at the top of the United States section.

Flaw Work By Rookies.

Flaw work by the rookies and a real inclination from Harvey Jackson that he is returning to his form of two seasons ago were far to explain the out-sided win over Amerks. The New Yorkers had little success telling off penalties and Leafs scored three goals while they had a man advantage. Boston did the same thing against Amerks Tuesday.

Jackson got the first of Leafs' goals and assisted in another. Rookies Syl Apps and Gordon Pettinen each scored a goal, Nick Metz added another and Rookie Jim Fowler assisted on two of the markers. Logan Carr tallied the American scoop in the second period when Happy Day was on the penalty bench.

Maroons went into the game at Montreal without Carl Voss, Marvin Wentworth, or Russ Blinco. Blinco played a hard-hitting game but the Boston advantage was so evident Maroons had little chance.

Cooney Weiland and Leroy Goldsworthy combined for goals in the first and second periods and Eddie Shore, Bill Hollett and Charlie Sands ran up the Boston total in the third.

Ray Impellitiere Favored Over Pastor

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—Seeking two rewards of doubtful value, big Ray Impellitiere of Cold Spring, N.Y., and Bob Pastor, former New York University heavyweight, meet in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight.

The winner will be acclaimed New York State heavyweight champion—and there's very little competition for that title. He also may be in line for a bout with Joe Louis, which still is uncertain.

Otherwise it's just a fight between two young heavyweights—the best on hand in New York right now—and not likely to prove much, if anything. "The ring" with the advantage of some eight inches in height and 60 pounds in weight, is a 7-5 favorite.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Dizzy Dean hasn't popped off in a week now and St. Louis Cards are worried. They fear the calm before the storm. . . . Trust little Rabbit Maranville to rise to the occasion. Called on for a speech at a Montreal baseball meeting, the Rabbit delivered in French. . . . Arthur Donovan, the New York Referee, got $500 plus expenses less than two minutes' work in the Louis-Simms fight. . . . St. Louis Flyers who operate in the American Hockey Association won their 13th game of an unbeaten season on the 13th day of the month. . . . Eddie Gottlieb, ace, Penn, will be ordained an Episcopal minister at Hays, Kas., Sunday.

When the Brooklyn Football Dodgers shellacked St. Louis Terriers 100-0, the Oklahoma (City Oklahoman captioned the story: "And please don't ask us who pitched".

Judge Landis is looking for a farm in Kentucky, away from the Fellers and such. . . . Jack Conway, baseball man, drives an auto with a sine fish tank in the rumble seat. . . . One reason the Schmeling-Braddock fight will not go to Berlin is because Hitler objects to extra hours later. He swung those clubs for 585,000 revolutions, made 122 revolutions per minute for three continuous days and the eight extra hours. What some people will do for a thrill. Of course we cannot say as to how long Mr. Franks slept after his feat, but he says it was good exercise at any rate.

When the O.H.A. held its annual meeting recently the whole present day set-up came up for the prevailing professional playing rules. Just what the new playing rules constitute in their relationship to last years' amateur rules has not been fully explained as yet, but will likely be included in the annual referees' and coaches' instruction booklet that should be released in the near future. Many of the questions pertaining to a possible 'penalty-shot, off-side rules and also permitting of body checking in the centre-ice zone. Reports from the annual meeting were far from clear and left some doubt in the minds of hockey-interested persons in the outside centres. It is to be hoped these uncertainties will be fully cleared up before the season opens.

The board of judges who will award the Lou E. Marsh Memorial trophy to the athlete they consider to have made the best showing during the past year should experience little difficulty pondering the names in the outside centres. It is the honest opinion of the writer that the list presented them. Of the even dozen selected in the inner circle it should simmer down to three—Frank "Ring" Clancy, for sentimental reasons, Phil Edwards, who never failed to place in three Olympic games and Frank Boucher, Ottawa paddler, who won the Olympic paddling title. Of course there are others, but this trio stands out as the most outstanding, with Boucher and Edwards accomplishing the athletic feats of prowess and importance during the year 1936.

When the Peterborough hockey interests attend the O.H.A. group meeting over the week-end they intend to ask for a double schedule in the junior group, which consists of Peterboro' Colts, Tweed and the Belleville juniors, and that each of the other two clubs will shine-up to this suggestion, however, remains to be seen. Just it is quite likely Manager Eddie Thomas will support this suggestion. Regarding the intermediate schedule, however, first and foremost the Lindsay City interests are going to ask that all four intermediate clubs—Peterboro, C.A.C., Trenton and the Belleville club—be included together as an "A" group or an "B" group the same rating. The Belleville and Trenton clubs have been given a "B" classification, and both would be foolish to even consider any other suggestions.

The R.C.A.F. "Fliers" are quite satisfied with their lot in the inter-mediate "A" series as are Trenton and Belleville, so it seems the Fliers pretty well high and dry in the matter. Judging from sport notes penned by Ig Peterman Aerial is plain to be seen the Petes realize they are fighting a losing battle in the matter and have still another suggestion pertaining to the set-up ready to table at the meeting. Their latest suggestion is to have the Fliers play a triple schedule as class "A" teams, play a triple schedule between themselves and a single interlocking schedule with Belleville and Trenton, all games to count in the final standings. Providing Belleville and Trenton would get together and make their series a double schedule and then include the interlocking set-up with the "A" team, perhaps this might meet with the favour of all, except possibly the Fliers. Of course all these squabbles and questions will be settled on Sunday when the respective clubs convene.

Apparently the sport scribes from the larger centres are not abroad with the times. Since the breaking off of relations by the C.A.H.A., with the A.A.U. of C. numerous sport commentators have admitted the break was coming and added that doubtless the basketball, lacrosse and baseball associations would follow suit. Most of these scribes were up to the times they would have known that the O.B.A.A. (basketball) had split with the A.A.U. of C. two years ago come April at the annual meeting of the Ontario Baseball Association held in Kitchener. At that meeting the O.B.A.A. delegates voted to discontinue the purchase and use of amateur cards, voicing their reasons as being able to conduct their own amateur affairs within the association. For over two years now the basketballers have carried on successfully and without amateur cards issued by the A.A.U. of C. The O.B.A.A. felt they were not receiving adequate support and recognition from the A.A.U. of C. The baseball interests continued to pay their affiliation fee to the A.A.U. of C., however, but conducted their own affairs pertaining to baseball within the association.

Joe Legault, local five pin bowler blossomed forth and broke the alley record at the Recreations Alleys last evening. In a regular league game Joe rolled a three string score of 960 to establish the new record. His individual scores were—314-303-343. Some mighty fine "maple" knocking is seen around the two local bowling alleys this season and one of the keenest contested leagues in many years is in progress locally.

Jack Kearns, who guided Jack Dempsey to the diny heights of the realm, has been engaged as boxing promoter for the Detroit Olympia Stadium. With Joe Louis in a boxing class by his lonesome, the Detroit sportsmen are going to go after a world's heavyweight title bout.

Sometime when you're not too busy and time hangs heavy on your hands here's one record most any boy could at least take a crack at. It seems a man named Wm. Franks of Newcastle, Australia, began one day of the ordinary routines of life and commenced to spin a piece of Indian clubs, maybe just for the exercise. At any rate on August 2nd, 1934, Franks picked up the clubs and didn't lay them down until three full days and eight hours later. He swung those clubs for 585,600 revolutions, made 122 revolutions per minute for three continuous days and the eight extra hours. What some people will do for a thrill. Of course we cannot say as to how long Mr. Franks slept after his feat, but he says it was good exercise at any rate.

Hockey's Big Seven

Harvey Jackson of Toronto Maple Leafs moved into the thick of the National Hockey League scoring race last night by scoring two goals and an assist in Leafs 5-1 victory over New York Americans. Jackson's jump to a fifth share of seventh place was the only major change in the big seven. Dave Schriner of the Americans picked up an assist and increased to within a point of the leading Larry Aurie.

BIGGEST SHOCK IN YEAR IS K. O. OF JOE LOUIS

College Football Furnished Wider Range of Surprising Results

GIANTS A SURPRISE

Tony Manero's Uphill Fight in U.S. Open Draws Votes

By ALAN GOULD

New York, Dec. 18 (AP) — The biggest shock of the year, in any sport, to America's newspaper commentators, was the knockout of Joe Louis by the comeback hero of 1936—Max Schmeling.

No less surprised than was the Brown Bomber himself when he absorbed the first of a succession of lethal right-hand punches, the experts ruled Joe's first and only defeat setback well beyond any other "dope bucket" guesses in the year's athletic roundup.

College football, as usual, furnished a wider range of surprising results than any other sport, topped by Minnesota's first defeat in four years, but observers have become hardened to football upsets.

Northwestern's triumph over the mighty Gophers, however, rated only a few points behind Duquesne's conquest of Pittsburg in the Associated Press poll. New York's victory over Fordham ranked third among the season's football surprises. Duquesne, by getting knocked off by West Virginia Wesleyan, made the "first ten" twice.

Giants Biggest Surprise.

Major league baseball's biggest surprise was the surge of New York Giants from second division depths to pennant-winning heights in September.

Tony Manero's record-breaking stretch finish to beat out Harry Cooper in the United States open tournament crowded as the No. 1 golf surprise of the year. None mentioned the surprising shooting of Bob Jones, who finished thirty-third in the Augusta National after breaking the course record in practice.

Tabulation of the poll, showing the year's major sport surprises:

Event and points:

(1) Knockout of Joe Louis by Max Schmeling, 111.

(2) Football defeat of Minnesota by Northwestern, 74.

(3) Football defeat of Pittsburg by Duquesne, 54.

(4) National League pennant victory by New York Giants, 47.

(5) Football victory of N.Y.U. over Fordham, 35.

(6) Tony Manero's victory in U. S. open golf championship, 22.

(7) Max Baer's triumph over Helen Jacobs for U. S. tennis title, 15.

(8) Football defeat of Duquesne by West Virginia Wesleyan, 12.

(9) Lacrosse victory over Upper U. S. and Bold Venture's victory over Revelry in Kentucky Derby, 8.

VARSITY DEFEATS PRINCETON 10-0

Seven Goal Outburst in Final Period Cinches Pastime

University of Toronto, scarcely a threat in the Intercollegiate Amateur Hockey League during the past several years, showed indeed today in the International Intercollegiate Hockey League with confidence born of victory.

Toronto opened the newly-formed circuit in fine style trouncing Princeton University 10-0. They did it with the final 20 minutes. For two periods, when they built up a three-goal margin, with seven-goal outburst in the last period.

Princeton's heavy and clean checking game, featured by Captain Sweeney, Max Fullerton and Norm McClelland in the first two periods, was more than matched by Charlie Sweeney, Max Fullerton and Norm McClelland in the first two periods, was more than matched by Charlie Charles Scott Johnson, Bill Quaquelle, Bill Morrison and Ralph Rapley one each.

University of Montreal is "on the fritz" with the newly-formed league. The French outfit dropped out for a new deal in sport this year and entry into the Intercollegiate circuit was the result.

U. of M., light and inexperienced, makes its first start of the season tonight against the red raiders from McGill, veterans of the Intercollegiate hockey and leaders of the Montreal setter group.

REBOUNDS

Trenton, December 18 (Special)—"Elayne Wanted", is the sign that the Continental Can team are sporting these days and unless some good ones are located soon the club officers intend to go east and enlist the needed quantity. Manager James Kerr, reported yesterday that of last year's squad only five players are available and one of those is indefinite. Allan LaMorre who is alternating on the Flyer's O.H.A.—"A"—relay is the indefinite man and according to the T. and D.H.L. rules will remain uncertain unless the executives exam amendments at their meeting this week. The league drew up a strict rule pertaining to O.S.A. players competing in the town leagues and intend to stick by it. So if the executive rule out LaMorre the Continental scouts will be travelling east parts ruled Joe's first and if it is all possible will sign some of Belleville's choice prospects.

A schedule was drawn up by the T. and D. League Secretary, Arthur Norrington, and is as follows:

Monday, Jan. 4—C.O.F. vs. Carrying Place; C.O.F. vs. Benedict and Proctor.

Friday, Jan. 6—Hinde and Dauch vs. Hart's Corners; Continental Cans vs. Brighton.

Monday, Jan. 9—Carrying Place vs. C.O.F.; Benedict and Proctor vs. Hinde and Dauch.

Friday, Jan. 13—Hart's Corners vs. Continental Cans; R.C.A.F. vs. Brighton.

Monday, Jan. 16—R.C.A.F. vs. C.O.F.; Carrying Place vs. Continental Cans.

Friday, Jan. 20—Hart's Corners vs. Brighton; Carrying Place vs. Benedict and Proctor.

Monday, Jan. 23—C.O.F. vs. Hart's Corners; R.C.A.F. vs. Benedict and Proctor.

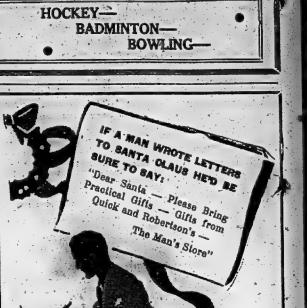
Friday, Jan. 27—Hinde and Dauch vs. Brighton; Carrying Place vs. Continental Cans.

Monday, Feb. 30—Hinde and Dauch vs. Hart's Corners; Continental Cans vs. Benedict and Proctor.

Friday, Feb. 3—C.O.F. vs. Brighton; Carrying Place vs. Hart's Corners; R.C.A.F. vs. Hinde and Dauch; Benedict and Proctor vs. Continental Cans.

Monday, Feb. 6—C.O.F. vs. Continental Cans; Carrying Place vs. Brighton.

Friday, Feb. 10—C.O.F. vs. Hinde and Dauch; Benedict and Proctor vs. Hart's Corners.



The above schedule is subject to change in the event of an O.H.A. fixture date conflicting with the T. and D.H.L. game. The operation of the League will be governed by the ice conditions.

Coach O. Leary of Trenton's O.H.A. entry, was chatting with the writer the day visit week. He is praying for colder weather and says he can do nothing if the thermometer refuses to register zero. Coach likes it has for the past two days. Says the colder the weather the better for him. Coach Leary is experiencing his first year as an O.H.A. coach, though he and Lin competed in sports of all sorts regularly and was a member of Harold (Doc) Crowe's championship Cobalt Silver Lake squad back into the Ontario football finals, some seasons ago. Coach Leary is a firm believer that there's a way to get the best out of his material.

CORRECTION—Mr. Harry Smith was not the manager of the Trenton and District Hockey League champions in 1935 as an article appearing in this column on Monday, 14th, read. Mr. Herbert Pickwood, a member of the Trenton High School Staff at that time, tutored the winners that year.

A local sports writer recalled to us yesterday that if the Continentals with players, Wooler and Glen Miller as the spots to look, and pointed out that such fine material as Mac Mason, Harold Long and Van Gales have not been approached by any organization to don their uniforms, he started with the Woolerites a season ago is also free, for I do not think they could obtain their services we're thinking a permanent berth would be found for each of them.

Local sport enthusiasts are wondering who will get the goal appointment on the Intermediate "B" O.H.A. team. Coach Leary has two top-notchers to select from: Earl Gray, who featured with the Whitall Cans last season and the Trenton High School in 1935; Joseph Gould, is the other. Joe has been causing considerable interest in these parts for some time but we call Gray to be elected by reason of having the most experience and will get foold. Brighton, Wooler, Hinde and Dauch had rating net-minders last season.

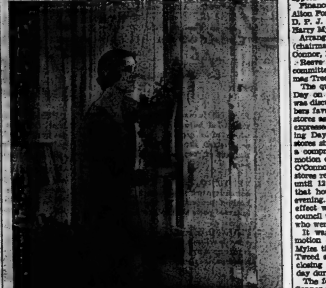
Dr. W. A. Paul Again to Head Community Club

Reports of Year's Work Received at Annual Meeting

Tweed—The Community Club Supper was held in the Royal House on Monday evening at 6.30 with an attendance of thirty-five. Community singing was conducted by S. H. Connor with Art Leman at the piano. The president, Wr. W. P. Paul, proposed the toast to the King whose birthday was being observed on the same date. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and adopted. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $37.11. The President, in a brief address stated the aims and objects of the Community Club, urging all to become members and co-operate with the officers in making the club a successful organization which will accomplish something worthwhile in the community.

These new comers to Tweed were introduced, Mr. H. W. Crosbie introduced Mr. Elwood, accountant at the Bank of Montreal, transferred recently from Kitchener, Mr. C. R. Kerr introduced Mr. Bell, manager of Tweed Hydro. Mr. S. R. Curry introduced Mr. Thos. Rose, manager of local branch of the Sabrita Store. All three expressed their appreciation of the kindness which had been shown by the township generally since they had taken up their residence in Tweed.

Dr. Paul announced that a meeting of the executive of the community club would be held in a short time to consider and amend the draft of the constitution which had been drawn up tentatively.



The business of electing the officers of the Community Club for 1937 was proceeded with. Moved by W. I. Gordon, seconded by Dr. R. L. Bowby that the following be elected as honorary presidents. Reeve W. H. Sayers, W. R. Tummon, Dr. W. M. Mather.

Moved by W. R. Spencer, seconded by O. H. Kerr that Dr. Wm. A. Paul be re-elected President This motion was carried unanimously.

First Vice President—I. D. Corcoran.

Second Vice President—T. N. Beatty.

Sec. Treas.—S. R. Curry.

The question of holding the usual Santa Claus parade was discussed and the merchants present expressed themselves as being heartily in accord with the proposal, not only because of the increased business resulting therefrom but also because of the enjoyment derived from the affair by the children A motion to hold the Santa Claus Parade was made by Dr. M. O'Connor and seconded by H. W. Crosbie. On motion of Thos. Rance and J. H. Gebbie to hold the parade on Wednesday December 22nd was adopted.

The following committees were appointed:

Finance—T. N. Beatty (chairman) Allen Foster, Tracy Quinn, Ed Rath, D. F. J. Bowby, Raphael Rashotte, Harry Myles, Art Leman.

Arrangements—T. R. Moffat (chairman) D. H. Morrison. S. H. Connor, B. Dulmage, S. A. McCarry, Reeve W. H. Sayers was named a committee to look after the Christmas Tree and special street lighting.

The question of observing Boxing Day on Saturday, December 26th was discussed at length. Some members favored the idea of closing the stores as was done last year. Others expressed the opinion that as Boxing Day fell on a Saturday, the stores should open as usual. Finally a compromise was effected and on motion of J. E. Gehan and Dr. O'Connor was adopted, that the stores remain closed on Boxing Day and until 12 o'clock noon and open at that hour for the afternoon and evening. A recommendation to this effect was forwarded to the village council to present to the members who were not present at the supper.

It was unanimously decided on motion of C. H. Kerr and H. E. Myles that the business places in Tweed adopt the principle of early closing on all nights except Saturday during the winter months.

The following T. R. Moffat, S. H. Connor and Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne were named to act with the executive officers as a nominating committee to prepare the personnel of the standing committees of the Community Club for presentation at the next meeting.

Tweed Chapter 148 O.E.S. held a relief bridge and euchre on Wednesday evening. There were five tables of bridge and six tables of euchre. The winners of the prizes were Mrs. McCutcheon and Miss Taffman. The prizes were donated by local merchants. The committee in charge Mrs. W. R. Tummon and Mrs. W. J. Gebbie appreciate the co-operation of those who assisted. The proceeds will be turned over to the village committee of which Rev. Swayne is chairman, to expend as there will be no duplications.

The judges were Miss Grace Jarrett and Miss M. E. Mackintosh to whom the W.C.T.U. owes a deep gratitude for giving their time this time every year for this work.

Miss Phyllis Beatty, daughter of Dr. S. S. and Mrs. Beatty was taken to Belleville General Hospital on Sunday where she underwent an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Wallace and little daughter of Regina left on Saturday for Shelbourne where they will spend Christmas with relatives. They spent six weeks with Mrs. Wallace's aunt, Mrs. E. Morrison, Madoc.

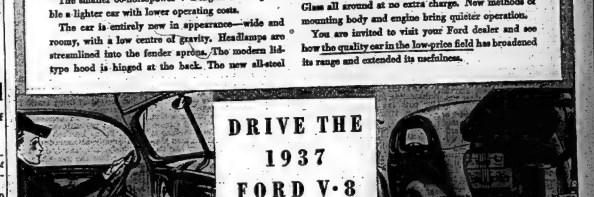
On Monday evening Sis. Essie Naylor of Belleville, District Deputy Grand Matron of District No. 12, O.E.S., paid an official visit to Madoc Chapter No. 143 O. E. S. The D.D.G.M. complimented the Worthy Matron, Sis. Mrs. Broad and her officers for the efficient way they carried on the work of the Chapter. During the evening Sis. Fanny Mount, Madoc, was presented Sis. Naylor with a gift for the officers and members of the Chapter. Visiting members were present from Belleville, Tweed and Bancroft Chapters. At the close of supper a pleasant social hour was enjoyed by all.

On Monday evening the Men's Association of Trinity United Church held their annual meeting with Mr. George Loug, the president, taking the chair. After the general business period and community singing the guest speaker of the evening, Mr. Gordon of Belleville was introduced. Mr. Carmen, a war veteran of Great War, rendered a very fine talk on his trip to Vimy Ridge and the very vivid pictures of the unveiling of the Vimy Memorial. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Carmen for the splendid address made for the annual Christmas Dinner Party. Entertainment was given by the members of Trinity United Church Sunday School on Sunday morning when they held a White Gift service to help to bring Christmas to some little girl.

Mr. and Mrs. John McCaffrey, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wright, Mr. Gilbert and Mr. W. Sinclair attended the funeral of the late Mrs. R. Gibb held at Stirling on Wednesday afternoon.

THE QUALITY CAR IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD



THE New Ford V-8 for 1937 is one car, built in only one chassis size—but the quality V-8 engine which powers it is now offered in two sizes, 85 horsepower for maximum performance with good economy—60 Horsepower for good performance with maximum economy.

The smaller 60-horsepower V-8 engine makes possible a lighter car with lower operating costs.

The car is entirely new in appearance—wide and roomy, with a low centre of gravity. Headlamps are streamlined into the fender aprons. The modern Hi-type hood is hinged at the back. The new all-steel top sweeps back from the windshield in an unbroken curve. The new luxurious interiors are tailored to the minute. The slanting V-type windshield opens in all closed cars.

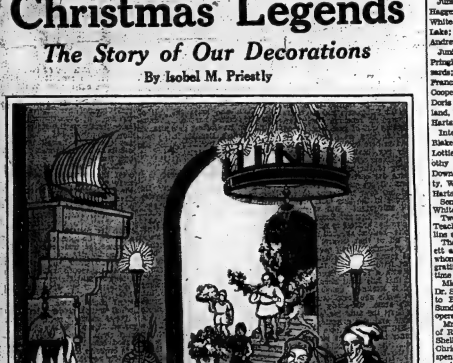
It is new in safety, quiet and comfort. The body is all steel—top, sides, floor and frame, welded into a single steel unit of great protective strength. Safety Glass all around at no extra charge. New methods of mounting body and engine bring quieter operation.

You are invited to visit your Ford dealer and see how the quality car in the low-price field has broadened its range and extended its usefulness.

DRIVE THE 1937 FORD V-8

You have read all about the quality car in the low-price field. Now put our words to the proof—let the New Ford V-8 speak for itself. Phone your nearest Ford dealer, or call in at his showroom. See the car. Ask him to let you drive it. You'll be delighted with the way it looks, rides and handles.

EASY-ACTION SAFETY BRAKES: You want two things in a modern braking system. Dependability, and soft pedal action. The new Ford brakes give you both. They are positive and direct, with the safety of steel from pedal to wheel. Cable and conduit control. Self-energizing. Instant stops with feather-light pressure on the brake pedal.



NEW COMFORT! By every modern standard of design, the 1937 Ford V-8 is a big, roomy car. Extra space is in the body where you need it, not taken up by the engine under the hood. Comfort of the Centre-Poise Ride is increased by smoother action of the longer-swinging springs with new-type Interlief pressure lubrication. The whole car is quieter too.

Christmas Legends

The Story of Our Decorations

By Isobel M. Priestly

Strange as the association may seem, our Christmas decorations carry us far away from the crib at Bethlehem back to the very dawn of history.

Long before the Christian era, the pagan tribes of Europe made use of evergreens at their mid-winter festivals in honor of the sun god. Ancient writers also tell us that the barbarous tribes of the German forests had a custom of hanging evergreens about their houses "lest Kings so that the spirits of the forest might find them during the long cold winters "...unslipped by cold or frost."

Later, in the middle ages, there was the tradition that elves and fairies joined the Christmas festivities at the great castle halls, hiding the branches festooned about the rafters. In those days, however, it was bad luck to bring the evergreens into the house before Christmas Eve and, by the same token, not before the Christmas Eve and, by the same token, and, Home. Ivy, however, was welcome beside those who let any decoration stay up beyond Candlemas Eve.

"Down with the holly and ivy all
Wherewith ye deck the Christmas hall,
So that the superstitious find
Not one least branch there left behind."

For look, how many leaves there be
So many goblins ye shall see."

Hence the reason why we still insist that all Christmas decorations disappear by New Year.

Ivy Was Banned

Legends inform us that yew and cypress, when used at Christmas time, are emblematic of immortality, the fragrant fir yields a sort of incense, which laurel and bay have been used as a symbol of triumph from the glorious days of Greece the previous century by the printing allowed a place in Christmas decorations in Britain, it being banished outside the house with many old songs tell of the rivalry between the holly and ivy:

"Holly standeth in the hall,
Fair and stately as a queen,
With berries as red as any coal
Ivy and her maidens weep and Sorrow whiles."

Even our Christmas tree has pagan ancestry, for the idea of a decorated or illuminated tree is so ancient, having been brought down from the old religious ceremonials of Rome, China and Babylon. As far as the traditional British Christmas is concerned, the Christmas tree, despite its widespread popularity is a comparative newcomer as it was only introduced from Germany into England during the reign of Queen Victoria by the prince consort.

HOW JOAN LOVED THIS

by

ANNE FORESTER

Chapter 22
Emma Speaks Her Mind

Joan looked steadily up into Ted's face, trying not to let him see that she was frightened.

"Mark Havens has been treated like a gentleman!" she said, in her voice that with a cool scorn which she did not feel.

Teddy felt the rebuke; he dropped "aw" from his speech, and his apology and Joan was sure of herself again. She managed that with passionate hey—this flushed and slumbering child, she could maintain him—she found herself thinking with a sudden flash of bitter humour—and Mark Havens had not had managed her only a short time before.

Joan made him sit in a corner of the chesterfield and she knelt down on the arm, ruffling and smoothing his coarse yellow hair as unaffectedly as an elder sister might.

"Teddy dear, our engagement was absurd; I felt it at the time that I allowed you to talk me into it. No!.... as he looked away and started to speak. "You must listen to me."

Teddy sat a disconsolate bulk, letting her words trickle over him as a great rock might lumbering in the rain.

Joan lightly sketched her interview with Mark Havens. He merely dropped in, to talk the matter over with her.... she had thought it better for them to wait for the time being.... he was to go to work in his office and for Teddy to finish college before any definite engagement was announced into....As she deftly smoothed over that amazing interview! Joan was the gleamly apostrophizing Mark Havens in her own words. "Now, do you think, I'm dramatising myself? Haven't I played square with you—now do you think I'm to have any right to sit with that Lord Cressington—and be nice to her, or quitter!"

At the end Teddy was gloomy but resigned. "It's all apple-sauce you going to work when I have all that money and Uncle Chalky's estate laughed ruefully, "I haven't got it.... Mark had it in his pocket.... I'm not until I'm of age." He looked down his big body in despair. "Now, do you think, I'm dramatising myself! Haven't I played square with you—now do you think I'm to have any right to sit with that Lord Cressington—and be nice to her, or quitter!"

TRY RUSSIA AT BAR OF LEAGUE

The All-Canada Congress commended abolition of relief camps but declared strike methods being used on railways at wages unfair to organized labor. It affirmed that the same policy is to be followed next season, they urged payment of union wages.

Plea for a housing and slum clearance program was reiterated. The home-building plan was praised but amendments were asked to delete initial payment which few workers could meet.

As legislation respecting hours of work, wages and employment insurance are before the government the Congress refrained from discussing them but urged that energetic efforts be directed toward establishment of a six-hour day and 30-hour week principle, as well as the workers' purchasing power.

Contributory unemployment insurance, health insurance, increased Old Age Pensions payable at 60 years of age rather than 70, pensions for the blind and payment of pensions not less than $5,000 value in the reckoning of Old Age Pensions.

Restoration of civil service salary rates and the general salary increase of 5 per cent. to other industrial employees we of the Union, based on goods prices index by the Government, appointment of a fair wage officer in the Maritime Provinces, the same and standard working hours in tariff protected industries were some of the recommendations under the heading, "Wage Policy."

Nationalization of Canada Bank

Under "Banking and Financial Matters" with memorandum urged complete nationalization of the Bank of Canada, dividends to be permitted only on money used as capital and other financial procedure to be investigated in a general way by the Government.

It was suggested the Government pass "non-interest-bearing currency to the amount" the finance public works. The Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act was hailed and it was urged its benefits be extended to include urban dwellers.

Extension of the benefits of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act to include other services such as distribution of milk, bread, coal; some recommendations for employees and public servants, were recommended.

Under "holidays with pay", the Government was reminded of the convention adopted at the last session of the International Labor organization, permitting a holiday with pay to low-paid employees of the Canadian National Railways who did not only enjoy the same privileges as the higher paid employees. Rate of pay for overtime was urged.

The congress reviewed its objection to the organization of labor in ways and its recommendations with respect to human safety such as removal of dangerous machinery, safety of workers and instalment of fireescapes, particularly in public buildings. Advance approval was given an elevator safety code which is to be completed by a joint body being prepared by interested parties.

Protection of workers desiring to organize for "mutual assistance" was claimed to be necessary and the U.S. was urged parliament give this specific right by statute with penalties for employers interfering with it.

Nov. 11th Holiday Sought

Two weeks annual holiday with pay for all workers, establishment of Armistice Day as a national government holiday and that all civil workers including railway employees were urged.

It was suggested the government set up a public-ownership commission to study all aspects from time to time on fields to which public ownership might be extended with public advantage.

Following is a summary of the memorandum presented by the Confederation of Catholic Workers of Canada, Inc.:

The memorandum opened with argument in support of organization by workers as a means of overcoming social ills," and instanced two particular cases in which it was believed professional organization should be encouraged and made possible. The textile industry and bank employees.

The Government was urged to strengthen the Companies Act after which legislation that would impose heavy penalties on those who violate labor laws or who go through fraudulent bankruptcy proceedings.

After urging the government bar the entry of undesirable aliens to decide the brief had the following to say about Soviet Russia:

"In Soviet Russia, the recognized party is the Communist Party. It is equally recognized that this party uses every means at its disposal to facilitate the dissemination of Communism throughout the world. In order to combat the activities of the nefarious work being accomplished by Russia, the C.C.W.C. makes the following suggestions to the Dominion Government:

"That Canada, as a member of the League of Nations, cause Soviet Russia to be tried as Germany;

"If proof is available that Russia is disseminating Communist propaganda by means of Commercial relations, that Canada propose that Russia be disbarred from the League of Nations;

"And that, as penalty, members of the League of Nations be invited to discontinue all commercial relations with Soviet Russia."

SAYS PATROLMAN

The District Attorney said "it was simply a question of revenge" after Sullivan had been charged with mistreating a 12-year old girl and obtaining $5 from her.

Constable Thomas L. Gallagher said he started for jail with Sullivan after the latter was arrested on charges of mistreating the girl.

Enroute to jail with Constable Thomas L. Gallagher, he asked permission to stop at his home. Half an hour later, Gallagher said, he returned.

Constable is Suspicious

They started again for jail, Gallagher said Sullivan stopped "to see a friend for a minute."

The "friend" was Mrs. Laura Bacon, 32-year-old social worker who had given information on which the mistreatment charges had been based.

"All-at once," said Gallagher, "I just sort of sensed more than saw, him lift his hand from his side and then he fired a shot straight at her. She screamed and fell to the floor. I grabbed his arm and yelled: 'Martin are you crazy?'

"He said: 'I'm satisfied. I'm glad I did it.'"

"I didn't know until we got to the station about the other shooting."

Then he told them all about it and it made the press agents come out screaming.

All Die Instantly

Mrs. Bacon died instantly.

Mrs. Mary Vukelja, 40, mother of the 12 year old girl; Milan Vukelja, 19, her son; Joseph Bendo, 45 and Helen Bendo, 43, Officers disagreed on identification of the latter. Some said their daughter, Helen, 19, had been married to Sullivan; others, that she was his housekeeper.

They agreed the daughter—who fled from the home at the time of the shooting—had left Sullivan's home a week ago.

Chief of Police Thomas J. Flynn of Duquesne said Sullivan blamed Mrs. Bacon for the girl's daughter's decision to leave his home.

RELIEF TUMBLES

23 larger cities, the reduction was 6.41 per cent. The reduction between September, 1935, and 1936 was 22.39 per cent in the smaller cities and 9.79 per cent in the larger.

Men Out of Cities Improve

The total on relief last September in 23 small cities was 64,856 on the national registration, was 51,400; compared to 59,843 a year ago and 64,856 in 1934. An additional 9,077 registered in eight other municipalities that did not register.

All but five of the small cities show reductions in the number on relief, Sudbury leading with a drop from 3,410 to 694.

The action almost cut its total in half. Chelsea and Smith Ste. Marie had gains due to the 1936 registrations.

Total numbers on direct relief in some of the 23 cities last September, with figures for September, 1935, in brackets:

Totals on Relief

Belleville, 572 (1,172); Chatham, 893 (914); Galt, 720 (785); Guelph, 1,241 (2,071); Kingston, 1,310 (1,730); Niagara Falls, 1,243 (3,754); North Bay, 905 (1,778); Oshawa, 1,313 (2,417); Owen Sound, 1,041 (1,076); Peterborough, 1,514 (2,137); Port Arthur, 1,200 (2,000); St. Catharines, 2,097 (3,850); St. Thomas, 719 (1,174); Sarnia, 621 (982); Sault Ste. Marie, 1,200 (1,900); Sudbury 694 (3,410); Welland, 578 (1,041); Windsor, 2,000 (3,000).

Eight additional urban municipalities in the same population group where figures are not available for earlier years, had a total registration of 9,077. Two individual figures for September include: Cornwall, 619; Timmins, 979.

HEADS OF CHURCH,

romance and its managing director, Sir John Reith, were roundly criticized for poor programs, dictatorial methods and high salaries. The bestcasting of the Archbishop of Canterbury's attack on former King Edward by the B.B.C. also was a basis of attack.

Sir Walter Womersley, assistant postmaster general, denied B.B.C. officials controlled the programs or some of their staff or listened in on private telephone conversations as some M.P.'s charged.

McGovern Assails Bishop.

"Let the Bishops get out and deal with the Means Test, instead of dealing with Edward and Mrs. Simpson," declared Rev. Dr. McGovern, leading the labor forces into battle. Yet there was no talk of the Means Test instead of kicking a man when he's down.

Let them get out and really game. Instead of looking on high, let them look into their pockets for starving wrecks of the Means Test and unemployment.

Comparing the cabinet to a "lot of fluffy old women if they don't get their way" and dubbing them "a number of old worn-out veterans who are always threatening to resign, he declared "we are all willing to relieve" them "if they want to go."

If People Voted.

If the constitutional crisis "had been put to the country", he added, "the (King Edward) would have been on the cabinet." The Prime Minister would have gone, but this king would have remained."

Ernest Brown, Labor Minister, who accompanied Edward on his visit to South Wales "distressed areas just before the constitutional crisis, was an sharply assailed when he attempted to defend the government record on the Means Test.

"The minister of labor took advantage of the people's attitude toward the king to protect himself from the attack that was due him," Amanda Bevan, Labor, declared. "If the minister of labor believed there was no resentment in South Wales, he was deceiving himself without the shelter of the royal purple and the will see plenty of resentment."

PRIME MINISTER

With respect to requests by this and other deputations that steps be taken to force employers to permit workers to organize Mr. Lapointe said he agreed entirely. If the employer would not oppose organization among his workers.

Minister Singled Out

Minister of Labor also spoke briefly assuring the delegation the government would give their careful consideration to the representation.

Prime Minister Greeted

Immediately after hearing was completed, the government received a large delegation from the All-Canadian Congress of Labor. Earlier Mr. Tom Moore, president of Canada had presented its annual memorandum.

The Prime Minister thanked the All-Canadian Congress for its support and said it was apparent there was a good mutual understanding of what was to be faced.

Legislative recommendations made by the Trades and Labor Congress would be made a matter for study and consideration by every member of the cabinet, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said.

Mr. Moore, in presenting his memory into the labor department 36 years ago said he was thankful in the face of these exchanges of views and suggestions.

"Members of this age was being written he was convinced. the Prime Minister said that the words of the Trades and Labor Congress memorandum to the Labor Gazette itself, would give the most valuable picture of the present age.

MARSHAL CHANG OFFERS TERMS

General Chiang Ting-Wen Released With Message

Nanking, Dec. 18 (AP)—High officials of the Chinese government were in conference today trying to find the protection of armed guards to relase Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

The terms Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang has dictated to end the civil war and the Generalissimo's captivity, officials said.

The arrival of General Chiang Ting-Wen (pronounced Jiang-Wen) at Nationalist government's offices on peaceful negotiations for release by Communists while their own military divisions pushed toward the rebel headquarters at Sian, was taken as orders to storm the city if all other efforts failed.

General Chiang Ting-Wen was freed by Marshal Chang Wednesday to carry the demands of the Nanking government.

He appeared suddenly in the capital after his movements were last week accompanied by rumors of his arrival at Loyang, Honan Province, with letters to the commander of the Nationalist armies.

Conference Is Held.

Chiang Kai-Shek held captive with his chief since the beginning of the rebellion last week-end, immediately met with Generalissimo Dr. H. H. Kung, civil head of the government, and T. V. Soong, brother-in-law of the generalissimo, and Madame Chiang Kai-Shek.

It was reliably believed Chiang Ting-Wen brought a letter signed by Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang and the Nanking government to halt hostilities and settle the matter peacefully.

Thoroughly mystified, the Chinese officials were felt to believe the letter had been written under duress.

Adding uncertainly to the confused situation was the mystery surrounding James Eder, Marshal Chang's adviser, whose arrival at Nanking yesterday would have been one of the way for any definite terms that Marshal Chang might have given Eder, a British subject, informed sources said today he was with a drawing from the latter's cabinet. It was believed he had left for Shanghai.

OUTSKIRTS ATTACKED

Madrid, Dec. 18—(AP)—Attacking fascist columns today drove deeper into Madrid's northern outskirts in a new attempt to open the way for Fascist reinforcements from north-eastern Guadalajara province.

The immediate objective of the assault was the Madrid-El Escorial highway, strategic communications route between the capital defences and the rebel concentrations in the Guadarramma mountains.

FAMILY ESCAPES

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 18 (CP)—Mrs. T. G. Moffatt of Hamilton and her children had a close call early today, when fire raked their home and caused damage estimated at $3,000.

Groping through the dense smoke Mrs. Moffatt and her children managed to reach the street and were sheltered in the home of her brother C. Murray Souter.

Prices of Turkeys Under 1935 Level

It won't cost so much to eat Christmas turkey this year, according to advance reports today from representative Ontario cities. The birds that completed Yuletide menus are more plentiful and prices are from one to five cents lower on the pound.

Peterborough district tables will probably do a lot of groaning under the big turkeys being carved thereabouts. They are much more plentiful this year and will average as 15 to 20 cents a pound. Last year they cost from 23 to 25.

In Toronto turkey market buyers and sellers were on a deadlock over prices. A year ago turkey buying for the trade was done by the pound time. This year it had not yet begun, with quotations approximately four to five cents a pound lower than last year's.

Can't Get Rid of 1-2 Cents

On Dec. 14, 1932, turkeys sold in car lots in Toronto for 29 cents a pound. This year, experimental prices declined an offer of 23 1-2 cents, which was accepted by the 3-4 which buyers refused to give.

From Western Ontario reports are that a reported increase of 25 to 30 cents a pound, five cents lower than last year's, prevails in the same, while Stratford farmers offered $1,000 for 27 cents a pound. 1935 prices of 26 to 32 cents.

Wholesale prices at Brantford is being offered at retail, 27 to 29 cents. Up in the north country, as reported from South Bay, merchants were slow in announcing Christmas prices, but it was expected Northern Ontarians, too, would eat turkey at lower prices. Grade A's were expected to sell for 25 instead of last year's 31 cents; grade B's at 26, a cent lower than in 1935.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, Dec. 18—(CP)—Speculative demand sent wheat prices soaring anew on closing Grain Exchange today to their best levels since February, 1930, for the fourth successive day.

Values near mid-session were 2 1-2 to 2 5-8 cents higher, December at $1.26 7-8, May $1.25 5-8 and July $1.19 1-8.

Heavy, unestimated export sales to Canadian wheat overnight, are confirmed reports that Germany had recently bought 2,000,000 bush. from private exporters in the Dominion and advancing outside markets prompted a deluge of buying orders.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Sitgar and Crawford by Financial Service.

God's Lake New Ore Impetant

God's Lake new ore, under development west of the Bucker Creek Trail at the lake head, is the best and most consistent found to date in the mines.

Grade, around $13.66 for 119 ft., corresponds to the general average of the mine. It may be higher, however, values are running over $20 in some spots.

Net operating profit of $116,000 for the nine months ended September 30th last, suggests an operating surplus for the year of around $150,000, despite two years of development, all of which has been paid from current operations.

A substantial increase in ore reserve, leading to plans for the building of mill capacity by next spring, are forecast for the year-end summary of God's Lake Gold Mines.

Developments to the west of the property, around the 11th third level of God's Lake Gold Mines, Limited, have thrown a new light on the possibilities for that property. The Northern Miner gathers from officials who have recently returned from Winnipeg.

Drifting at the third level has opened a new high grade ore-shoot with latest sampling results showing 0.45 oz. per ton, consistent values so far encountered in the mine.

Market Comment

The local market is becoming a discriminatory affair, only a few issues coming in for attention from time to time. Despite the recent favorable signs of activity and buoyancy, a large number of stocks have, so far, failed to participate in the recovery movement.

Another disappointing feature of the recent demand has been the comparative lack of public interest, which warrants the opinion that a technical correction would be beneficial at the present time in helping to clear the air of undesirables.

In connection with the strength in the Canadian Industrial Alcohol, it is reported in the Street that the plant with its 10,000,000 gallons of its inventory to 'Distillers-Seagrams for a price of $1.85 a gallon or $2,640,000.

Royalite's Sterling Pacific No. 3 Well

Sterling Pacific's Royalite No. 3 well at Tisdale by the baller was being run continuously to assist the flow by gas-lifting. It is bringing mud and heavy oil which is being forced from the sand into the producing horizon. Tubing was at a location but the crew is waiting for a trailing to control heat which should arrive very shortly. As in the case of Royalite No. 2 well, it is expected to increase the production. While no statement has been made respecting production, it is unofficially estimated that the well will run over 500 barrels a day.

Investors Are Looking Into the New Year With Confidence

Now that it appears that we are in a major recovery cycle, that is fortified with many fundamental features, there are far more stocks that have not discounted their long term possibilities than there are that have already done so. This, of course, does not mean that the investor should not make changes in his holdings. By keeping himself informed he can do this in an efficient manner. Financial Service is read by more investors than any other investment service simply because it is unsurpassed for accurate information and sound views on securities.

On The Street

Canadian Industrial Alcohol has negotiations, which, if completed would mean that their entire inventory of fine whisky would be disposed of . . . . The Stock Exchange has accurately forced at present levels. . . . The Asbestos Corporation have opened up the Beaver Lake American mine at Black Lake for the first time since 1926. Considerable development will be needed to bring this plant up to earnings supplied by the recovered amount. . . . Full benefits will be felt by such improvements in 1937 . . . . Directors of Moore Corporation are more than optimistic over the outlook . . . . Plant extension is talked of . . . .

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 18—(CP)— Mining shares prices declined moderately from the opening on Toronto Stock Exchange today, mainly under the influence of the suggestion of fraud in the Toronto Commissioner's report on the recent market action of Robt. Kinnes. Nearly all the Quebec gold and Ontario Ontario issues followed but a rally in the recent weakness in the Toronto gold section. O'Brien, after sinking to $1.30, recovered to $1.32, being better than 11, to show a loss of the minimum fraction for the day.

Activity centered in the base metals. Noranda declined a point to $54, Hudson Bay 4 and Sherritt a few cents. Fend Oralle improved. The oils were irregularly lower.

CHARRED BODIES FOUND ON STAIRS

Mother And Two Children Burn But Father And Baby Saved

Zanesville, Wis., Dec. 17.—(AP)—A mother and two children were burned to death early today in a fire, that destroyed their home. The father saved himself and his four months old baby by jumping from the second story.

The woman, Mrs. William Ryan, 40, was found dead at the top of the stairway in the two-story frame and brick building. The charred bodies of Frances 6, and Billy 8, were found under a bed. In front of the kitchen stove was the dog's carcass.

Ryan, and the baby he held in his arms when he leaped, were taken to a hospital.

An explosion, believed caused by an accumulation of coal gas, started the fire.

NO LIMIT ON SPEED?

Toronto, Dec. 17.—(CP)— Beyond admitting he understood a private member intended to introduce a bill abolishing the speed limit in Ontario, Premier Mitchell Hepburn today would not discuss the subject.

At Queen's Park it is was believed the subject would be debated at the next session of the Legislature.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today was pop and ma's wedding anniversity, and this morning at breakfast they were deciding where to meet downtown this afternoon so they could eat dinner in a resterant and go to the theater, ma saying, Well I have a good act of shopping to do, so the most convenient place for me to meet you would be at Hookbinder's front entrance next to the statue of Amos Hookbinder.

Good, then if by some odd chance you're late as usual, I'll have somebody to hawk to, pop said, and, ma said, Why, who do you mean?

I mean Amos Hookbinder, pop said, And ma said, But come to think of it my last step will probebly be Marks and Marcus's because that's the only store that handles Lord Baltimore sheets.

That seems like a good enough place to meet, Okay, I'll meet you in front of Marks and Marcus. I dont suppose they'd have unless I done you, or no, I'll just you if we're to meet there, otherwise I'll meet you at the Hookbinder statue, is that clear?

Perfectly, I'll find you at the grandstand plase if you call me up and at the fountain in the square if you dont call me, but how about if you call me before I pop and ma said, O, I'll stop for you at your office.

Glass Tube Removed From Croc's 'Innards'

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP)—University of Toronto's nameless six-year-old crocodile today ate its best meal in three years.

In an operation which required almost an hour, Dr. Alan Sweard, a veterinarian, yesterday removed a four-inch length of glass tubing, lodged in the animal's stomach since 1932. The croc had snapped the tube from a student's hand and swallowed it before anything could be done.

Its appetite and well-being suffered considerably and it was decided to remove the tube as the crocodile could perform its duty by nature study object in comfort.

—DAILY SHORT STORY—

Plumb Centre

By James Hill

The jury filed in. A paper was passed, and the clerk rose to read: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of manslaughter."

Manslaughter! The spectators leaned back with a sigh. The venerable judge cleared his throat and asked the prisoner to rise.

Dan Kilraine knew that he hated Nate Rankin, but the jury's decision gave him an odd shock. Through the dramatic days of the trial he had waited for the conviction of the fall mountaineer, whose gaze had met his own eyes at infrequent intervals. Dan was sure that there had been a secret humor in those clear eyes. But he didn't know, why didn't the man speak out?

His hand faintly trembled as he rubbed the sorrowful wen that was so continuous in his eyeballs this last year. Something inside him urged him to act—act now. He knew that insidious fear held him in its paralyzing grip. And then, if Nate Rankin went to prison there would be no one to prevent his marriage to Cynthia.

Rankin's objection to the marriage had been based on an old family feud. Dan and Cynthia had been sleeping than willing to forget the feud of their ancestors, but the father remained adamant. And for this reason Dan had killed him.

The judge was speaking: "Nate Rankin," His face spoke clearly, the jury has found you guilty of manslaughter. This decision impress me as incorrect and unjust. There is no need to defer the pronouncement of sentence. Have you anything to say?

Dan held breathlessly for the prisoner to speak.

Only one other man had Dan Kilraine ever hated, Martin Whitewood, the dead gambler. Whitewood had shot Cynthia's father in cold blood when the boy was only five. Dan had never forgotten, and when he he...rd that the gambler had been making insinuating remarks about Cynthia Rankin to the banger-on in his saloon, the Sale Damed Into a definite reason.

And now Whitewood was dead, and Nate Rankin convicted of his murder. The evidence had been purely circumstantial. The prisoner had been heard to threaten the dead man on the day or the murder and had later been caught near the body. But no gun had been found. He had admitted owning a pistol of the same calibre which fired the fatal shot, but he claimed it had disappeared. He would say nothing further except that he was not guilty.

Rankin now stood silent.

"Very well," the judge's voice droned on, "I shall now sentence you—

Something exploded in Dan Kilraine's head. He was on his feet "Wait! Wait!" He realized this screaming voice was his own.

"Rankin is not guilty, Yo' Honah," he shouted, "I am the one. I killed Martin Whitewood!"

He almost ran down the aisle to the little, inclosure. The entire room held the stillness of death. Dan's hand reached under his arm pit and drew out a large old-fashioned revolver. This he slid over the table to the prosecuting attorney, whose usually cynical face was a picture of blank astonishment.

"That gun killed Whitewood," Dan's voice was now low but clear. "It's belonged to my father. Whitewood murdered him seventeen years ago. I never forgot, so, when I was told he was talkin', I shot and killed him."

"If Yo' Honah, please," Nate Rankin was speaking in his rich mountain drawl, "I do hev somethin' to say and would like right well to say hit now."

He turned to the courtroom. "Cynthy, come heah," his voice was soft but commanding.

A girl of perhaps twenty, dressed in the homely garments of the hill people, rose and came forward. She walked with the springy lightness of open spaces, and the face under the long hair was exceptionally pretty.

"The tall man pointed to the prosecutor. "Give Mr. Jackson, theah, my gun," he instructed the girl. She blushed, but stooped quickly and drew from under her skirt a Mg .44 revolver, striking, in similar do the one Dan had shoved across the table a few minutes before...

"That is the reason the sheriff couldn't find my gun," Rankin explained, with an apologetic smile. "Cynthy has worn his next her own—I mean, since the night I shot Whitewood, I killed him fo' good cause and that is the reason, I pleaded not guilty."

He paused and looked at Dan quizzically. "I always said you hogs, Dan." Then he smiled as the young man stared back, fascinated. "Dan," he said, "you're a fine man, even if you are a Kilraine, I guess Cynthy can make out with you all right."

Rankin turned to face the old judge: "Theah was ony one chunk of lead in Whitewood, Yo' Honah." He spoke deliberately. "Just missed; his eyes ain't so good lately. I was only ten yahds away and I can hit a dime plumb certain at fifty feet. We both fired in the same instant, suh."

PRECEDENT NOT SET

London, Dec. 17.—(CP Cable) — The precedence to which the Duke of Windsor is entitled has not so far been determined. But it was understood in informed quarters that he would probably rank next below the Duke of Kent, the King's youngest brother.

Windsor's Dukedom is a royal one and the latest created. In the official precedency list for Great Britain, Dukes are ranked according to their patents of creation.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As Old Timer carried the girl away from the pygmy village into the forest, his heart surged with love. He had found her! He had saved her! Even the terrors of the jungle which lay ahead were forgotten in the ecstasy of his gladness; but soon he must face grim reality.

They hardly spoke, so tense was each of them. At last Old Timer set her down. They could make little progress now while darkness hung over the forest. They must seek some restful refuge from the beasts that stalked this trail and from the pygmies who might pursue them.

After a long search, the ape found three nearly parallel boughs. He cut small branches, laid them crosswise, and covered them with leaves. This was Kali Bwana's bed. Then he groped about until he discovered a place for himself in the lower branches of the tree.

Presently he heard the regular breathing which denoted that his exhausted companion slept. But Old Timer lay awake thinking of her, wondering if they would ever reach safety. Then, from the girl, came mournful, plaintive sounds. "Jerry! Jerry!" she sobbed.

AFTER GEN. FRANCO'S "DOVES OF DEATH" PAID A BOMBING VISIT TO MADRID

Here is the scene of ruin in one of Madrid's principal streets after a rebel bombing. Paving stones are torn up, stores wrecked and street lamps uprooted by Gen. Franco's rebel bomber lines put out of commission. No attempt has been made to estimate the number of deaths in the Spanish capital since start of the siege weeks ago.

REBUFFS AMATEUR UNION

After a five-year-old "article of allegiance" with the Amateur Athletic Union, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will sever its connection according to a report made by Cecil Duncan, president of the hockey association. In his statement Mr. Duncan stated, "The association has found the union to be ineffectual in the matter of endorsement of suspensions imposed by the C.A.H.A. The association therefore believes that a continuation of the affiliation is neither advantageous nor desirable."

HE'S AT IT AGAIN

The Brown Bomber from Detroit, Joe Louis, has started to give the boxing fans some more of those short and sweet shows that last but a few seconds. His latest victim, Eddie Simms of Cleveland, was floored in 18 seconds of the first round. The Bomber seems to be hitting his old stride and should be again at his peak when a chance at either Braddock or Schmeling comes. Louis is seen here with his hand raised as the sign of victory over Simms.

JOE LOUIS KNOCKS OUT EDDIE SIMMS IN 18 SECONDS

Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber from Detroit, knocked out Eddie Simms in 18 seconds of the first round of their scheduled 10 round bout in Cleveland, with a left hook to the head. When Simms attempted to get up he complained of a severe headache and referee Donovan of New York stopped the bout, thus the decision went to Louis on a technical knockout. & CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED sued it had defended the people of the province and the power users from the exactions of the power ring in no uncertain terms. True to its ancient established custom, the Globe in the past has been foremost in its advocacy of public rights, and in its denunciation of the nefarious wrong involved in the Hydro contracts.

HEPBURN CHARGES

MAIL AND EMPIRE POLICY

"The Globe's stand has been in marked contrasts to that of the former Mail and Empire, the latter paper has been outright in its advocacy of the power interests, but its influence has been nullified by the known fact that it was purchased by Mr. J. W. Killam, its chief owner and financial backer, for the very purpose of putting across the Ottawa Valley power deal, and further by the public knowledge that this gentleman is still interested in very large figures in power contracts. This was the situation when the fact became known that a mining millionaire had suddenly reversed his usual characteristics and was pouring money into the newspaper business.

"It was an amazing spectacle. The gentleman in question had been canvassed and approached and coaxed and cajoled by nearly every promoter of standing in the province, and had a reputation of being a hard man to 'crack'. What an amazing thing it was to find him suddenly opening up the stream of his inexhaustible wealth that the cool waters of public morality might flow peacefully across the provincial landscapes.

REVERSES POLICY

"And what a sad disillusionment! This morning the true purpose of this newspaper enterprise and editorial philanthropy is so clear that he who runs may read. In its leading editorial in Thursday morning's issue the Globe reverses its policy and comes out in tones as unmistakable as it previously used in the opposite direction, now however, in advocacy of the interests, of the financial ring, whose yoke the Government has struck from the necks of the power users. Now that the Globe has taken a stand, let it go the whole way and advocate the complete restoration of the power contracts in their original form.

"Then let me tell the people of Ontario what this would mean. Not only would we have to restore the Hydro rates to what they were previous to the sweeping reductions recently announced, but we would also have to impose upon the power users of Ontario an additional burden of millions of dollars per year. Obviously the money would have to be obtained from some source.

"It would mean the restoration of the clause providing for payment in American funds which had already cost the province, up to 1935, the sum of $645,838.52.

"Not only so, but the people are not forgetting that the former Government agreed to absorb any taxes levied by the Quebec Legislature on the export of power to Ontario. In other words the Ferguson and Henry deals placed us at the mercy of the taxing power of another Legislature. Having in mind the direct insult hurled at the French-Canadians by Col. Drew, who labelled them a defeated race, would it be unreasonable to expect that some time in the future a hostile Government in the Province of Quebec might undertake to retaliate against Ontario by levying a tax even to the extent of $10 a horse power, which we would have to pay.

"There was also a provision in the Rilliam contract which enabled the former owner of the Mail and Empire to withdraw power at any time for resale in Quebec.

"We are now going to lift the curtain and let the people know what has been going on behind the scene during the process of negotiation.

"On assuming office and taking stock and inventory, we realized in no uncertain way that drastic action had to be taken without delay in order to save Ontario's great public utility. Thirty million dollars had already been paid for unsaleable power. This year alone our Quebec power bill would have been $10,-000,000 exclusive of exchange.

"Following the introduction of the bill by the Government, Premier Taschereau sent an emissary to my office, and in the presence of my ministers, stated that Mr. Taschereau asked him to convey to us the threat that unless we took all the power under contract, he would shut off the entire export to Ontario at a time when he knew it was necessary for us to have a certain amount of de-icing power which we were not generating ourselves, for the requirements of Eastern Ontario, and thus, by this method, plunge certain cities in darkness in order to club us into submission.

"We sent the emissary back to Mr. Taschereau with the information that the Eastern Ontario cities would bear with us until such time as we could supply their needs, and in the meantime instead of submitting to the Quebec Premier in his zeal for the power interests, we declared that we were prepared to defend ourselves in an economic war, which would do his province much more damage than it would ours. The Hydro Commission purchased a frequency changer in order to make all of Ontario independent so far as Quebec power was concerned.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH FIRMS

"Notwithstanding this threat we endeavored to carry on peaceful negotiations with the power companies, pointing out to them that under no circumstances could Ontario submit to certain conditions contained in the contracts, and also that we were no financially able to pay for huge blocks of power which we could not resell; and, inasmuch as Hydro was their best customer, our interests were similar. The question of keeping Hydro solvent was almost as much their interest as it was ours. We suggested that the companies get together and see if they could not divide up the amount that we could purchase among themselves in a fair and equitable way. They reported back that they were unable to agree among themselves. We accordingly proclaimed the Act cancelling the old agreements.

"The matter came to a climax when at the Dominion-Provincial Conference at Ottawa, Mr. Taschereau, in the presence of the Attorney-General, the Hon. Peter Heenan, Chester Walters, and myself, again threatened that unless we took all the power he would shut off all export to Ontario, and intimated further that he understood plans were under way to commit sabotage by pulling the plugs on the skidoo gates on the Quebec side of the Chats Falls development, thus rendering Ontario's development at that place useless.

"Fortunately at the moment, we were still in a position to defy Mr. Taschereau, for the frequency changer was in process of installation.

"The next move was for two of the companies to break off negotiations and commence action in the courts. There the matter stands at the present time. We have not been ruthless, as shown by the fact that we have settled with two of the companies.

"The reputation of George Brown and the editors of the Globe who have been his successors cannot be prostituted to such ignoble uses. The purchase of a newspaper is not sufficient to frighten this Government into submission.

"The fight is in its infancy; this Government is determined to protect the power users and industries of the province in their battle with the power ring."

"This is the opening gun in a carefully prepared and considered campaign of propaganda.

"The functions of a government are clear and are universally recognized. They are either obligatory or optional.

"One of the obligatory functions of a government is to protect its citizens from fraud and violence. It, for example, any citizen, or group of citizens sold their children by contract into slavery, the government would not only be justified but the public would demand that such a contract be abrogated without much more, therefore, when an executive, secretly and without the knowledge and consent of the Legislature, has delivered the people into economic bondage and bound them by contract for a period of forty years, is it the duty of the state to intervene and discharge its obligatory function by abrogating the contract.

"In no sense can this be interpreted as repudiation. The power companies still retain all of their physical assets and are free to market their product elsewhere as they see fit."

PONTIFF CANCELS ALL AUDIENCES CHRISTMAS EVE

Constant Vigil Being Kept Over Holy Father by Physicians

BREATHING HEAVIER

Given Food in Small Quantities Every Two Hours

Vatican City, Dec. 19 (AP)—Pope Pius XI reported recovering from partial paralysis of his lower legs, today cancelled his usual Christmas Eve audience with the College of Cardinals and the Papal Court.

The 79-year-old Holy Father reluctantly ordered invitations, issued yesterday, revoked upon the advice of his physicians, it was said.

Informed sources said the Pontiff was influenced by the fact that every unusual exertion during the past few days had been followed by a period of weakness.

Instead of receiving the cardinals, the Pope will see them individually during the next few days in his sickroom.

Again last night, doctors kept a constant vigil over the Pope, nearing the close of the eighth year of his pontificate. His sleep when shortness of breath caused him to gasp and sit up in his bed.

Within and outside the Vatican, authorities awaited news from Pontiff's successor when praises in the Holy See declined Cardinal Pacelli, Papal secretary of State, had taken over temporarily direction of ecclesiastical affairs.

The realization grew Pope Pius might never recover completely.

He passed a reasonably calm night, gaining much more rest than the night before but reliable reports said he had not slept soundly for several nights.

His physicians were anxious he be kept from aggravating the congested blood condition which forced him to bed, two weeks ago in great pain from leg to stomach, and partially paralyzed.

His condition, it was reported authoritatively, had become "exciting-lasting." His resistance continuing to "fluctuate" when he was given food, diminishing with effort and activity.

Food In Small Quantities.

It was declared the Holy Father had been given food in small quantities at two-hour intervals for the past few days because high blood pressure hampered his digestion and made it inadvisable for him to eat more heartily.

Since modern custom dictates a new Pope be chosen from among the Cardinals, theoretically any one is a possible heir to the Papacy. Actually, however, there are few times when the selection would be made. Advanced age, with consequent infirmities and other barriers to the highest office in Roman Catholicism often eliminate most candidates.

Three Is Reading.

Three names prominently cited as regarded now by informed Vatican sources as most likely successors:

Eugenio Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State.

Elia Dalla Costa, Archbishop of Florence.

Isidi Lavitrana, Archbishop of Palermo.

Although Pacelli is the most prominent of the Cardinals by virtue of his office, Vatican prelates said his nationality is overlooked when a new Pope is chosen.

His tenure as Nuncio in Germany and his promotion of concordats with Prussia, Bavaria and Germany, it was said, might create opposition among the seven French Cardinals who might fear he had German sentiments.

It was pointed out, moreover, a Papal Secretary of State seldom is chosen Pope.

Trucking in Transit Issue to be Decided

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 19.—(CP)—Whether trucking firms may send goods in transit by truck over Ontario Highways will be decided by the Ontario Municipal Board at which officials today announced would likely be handed down next Friday.

In a test application heard Dec. 12 written argument was ordered submitted Dec. 22. The application was made by Earl J. Williams, Windsor trucker, to use No. 2 Highway to bring new automobiles consigned through Ontario from Detroit to Buffalo. Four other truckers have similar applications and their cases hinge on decision in the Williams' case.

Hepburn Charges Threat Used to Back Power Contracts

Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn

Premier Frederic C. C. Taschereau

"Interior view of the Ontario-owned power plant at Chats Falls, development of which was hastened with cancellation of power contracts with Quebec companies.

In a painly worded statement discussing the Ontario government's position with regard to canceled Hydro contracts with Quebec companies, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn declared that every possible legal examination was under discussion the then premier of Quebec, L. A. Taschereau threatened an export blockade against Ontario should the contracts be cancelled. Premier Hepburn also averred that ex-Premier Taschereau intimated that sabotage of the Chat's Falls power plant on the Ontario and Quebec boundary might make Ontario's planned Chats Falls development useless. The contracts were cancelled and Quebec power companies, former holders of the contracts brought court action against the province. Premier Hepburn intimated that new contracts, equitable of the present Ontario government, would receive favorable consideration.

London Press Voices Approval Of Eden's Address in Commons

Agreed Preservation of Non-intervention Agreement Should Operate

GIVEN VIVID PICTURE

London, Dec. 19 (CP)-(Havas)—A large portion of the London press today voiced approval of Anthony Eden's determination to persevere with the British non-intervention agreement, which the foreign secretary announced to the House of Commons last night before it adjourned for the Christmas holidays.

Despite its admitted weaknesses, the non-intervention agreement is the only "rational course open to us" most of the press agreed.

Eden's warning that the attitude of France and Great Britain alone stayed off the danger of a general war met general agreement.

"This murderous conflict cannot be regulated from London or Paris, however," the Daily Telegraph pointed out. "That depends on the combatants themselves and those who persist in adding fuel to the flames."

The Daily Express declared that other countries ought to keep out of Spain no matter what happens. This country at any rate intends to do that."

Not In Charge of Trains.

The News-Chronicle, Liberal, did not join the chorus of praise, pointing out Eden was powerless to be the maintenance of peace on the concept of two Fascist powers to keep on pretending to observe an agreement which, in fact, by himself admits they are not observing."

Concrete indication of the government's determination to avoid becoming entangled in Spain was given by Eden in his assertion that existing laws would be invoked to prevent the enlistment of British volunteers on either side.

He also emphasized the government would continue to seek "international action" to bar recruiting.

The House was given a vivid but gloomy picture of the situation in Madrid by two members of the committee of non-intervention, Duff Cooper and Lord Plymouth.

"Two responsible states of Europe have been interfering in the civil war in a way absolutely unheard of in any civil war before," Capt. Macnamara, Conservative, informed the House. He reported that the enlistment of Germans for service in Spain had caused widespread discontent in Germany, but asserted he could see the manufactured large numbers of Soviet troops in the government ranks.

MRS. SIMPSON'S AUNT AT CANNES

Mrs. D. B. Merryman Had Remained in London to Close the Simpson House

Cannes, France, Dec. 19 (AP)—Mrs. D. B. Merryman, Mrs. Wallis Simpson's "Aunt Bessie", arrived here today to join her favorite niece in her Riviera retreat.

Mrs. Merryman fled from England during the last days of the constitutional crisis, Mrs. Merryman stayed behind to look after her house in Cumberland Terrace.

Mrs. Merryman, whose home is in Washington, D.C., acted as Mrs. Simpson's chaperone during the latter men's Mediterranean cruise with King Edward.

Two husky gendarmes paced the roadway leading to the villa "Fiet" as an added guarantee of privacy during the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Simpson's hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, said the woman for whose love King Edward gave up his throne hoped to take a part in a round of holiday visits.

The guards were requested to prevent crowds from following her about as they pave on previous occasions when she left the seclusion of the villa.

In addition to the gendarmes, two private detectives remained on duty at the gates and two Scotland Yard detectives stood watch over the villa.

FRENCH AVIATRIX BADLY INJURED IN PARACHUTE JUMP

Holder of French Altitude Record Breaks Ribs When Plane Crashes

LANDS IN SWAMP

Paris, Dec. 19 (AP)—Maryse Hilts, feminine flier who last summer broke both the French men's and women's altitude records, was seriously injured today in a parachute jump.

She bailed out of her plane when the ship developed motor trouble during a trial flight near Istres.

The ship had been brought to France from the United States by Michel Detroyat, French pilot. Detroyat was standing nearby when the plane plunged to earth. He hurried to the woman pilot's assistance.

The feminine flier landed in a swamp, breaking two ribs and suffering many lacerations. Her plane burned itself in the boggy ground nearby. The woman pilot was taken to a hospital at Marseilles.

Officials said the trial flight had been an attempt to break the women's world speed record.

Maryse Hilts received the altitude awards June 26 when the French Aero Club recognized her claims of several new altitude marks and records, ascended 48,247 feet.

On August 11, however, a new claim for the French men's record was registered by Lieut. Georges Detre who ascended 48,676 feet.

311 DIE IN MINE

New Delhi, India, Dec. 19 (CP-Havas)—The toll of those killed or entombed by an explosion yesterday in a mine near Asansol, Bengal, rose today to 311.

Although rescuing operations were being pushed with all speed, little hope was held for any of the entombed miners.

Three were killed at the entrance to the pits by the explosion.

FOOD SHORTAGE IN GERMANY GRAVEST OF MANY YEARS

Close to Depleting Its Resources Both of Money And Food

RATION CARDS OUT

War Industries Booming And Unemployed at a Minimum

Berlin, Dec. 19 (AP)—Germany stood face to face today with one of its gravest food shortages in years.

The nation has come so close to depleting its resources, both of money and food, officials have expressed fear they would be able to find no adequate solution for a crisis they expect by April.

A chain of adverse financial circumstances, experts pointed out, has created a vicious circle in which prospective plans for averting the crisis would plunge the Reich into other acute problems.

The stringencies imposed on German households in preserving the dwindling food supply have produced yesterday by the issuance of ration cards for butter and lard.

Under new orders, allowances of fats will be prorated according to the age of families. Purchases will be limited to 80 per cent. of October consumption each month, starting January 1.

Meat Increase Importations.

Agricultural estimates agreed that Germany must increase wheat importations from 1,000,000 tons to 2,000,000 tons in 1938 to 180,000 tons as compared with 60,000 tons the year before.

By April, according to estimates considered reliable, the Reich's wheat reserves will have been exhausted. Rich, arbitrary quota of fats necessary of economics, food purchases would be drained from Germany's last gold reserves.

Posters have been put out for economical use of bread, especially to Great Britain.

Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, replied that there would be far safer to provide were there not proof Germany's economic difficulty arose from the nation's vast rearmament program.

In response, German economists contend the whole recovery program of the Nazi regime has been founded on war ministry contracts disaster would follow sudden suspension of rearming.

War Industries Boom.

War industries are booming and it is the Nazi party's claim that unemployment has been reduced from 6,000,000 at the start of Nazi rule in 1933 almost to zero today, because of the introduction of compulsory labor and military service.

Hence, Germany's leaders, the Reich must maintain its military program for the present time.

As one escape from the vicious circle, Hjalmar Schacht, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht and Joachim von Ribbentrop, Ambassador to London, have been reported to favor a plan to:

Whatever merits are contained in the proposal for colonies to help food possessions be returned, authorities declared, it would take some time to solve the knotty German problem.

Germany's worries until the next crops are harvested, therefore, have become a paramount issue.

Everywhere one looks, the omnipresent word "Kriegwirtschaft," meaning war economy. Germany who regarded the years 1914-18 and 1918 'comment in their private talks, as the years of Germany's food rationing plan is "just like in war".

EPIDEMIC OF THEFTS OF CHRISTMAS TREES

The epidemic of the theft of Christmas trees, placed in front of homes for decoration purposes, is becoming prevalent, and police are warning the public. During the past 24 hours two such thefts were reported to the police, Farnham building on Bleecker and East Moira Streets reported similar incidents to the authorities today. "Whether these trees are being stolen for the purpose of sale or are taken by people for their own use we cannot ascertain, but Chief Ketcheson is going to be and examples will be made of persons apprehended in the act of stealing such property," stated Chief Kidd this morning as he added it wasn't always the small children involved in the theft, but more particularly the younger.

DUKE OF WINDSOR REGAINS VITALITY BY EXERCISING

RETIRES EARLY

Trying Days of Abdication Have Left Their Mark on Him

Enzesfeld, Austria, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor, intent on building himself up and holding his weight at a healthy 143 pounds arose early today for a vigorous round of setting-up exercises.

His friends said the abdicated monarch intended to regain his vitality in every possible way. The trying days when he struggled for the throne love and empire have left their mark, they explained.

His regular program, after the setting-up exercises, calls for a round of golf and nine-pins. Then he submits to the 232-pound French masseur of his host, Baron Eugene De Rothschild who pummels him until the flesh glows.

The most popular sleeping hours he has known in years, his intimates added, have helped in bringing him back to health.

The cares of state seemed far from his mind late last night as the duke wound up his athletic day with a game of nine-pins on the 50-foot alley some 800 yards from the chateau.

Throwing off his gray lumber jacket, disclosing a gray sport shirt, the former King bowled one ball and offered the slow boat to the Baroness.

After she won the match with little trouble they dashed back to their chairs where movies were being shown. At the end, the strains of "God Save the King" floated out through the night and the lights began to go out.

The Princes' dog, Chew-Chew and Edward's Cairn Terrier, Slippers, renewed their feud yesterday. Chew-Chew was the doubtful victor. Slippers was packed off to a dog hospital but it also took a veterinarian to restore Chew-Chew.

Message of Cheer Issued by Gov't

Ottawa, Dec. 19 (CP)—Christmas and New Year's greetings to the people of Canada were issued today by Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Secretary of State, as follows:

"It affords me great pleasure to extend to all my fellow citizens the heartiest greetings for Christmas and New Year's. The close of the year 1937 may bring to our families joy and contentment. Signs are abundant that substantial prosperity is under way in our social organization. The steps now generally availed return to normal conditions in rapidly approaching. The courage and fortitude displayed by our population inspire the hope that whatever may yet remain to be attained in this regard are very encouraging and we hope they reflect a condition which may have a beneficial influence on every one.

The government is pursuing its policy of peace and prosperity. We are also, above all, in the year 1937 will be one of Home Endeavor. Economy, peaceful relations between nations and the problems which arise which might jeopardize the real progress lately achieved in our country."

Spanish Communists Ask For Unified Command

Believe Division of Control Is Affecting Success Of Defense

FIGHTING EASES

Madrid, Dec. 19 (AP)—A Communist demand for a "real single command" of Madrid's defence found favor today with all leading members of the popular front.

At the same time Premier Francisco Largo Caballero banned Christmas merrymaking, at the front and in Madrid, while Minister Prieto has been leaving the lines and going home for Christmas would be disciplined.

There was general insistence that "victorious decentralization schemes such as set-up of many independent junias" must cease. It was not clear however, what officer would be appointed to the single command.

Talavera De La Reina, Spain, Dec. 19 (CP)—Heavy winter weather today reduced the tempo of hostilities around Madrid.

Insurgent forces continued to press an enveloping movement west of Madrid, and in the Guadalajara sector and around Escorial, about thirty miles northwest of the capital.

Ultimatum Delivered to Marshal Chang to Return Chiang Expires in 3 Days

Open Skepticism Expressed General Will not Be Released

PLANES ON WAY

Wife of Governor Of Kansu Province Believed Murdered

Nanking, China, Dec. 19.—(AP)—The Nanking Government, suddenly switching its tactics against rebellious Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, ordered tonight that punitive military operations against Shan-Pu rebel headquarters be reopened tomorrow unless Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek is released.

"The Government's punitive expedition, bombing operations and any other form of attack is deemed necessary, recommencing Sunday morning, if the Generalissimo is not released before then," a spokesman announced.

Three more days of grace in which to end the rebellion and release General Chang had earlier been awarded by officials in the mutinous young Marshal.

The time extension came just as the previous "final" ultimatum to Marshal Chang demanding the Generalissimo's immediate return expired.

Dr. T. V. Soong, brother-in-law of the imprisoned Chiang was understood to be busy in these hours hoping for Shan-Pu where Marshal Chang has held the Generalissimo prisoner since the mutiny, of his troops a week ago.

Although the National Government said not a deadline of six p.m. (5 a.m. E.S.T.) for the release of Generalissimo, an authoritative spokesman had expressed open skepticism that Chiang would be released at that time.

French Executioner Wishes to Retire

Paris, Dec. 19.—(AP)—France's famed headsman, Anatole Deibler, hereditary executioner for the third republic, announced his intention today to retire after presiding at dozens executions for half a century.

Weary of the Macabre position in which he has performed 270 executions, the aged Monsieur de Paris informed the Government he wished to quit public life in time for Christmas, and the day, bewildered and bewhiskered, will invite the dining room and bid under the table.

MERRY YULETIDE IS USHERED IN

Faculty Students, Friends Of Albert College Hold Festival

In the rich setting of Ackerman Hall which rested in the centre of glances in the halls of Old England which in ages past rang with the merriment of Yuletide, Albert College held their Yuletide banquet. Faculty, faculty's guests, and friends talking about the festive spread in hearty enjoyment of time-honored feasting on turkey, cranberry sauce, and other viands. The great hall decked in the symbols of the season was filled with banqueters. The function was under faculty auspices.

Principal Burt Howard brought greetings to students, faculty and other guests, his address being replete with optimism as to the future of the work of the school and the fellowship established and colored by the spirit of Christmas. His written message on the programs carried out this spirit.

"Christmas must not merely be an event which can be observed and forgotten. It ought to be the everrecurring fire which yearly rekindles the flame of love and peace in the hearts of the world. It is the transforming power of Christmas will be a perpetual experience. On this day the Word became Flesh, and dwelt among us. Let us, in our globe-like spirit with life—our life. In this joyous season, I commend to Carols "Good King Wenceslas", "The First Noel", "We Three Kings of Orient Are", and "Holy Night", were sung by the company led by Mr. Ross Hamilton. Dr. Percy Franklin presiding at the piano. A double quartette, Misses Hamilton, Franklin, Sansome, Clarke, Atkinson, McIntosh and Wardley, was heard in "The Three Kings" and "Midnight Clear".

Mr. Harold Kennedy, president of the Students' Council delivered the Christmas message which was speaking, entirely.

Principal Morrison of the Ontario School for the Deaf and the chairman of Albert College Board of Governors brought greetings from the College Board and the latter institutions. Dr. G. H. Noble, president of Alma College, Stratford, congratulated the students on the opportunities which they enjoy.

Mr. Arthur Wynne, pupil of Albert College Conservatory, sang a solo.

Challenge to Young Men

Principal Morrison, Rev. F. N. Baker, D.D., delivered an inspiring message on the Christmas theme, holding the promise of peace and happiness in a world torn by greed, hatred and war, and holding high before the students an ideal of service to God and fellowmen in this present age of the world. He said:—

"Principal and Faculty, Students, Young Women and Young Men of Albert:

"Long centuries ago an ancient Hebrew poet thus prophesied:

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be called Wonderful Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of His government and of peace, there shall be no end." Part of this prophecy was fulfilled nineteen hundred years ago, when in Bethlehem, a babe was born whose advent was heralded by the Angel song, "Glory to God in the Highest and on earth Peace and good Will." an event which we shall celebrate in a few days.

"Nearly two thousand years have rolled by since the child Jesus Immanuel came to save people from their sins and the world from strife and injustice. As we look out on the world today, torn by war, hatred, race suicide, by greed, injustice and war, we realize that the latter part of Isaiah's vision is still far from fulfilment. And yet the prophet holds true. That day will come when the Kingdoms of this world will become united under the sway of the King of Kings, the Prince of Peace.

"Some of my generation is well nigh ended, and the results of the past days, lie in your hands, people we throw the torch, you with health, energy, and optimism, with unequalled opportunity for scholarship, culture, and Christian development. On you rests the responsibility. To you is given the opportunity of playing your part to make this dream of the ages come true. What a glorious task!

"Merry Christmas, glad New Year and God Bless you all."

TURKEY IS KING IN CROWDED MART, PRICE 25 CTS. LB.

Quality as Good as Former Years And Buyers Plentiful

EGGS 35 CTS. DOZ.

Dairy Produce Plentiful With Butter at Two Pounds For 55 Cts.

His Honor King Gobbler held a crowded court this morning at the city market, when one of the largest crowds ever to assemble in the inside mart descended on the annual avalanche upon one of the finest displays of turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens that ever Christmas Day dinners ever shown before a Belleville public.

There were large turkeys, small ones, plump thin ones, turkeys to fit every pot and purse with a general price which averaged the high quality of twenty-five cents the pound. And the Christmas dinner loving public was in a buying mood. At an early hour the inner mart was thronged with potential purchasers. There was very little haggling and very little evasion of prices. As producers appeared, ed to be satisfied, with the current prices and the buyers appeared to be satisfied, to pay it. It was a happy day for all, for the city and the buying and selling public with a noticeable Christmas spirit permeating the air.

Old Mother Goose had second place in the feathered exhibition. There were fairly stable at around twenty cents the pound, although the majority of the birds sold by the "chunk" as one vendor put it. Geese were offered at this variety of sizes and weights with a fine representation of fowl as a part of the buying public.

Chickens were numerous and what few were there were pushed aside by the fine bargains offered from the farmer-vendors. The majority of the chickens sold at prices ranging from ninety cents to one dollar and a quarter per pair, the latter selling at from fifty cents up.

Ducks were fairly plentiful and sold at around 35 cents per lb. Side attention of the marketers. They were offered at the usual ranging from ninety cents to as high as one dollar and a quarter each. There were some fine specimens present and the enticing appearance of some of the big fellows caused a buyer selling in front of them.

Dairy produce was fairly plentiful with butter maintaining a steady price of 25 cents per lb. with two pound rolls selling in the main part for 55 cents each. While eggs were offered at 35 cents dozen and thirty cents the half-pint and twenty-seven cents the pint, continual with the "A" selects moving briskly. Cheese was in keeping with the lower grades and the pullet variety moving well at from 25 to 30 cents the pound.

Adding to the Christmas atmosphere on the outside market was a fine display of Christmas trees which were offered at the low price of twenty-five cents each.

A few staple vegetables were in evidence on the outside mart with carrots, turnips, beets and colored holding steady at their all winter prices for bushel lots. Potatoes were not plentiful but the fine samples offered noted a slight rise over the prices of a week ago, selling at $1.25 for ninety pound bags. Cabbages and onions did not arrive at a late hour this morning.

Apples in the latter apples were fairly plentiful with the Snows and MacIntosh Reds holding firm at $2 per bushel lot. Northern Spies were quoted at the same price and Delmar Greens going at $1.50 per hamper.

Butternuts were quoted at five cents per berry box and hickory nuts at 10 cents the quart.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local police today are endeavouring to locate a motor car driver, who is believed to have struck a stop sign post at the corner of the intersection of Catherine and Dunbar Streets late last night and damaged the sign considerably. A local citizen today informed the authorities that a stop sign had been mail box at that intersection had been badly damaged. Investigations revealed the damage to have been done by a motor vehicle. An Alexander Street resident, whose name this police refuse to reveal, complained that his mail box had been removed from the fence on his property. Whether the number is being taken and used for fun could not be established although a number of boards are missing, the boards being taken at different intervals, it was stated.

William Woods, of this city, was apprehended on Church Street early today by P.C. Evans following a complaint registered by a local young lady. Woods was taken to the police station for questioning and later permitted to return home. The woman in question complained that Woods and a companion had directed obscene language towards her in a local restaurant. Further investigations in the matter are pending.

After patrolling the local highway detachment for the past week Traffic Officer Chas. Heffron returned to Toronto this morning. Motorcycle Officer Ernie Spring has concluded a week's holidays and returned to duty today.

EXTOLS SERVICE OF YOUNG NURSE TO BABY QUINTS

Labor And Devotion of Yvonne Leroux in Critical First Days Recalled by Colleagues

(The following story on the part of Yvonne Leroux placed in the care of the Dionne Quintuplets was written for the Canadian Press by Louise de Kiriline, former head nurse of the quintuplets.)

CALLANDER, Ont. (CP)—It seems a pity that Yvonne Leroux should get out of the lives of the Dionne quintuplets without something being said about the truly great part she played in the first days of the tiny children they are.

She has been replaced in the Dafoe Nursery by Clare Tremblay, a French-Canadian girl from Windsor who will teach the quints their ABC's.

It has been decided the Dionne children no longer need her care but it should never be forgotten that Yvonne Leroux's untiring labor and her devotion were undoubtedly one of the most important factors which, outside of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, kept the babies alive.

Her first connection with the children began at noon, on Monday, noon of May 33, 1934, there came a call to the Register of Nurses of the province of Ontario, at Toronto.

"Please send a French-speaking nurse to Callander on the case in Corbeil."

It was a little unusual for a nurse to be required for private duty outside of the city, but except for the French-speaking part there was little to reveal the singularity of this particular case.

Miss Leroux, a young girl with smiling, shy eyes and gentle manners, was on the list of nurses who only just sewn upon the fresh white uniforms that they had received in strenuous duty, happened to be the one in line on the Register for the next call.

Blissfully oblivious of what was awaiting her, the young girl packed up the few things she needed in her bag, threw some extra clothes into a toothbrush and so on. "I had better take a hot water bottle with me," she added to her self-preparations.

"I may not be very much to Callander, but it is a long way to the country."

I do not know exactly how she felt when at five o'clock in the afternoon she found herself gazing down upon the Corbeil farm, remaining not one ordinary baby but FIVE premature creatures, pointed, smaller, more unfinished than she had ever dreamed a living baby could be. Nor do I know if she fully realized then the significance of the responsibility and the responsibilities, which fate had decided to place upon her young shoulders, that she was anything but mildly alarmed by what she saw, a feeling which she soon developed in the exacting and manifold duties of her unique task.

Kept Close to Babies

The first night was not so bad. She was fresh and unjured and she had had a good sleep. Many interveen feedings and preparing for the next ones with the very limited facilities at hand, but she managed. And miraculously the tiny babies did not die during the night. Then came the second day clung to life, survived. They lived and flourished in the very midst of the flutter of shallow breaths.

The next day and the next night, and more days and nights Yvonne was there. She was there, almost unbelievably. Each day she was more hollow-eyed, more droopingly tired, more pathetically thin, but which could be given her by the Red Cross Society, by Dr. Dafoe, by Grandmother, and the babies' aunt, an efficient practical nurse.

But Yvonne was the one who never left the babies, who kept them warm in their cots, who filled the water bottle before others could be found to perform the simplest task. She was the one who took up the duties when the others left off, never failing, even though she must have had a few hours' sleep fully twenty-four hours after she crawled into the dark parlor of the discontinued Dionne house. Marguerite days and five nights she was like a clock which was never wound, ticking away, never and foolishly until the very last energy had gone out of the tiny bodies.

Perhaps it can be said, that Yvonne Leroux did not do any more than any other nurse would have done. It is quite possible that any other nurse would have done as well in her place during the days when Yvonne was successful as she was in her unconscious task.

It may be so, but it can never be proved. For Yvonne Leroux has the best of reasons for her success to back her forever. Here Yvonne was the girl who had the three over-delicate infants through the most dangerous days of life. Here was the inexperienced but level-headed judgment which stood between the babies and the slightest error in the doctor's orders throughout the very long night, to estimate exactly the seriousness of each wave of shock weakness, which time and again threatened to take the babies away. Without it the doctor's clever guidance would have availed little, and he would have been as if it never existed.

And now Yvonne Leroux has been disconnected from the babies. It is inevitable perhaps both for her own sake and for the sake of the babies. But it seems a little sad to think that it has been necessary to sacrifice the presence in the surroundings of the babies of the only woman who, next to the woman who bore them, by indisputable reason of her part in their saving of their lives, must bear to them a very special quality of love.

ULTIMATUM

The additional days of grace it will be believed, were given Chang to allow completion of a compromise which was understood to already have been tentatively agreed on.

Fighting Ends

Despite the seemingly well-grounded hope of an immediate end to the revolt crack divisions of the Loyalist army tightened their grip on the rebel stronghold of Suiyuan.

Should negotiations fail completely and the Nanking Government acquire without the generalissimo's return, they were under orders to march through to his capital.

One notable victim of the mutiny, for which it was first reported the generalissimo himself had been slain, was officially announced to be Shao Yuan-Shing, political historian and member of Chiang's staff.

Shao died from 13 as a result of wounds received during the coup d'etat.

Shao had sailed Chinese newspapers in Toronto, Oral, and Victoria, B.C.

Planes On War.

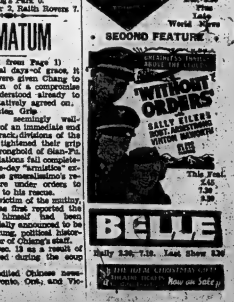
Shanghai, Dec. 19 (CP)—Reinforcements and planes left this morning today for Hankiu to bring back Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his imprisoned aides, according to an unconfirmed report here.

Further favored news of a three-day ultimatum sent to Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang by the Nanking government.

Semi-official translations were presenting today the undersized one proposition made by Nanking to the rebel Marshal, Chang Hsueh-Liang in command of the troops resisting the Nanking invasion of Suiyuan Province.

T. V. Soong, brother-in-law of Chiang Kai-Shek is due today for Sian, to take up negotiations for the release of the latter's release. Representatives of Gen. Yen Hsi-Shan, Shansi warlord, were also in Nanchi today for the same purpose.

Refused to Bargain.



In an interview with Central News Gen. Chiang Ting-Wen, Chiang's aide and fellow captive, described how Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek had refused to bargain with his captors. He rejected their proposals submitted to him by the rebel marshal.

"If you compose me as your superior, you must release me," Chiang said, according to Chiang Ting-Wen. "If not, kill me and be a traitor to your country."

Chiang Kaneh-Liang's attitude changed, it was said, after government planes bombed Wutaian in Shensi. He then offered to release Chiang Ting-Wen to confer.

London, Dec. 19 (CP-Reuters)—The Reuters News Agency reported today that according to Chiang Ting-Wen, Chiang Kaneh-Liang have expanded the ultimatum to Chiang Kai-Shek, governor of Kansu Province, a close friend and follower of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

CHRISTMAS RUSH ON IN ENGLAND

King And Queen to Leave For Sandringham on Tuesday

By GEORGE MARSHALTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 19 (CP Cable)—The "Christmas rush" today is in full swing. Slowly moving traffic thronged in the streets and stores filled with shoppers, as Londoners made a more generous Yuletide.

It is estimated that around £40,000,000 ($200,000,000) will be shared among 30,000,000 members of the clubs clubs, Christmas Clubs and other Christmas savings schemes.

The King and Queen, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose will leave London probably Tuesday for Sandringham where they will spend Christmas.

The tenants and servants at Sandringham will each receive a royal Christmas gift. Scrolls of prize beef and packets of groceries will be distributed.

On the Queen's list are also the servants and retainers of her father's household, Glamis Castle, and those at St. Paul's, Walden-bury, where she spent her girlhood.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE SCALING HEIGHTS

Fourth Year As Contract Actor And No. 1 Box Office Attraction

Hollywood, Dec. 19 (AP)—Shirley Temple, the sunlit-ed-dollar baby they found in a five-cent picture, began her fourth year today as a contract actress.

Three years ago, Dec. 18, 1933, she was an unknown little girl, working on a week-to-week basis in a series of one-reel baby pictures. On that day, she came with some 149 other children—most of whom also had dimples and curls—to try out for a brief song-and-dance bit in a musical film.

Her box-office stature is twice that of Garbo. Executives of her studios estimate 340,000,000 people—a number twice the size of the population of the United States—have paid to see her on the screen.

Theatre men voted her the leading box-office attraction for 1936. She is the only player of either sex or any nation, to get it twice in a row.

In England, she out-ranked even the reigning native favorite, Gracie Fields, in the opinion of British theatre men. She is the only American ever to receive this rating.

She has made 12 feature pictures. Studio heads declared each film cost an average $500,000—cheap as features go—and grossed $3,000,000 each.

Her original contract stipulated a $150-a-week salary. Today, at well-informed sources say she is paid per picture—$175,000 per film. It is estimated she has earned more than $1,250,000 in studio salaries, purchased a third a month apart from advertising "pickups."

Freight Train Derailed West of Chalk River

Chalk River, Ont., Dec. 18—(CP)—Transcontinental Canadian Pacific Railway trains were delayed about eight hours, this morning by derailment of eight cars of a freight train at Mackey's Station, 30 miles west of here. Chalk River is about 100 miles north of Ottawa.

Derailment, occurred about midnight, from an unascertained cause, and passenger trains between Montreal and Winnipeg were held up until wrecking crews cleared the track. No one was injured.

Four passenger trains were held up when the freight cars left the rails. No. 1, the Imperial Limited, westbound was delayed two hours and another westbound, No. 7, the Dominion, two hours. No. 2 and No. 8, eastbound trains, were delayed eight hours and two hours, 40 minutes, respectively.

Dutch Princess Seeks Permission For Marriage

The Hague, The Netherlands, Dec. 18—(AP)—Crown Princess Juliana and her fiance, Prince Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld, took the first legal step today toward their marriage Jan. 7.

While cheering crowds gathered in front of the 15th-century home hall the royal couple drove up in a sleek roadster.

Just like any other Dutch couple they had come to ask the permission of Mayor S. J. R. de Monchy for their wedding. The request was written in the Crown Princess' own handwriting and signed by both of them.

'Messiah' Brilliantly Sung By Choir of John St. Church

Miss Leona Riggs Directs Magnificent Performance of Oratorio

SOLOISTS' FINE WORK

Memorable Work at Organ By Mr. Alex Gordon, Highly Praised

Handel's "Messiah" the greatest of all musical works on the theme of the advent of Christ was brilliantly sung by the choir of John Street United Church directed by Miss Leona Riggs, choir director, before a gathering of some seven hundred in the John Street United Church on Friday evening. The four soloists gave outstanding contribution to the total effect. The organist, Mr. Alex Gordon, gave an unrivalled performance.

No more fitting vehicle to usher in the music of the Christmas season and to lift the Christmas spirit to adoration could have been chosen than "The Messiah", which is marked by those supreme qualities of expression which Handel alone possessed. It is the supreme musical expression, which has never been surpassed and which possesses a timelessness which makes it a treasury of music for each new century.

This noble work calls for supreme expression, for it is at the very essence of the Christian inspiration. Choirs attempting this oratorio assume a heavy task, the director is placed under a great responsibility in direction of chorus and in the choice of soloists who have the small part in the performance. These must, as choir and conductor, act well as on the parts taken by the soprano, contralto, tenor and bass were met in a manner probably never equalled and assuredly never surpassed in Belleville. No musical event in years of its life has been heard in this city.

The Work of the Chorus

The choir, one of the largest in the city, has been under the training of Miss Riggs for some years and the result is apparent to every music lover. The magnificence of the music which marked the services of John Street Church before the recent fire was well known and the manner in which this organization met the challenge of the demands of "The Messiah" realized the fondest hopes of lovers of choral music. In its performance on Friday evening the choir was like a real organ, every voice subduing itself to the total effect. The singing satisfied the highest test for unity of expression which every great work requires. The choir sang as one voice. Its volume of tone was completely satisfying while it still possessed the clearness and sweetness of the minor passages. In every line of the work the distinction was observed for the phrasing was perfect, the timing precise, the quality of tone round and warm, and the sections balanced to an unusually fine degree. As the work itself is a "masterpiece of one mind, so last evening's performance bore all the evidences of similar unity in the conducting. Naturally the choir reached its finest achievement in "The Hallelujah Chorus", where the spirit of music seems to shine forth to break through the bounds of expression and reaches a loftiness of inspiration and purity of tone, and merging of all the elements, choir, organ and soloists and director.

"Hallelujah Chorus"

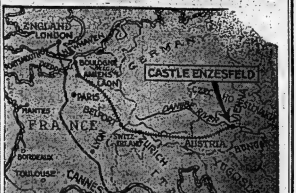
This grandest of all choruses swelled from the voices of choir and soloists, gained with the magnificence of modern pipe organ to give the highest expression of art. Beyond this music seemingly can go no farther—it has reached the heaven of expression. As the choir with superb conducting by Miss Riggs was clearly marked in every word, every musical phrase and in roundness of the sustained effect. In the early part of the work, the chorus "For Unto us a Child is Born", was another of those which called forth highest satisfaction in its assurance.

From the opening chord of the first chorus to the close this matchless work of effort, combination of thought and expression, and clearness of enunciation were observed.

During the performance the high, sat tribute such a work can receive was given. The audience sat silent, as if in awe at the greatness of a greatest work, in fact before a great choir interpreting greatly a work of the highest of musical conception. As the close following the time-honored custom the audience stood for "The Hallelujah Chorus".

This oratorio is easily understood and the sung the words were clear so that at no time was there any vagueness as to the meaning.

Soloists



Helen Morton Haig, who sang the soprano portions of the work gave a completely satisfying performance. Handel's music requires a clarity of expression and is the very "pure aereae" of sound. The artist's voice possesses a sweetness and unaffected purity of tone, and a range which was effortless. Mrs. Haig's part in the success of the performance will long remain with us. Mrs. Valiere Esty, contralto, who has sung on many occasions here, took the difficult contralto passages, of which her richly endowed voice and sympathetic study made such an apt interpreter. Perhaps the number which will linger longest in memory is "He was despised and rejected of men". Mr. Jack Bailey in his tenor parts bore a great portion of the burden of the solo work. The smooth quality of his voice and his sympathetic approach to the numbers made his performance memorable. Mr. Lloyd Bullen, bass, guest soloist, revealed a voice of great power and range as well as finesse of texture, a dramatic instinct which found free play in the great passage "Why do the nations so furiously rage together?"

Organ Music Nobly Played

No oratorio of this kind can be greatly sung without the co-operation of the organ. Mr. Alex Gordon, organist of John Street, who has been associated with the choir and the choir for some years, and is considered in high regard by musicians everywhere presided at the organ in masterly manner. In this oratorio there is no relief from the heavy task for the organ is played throughout and early in the oratorio the organ solo, "Pastoral Symphony" is given.

Mr. Gordon gives the organ its due place in a performance of this kind with his perfection of interpretation and his gift as artist. Every mood (perfection as artist) respond e, the result being that the accomplishment of the evening was owing in go small measure to his part. In the "Pastoral Symphony" Mr. Gordon's fine artistry was outstanding.

EDEN'S SPEECH

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden made a very significant remark in the British House of Commons just before it closed on Friday evening for the Christmas recess. It was that the British "position in Europe is certainly better than it was at this time last year and that is not without importance in the maintenance of peace."

This brings up two points, the improved position of Britain and that fact that this improvement is a factor that means much in the maintenance of peace in the world.

It must be encouragement to those who have watched the procession of events during the past year when at times the situation looked dark enough, and it seemed as if there might be some event which might precipitate international trouble. It must be remembered that a year ago about this time Italy was waging her war of conquest against Ethiopia, at which time the relations between Italy and Britain were strained over the Mediterranean. There was the constant flutter of excitement and anxiety about Geneva and the League of Nations circles which kept the nations uneasy. But the war ended without implication of Italy and yet Britain has not paid official recognition to the results of the Italian war in North-east Africa, and Italy is more placable and is indeed showing evidences of being anxious for British friendship.

In the meantime there have been vast changes in the world without strife except in Spain where the conflict so far has mainly through the efforts of Britain and France been kept on an internal basis. Hitler sent his Teutonic legions across the Rhine and broke a treaty guaranteeing the demilitarization of the west bank. The nations were upset and the outlook seemed dark. France was greatly perturbed and the lesser states like Holland breathed heavily. Thence came the Franco-Russian pact, which irritated Germany, and after that the Japanese-German agreement against communism. And yet peace is unbroken.

In all these efforts towards the preservation of peace, Britain has played a major part, of which she must be proud for the results indicate that her right is so far accepted as right in the world of nations.

So much for the diplomatic efforts towards the maintenance of peace, but there is another factor. Britain ran a grave risk, many believe, through pushing the cause of disarmament at all times, and delaying any participation in the armament race which began to be manifest as nations grew more and more fearful and as foreign leaders thundered before their mobs the prowess of their nations' arms. But at last for the sake of security and as a peace card Britain began to prepare against a possible undefined day when the situation might come to a conflict of strength. As a result today Britain is stronger in a military way. How much this added strength has done for peace cannot definitely be outlined though it no doubt has played a part which has helped to stabilize the international mind in regard to international malajustments.

Captain Eden is among those who have carried a great burden in the past year and a half, ever since the Italian launched his troops against the dark race in Ethiopia. If there is even a slight diminution of the strain he must have noticed it. Others believe they have felt what they believe is a lessening of stress. It may be that if some nations with ambitious men not strong enough to risk conflict which would soon have engulfed many peoples. Britain chose the strategic time to show these that two can play a game of might in armaments and by convinces them that caution is even in time of storm and stress a policy worth while regarding.

The Foreign Secretary's statement will encourage the British people to continue in their efforts towards security of the nations.

THE PATTY-CAKE TREE

Have you ever seen the patty-cake tree
A-bloom in the winter weather,
When the icicles hang from under the eaves,
And the snow is light as a feather?

There aren't any leaves on the patty-cake tree;
The winds blew them off, long ago;
The blossoms are bunches of bright scarlet berries
Frosted deeply with crystals of snow.

If the winter birds liked the bitter red berries
This rare sight, you never would see;
'Tis the magic of snow on the mountain ash
Makes the children's delight to be.

MUNICIPAL REVIEW OF CANADA PUBLISHES RESULTS OF VARIOUS CITIES

While operating under a City Manager plan, two of which are cited at this time. One with a population of 7,933 adopted the plan in 1921, built their city hall in 1927 out of surplus, own their water, gas and light plants, all with low rates. The second with population of 12,500 adopted City Manager plan in 1915. At their last election the vote to continue was carried by nearly 4 to 1—their tax rate being 17.2 mills.

• • •

BELLEVILLE ELECTORS WILL BE CALLED UPON at the municipal election to express their opinion as to whether better business results can be obtained from a smaller City Council, a smaller Board of Education and civic administration under a City Manager, besides other questions. These questions are submitted by the City Council in a progressive spirit with a view to promoting greater efficiency in civic administration—if the electors so desire.

• • •

EXPERTS IN MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION TELL US that City Manager form of government provides a better lawmaking body, with more efficient administration of municipal government. Under City Manager plan the municipality is run upon business principles where economy is made possible by eliminating unnecessary expenditures as well as lessening waste. A healthy condition of finances is guaranteed under the plan. The application of sound business principles makes lower tax rates possible.

• • •

BELLEVILLE CITY HALL HAS A NUMBER OF DEPARTMENTS all functioning as separate units, apparently, and as efficiently as possible under such a plan. There is no one head of all departments with a working knowledge of each, to direct the business as a whole. City Managership would seem to correct that anomaly, put the cap sheaf of correct business on municipal business as it were. Belleville electors will do well to make a close study of the City Manager system as it obtains in other communities and if they wish it adopted here so say on their ballots.

COLONIES FOR CHRISTMAS? Will Santa Claus please notice that Germany wants colonies for Christmas, or soon thereafter. Colonies are what the Reich statesman demand, and colonies they say they are going to have. Will some one please rise and let the Reich sit down. Just at present there does not seem to be any nice rich, juicy colonies ripe and ready for Germany to pluck, but no doubt she has scouts out looking over colonies of smaller nations who might part with the colonies without making "much of a holler" if the right kind of pressure were applied. Mussolini dug down into Ethiopia for a colony and isn't sure yet what kind of a bargain he purchased at such a heavy price. Italy certainly got a lot of sand and salt, mountains and heat and a host of savage heavy-hating neighbors who will take years of civilising without showing much improvement.

His Highness was bought at the Winter Fair by Brockville Rotary and will be loaned to farmers of Leeds County free of charge for the improvement of live stock.

LITTLE RELIEF IN NORTHERN ONT.

Premier Hepburn Stresses Confidence in Province's Future

Toronto, Dec. 19 (CP)—There is virtually no relief in Northern Ontario, with possibly the exception of two centres, Premier Mitchell Hepburn told a gathering at the annual banquet of the Commercial Travellers' Association here last night. He stressed confidence in the province's mining industry and the stimulation of mining activity.

Referring to his flight across Northern Ontario, Mr. Hepburn declared particularly with the Red Lake district.

"There," he said, "they didn't have time to organize and establish a municipal government which takes me to the conclusion that probably in this country we do have a little too much government."

Premier Hepburn felt the world was coming back to normal conditions and trade was beginning to flow into proper channels. He said organizations were turning toward Northern Ontario as a source of supply in the pulp industry.

He told his audience Europe could take a lesson from Canada's example of its great racial problem. The French and English in this country, he said, had not tried to cut each other's throats as many European countries were doing. They settled down to work co-operatively.

FIRE THREATENS INDIAN RESERVE

Walpole Island Picturesque Spot And Tourist Trade Heavy

Walpole Island, Ont., Dec. 19 (CP)—Indians of the Chippewa and Pottawatamie tribes who have inhabited this island in the Sture River for many years feared today a conflagration northeast wind might drive grass fires into their valuable and extensive tracts of woodland.

Accustomed to grass fires, the Indians have never had cause to fear them before. But a blaze which started Monday and which was ravaging a fire-safe tract today made them fearful lest one of their main sources of revenue should be cut off. The wind was blowing the fire directly toward the woods which consist largely of ash and hickory.

The blaze has been visible across Kent County and so far away as Melbourne in Middlesex County, 75 miles from the Sture River St. Clair and Walpole Island is near the mouth of the river.

The Chippewas and Pottawatamies derive a considerable revenue revenue from products of ash and hickory. They fashion axe handles, baskets and scoyrells from the trees.

The island is a picturesque spot and becomes a tourist mecca each summer. Ten miles long and eight miles wide, it is plainly visible from both Canadian and United States shores. It was set aside some years ago as an Indian reserve, but many summer homes have been built on the northern part of the island. It has been frequently rumored that the body of the Indian warrior Tecumseh is buried here.

The Indians were meeting with considerable difficulty in their efforts to fight the flames and Rev. William Hall, rector of the Anglican church situated on the island, feared heavy damage unless the wind should change.

Searchers Hope to Find Pilots Safe

Salt Lake City, Dec. 19 (AP)—A cry of "help" from an Idaho wilderness 12 feet snow-balling searchers to hope today for the safety of two pilots in a missing plane but seven occupants of another wrecked air liner were feared to have perished.

Sheriff's officers hurried to the snow drifted wilds of Kootenai County in northern Idaho where a man reported hearing the distress call. The searchers hailed it as the first definite indication since Joe Livesey and A. A. Hald, lost yesterday while enroute from St. Paul to Spokane in a Northwest Airlines craft, might be alive.

Search for a Western Air Express transport, missing since early Tuesday with two women and five men aboard, switched to the bleak Ravich Mountains of Nevada when that latter one in Utah failed. It disappeared in wintry weather on the way from Los Angeles to Salt Lake.

LOOT VALUED AT $150

Dundas, Ont., Dec. 19 (CP) — Two "smash and grab" thieves broke the window of Roy C. Dickson's jewellery store early Friday and got away with loot estimated at $150. Dundas is about three miles from Hamilton.

The crash of the breaking glass was heard by Constable Ellis Olives opposite the shop. Looking from the window, he saw the two men scooping articles from the window.

As he opened the bedroom window, the pair heard him and fled.

SHOOTS SELF

Hamilton, Dec. 19 (CP)—Frank Orrell, 56, Hamilton, died at hospital Friday several hours after he had been found in Copes Park with a bullet wound in his head. A small calibre rifle was found beside him. He had been despondent for some time.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 19th., 1916

Turkeys were high in price on the Belleville market today. Not one turkey sold at 30c per pound; the lowest price registered was 42c per pound to retailers.

One bird, a little under seven pounds, sold for $3.36 which was a bargain. Some turkeys approached in price the 50c mark. The ruling price for geese was $2.50 and $2.75.

All Belleville merchants are very busy and employment has been given to many extra clerks. The bumper Christmas trade is anticipated.

Mr. Arnold Kamber of Winnipeg is visiting relatives in the city.

The Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church is spending today in Toronto.

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson of the Belleville Creameries, left this afternoon for Lansing, Mich., to attend a meeting of the Michigan Creamery Association.

Mr. Frank Doyle of New York City, is home on a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Robinson of Brockville are here to spend Christmas with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. James Marshall and son, Mr. Thomas, of Bridgeburg, Ont., have arrived in the city to spend Christmas with their parents.

The first hockey game here this season will be played Christmas night, when the local juniors will go against the speedy Kingston O.H.A. team. Go and get a line on the boys.

Jack Mairs, formerly of Belleville, who has been advertised as going to play with nearly every team from Halifax to the North Pole, will shine at centre for the Kerr Glengarry, if he's been this winter. He will be the second Belleville man to play on a team looking for Stanley Cup honors.

80 YEARS AGO

DEC. 20TH, 1856

The Intelligencer office has been moved at last from the old stand at the market square to the new premises on the south side of Front street, a few doors south of Hotel Street. Owing to the bustle and confusion attendant upon the change of quarters the publication of the daily and weekly editions during the past week has been accomplished under adverse circumstances. Publication yesterday has had to be suspended entirely owing to the exigencies of the situation. Now, however, everything is in order and business, we trust, will now move smoothly. Our thanks are due Mr. Carman of the Ontario, for the use of his press during our removal.

The Belleville Board of Education does not consider the text book of the scriptures, consulted for use in the public schools, to be any improvement on the original scriptures. At a recent special meeting of the Board the following resolution was carried without discussion: Moved by James Macoun and seconded by Mr. S. A. Moore, That the secretary treasurer be instructed to procure for the high and public schools a sufficient number of Bibles so that every pupil who can read shall have one. That after the Christmas holidays a portion of the bible shall be read at the opening of the school each day, and that the teacher and scholars shall read said portions of scripture responsively.

Israelites Crossing Red Sea No Miracle Says Sinai Governor

BY THOMAS T. CHAMPION

London, Dec. 19 (CP)—That the crossing of the Red Sea by the Israelites was no miracle was the submission made by Major C. S. Jarvis, governor of Sinai for four ten years, when addressing the Ethnic Study Group here. Major Jarvis is known to every Arab in the middle east as Jarvis Bey.

"The pillar of fire, described in Exodus," said Major Jarvis, "would probably be caused by one of the squalls which sail over in Sinai and cause a column of cloud from which lightning flashes at night. A yearly strip of sand separates the Mediterranean from Lake Pardawil, a vast lagoon, and my theory is that the Israelites marched along this strip.

"A squall and rain followed and, as still happens today, the sea broke over the sand bar into the lagoon. I have seen it happen in twelve hours. The whole army of Egyptians was caught.

"I have arrived at my theory by studying the two books of the Bible, Exodus and Numbers, and from investigations during the time I was in Sinai. There is no record in Egyptian history of the flight, so one may believe it was not such an epoch-making event as the Israelites would like us to believe."

Just a Glimpse of an Old-Fashioned Christmas such as Grandad used to talk about—in the stage coach days before the speed mania possessed people and gasolene almost drove the world to distraction—reminiscent of the days of Pickwick and the one and only Sam Weller with his father's pessimistic warning ringing in his ears: "Beware of Vidders, Samuvel!"—also the days of David Copperfield, Little Dorrit, Little Nell, Old Scrooge, Bob Cratchitt, Tiny Tim, and a host of familiar ghosts returning at Christmas time to keep the true spirit of Christmas ever alive in a materialistic and speed-mad world.

Working at 500 Feet in Air Causes No Fear Says Young Man Now on Visit Here

Jerry McComb Tells of Accident That Was Nearly Fatal

YOUTH REQUIRED

Perched precariously in the air five hundred feet above the surface of the earth; swinging dizzily on a narrow sight inch board plank scaffold with the tall structure swaying from six inches to two feet according to the velocity of the wind; crashing earthward between the rim of the hoist and the inside of the huge chimney for a distance of twelve feet to finally regain his footing only to have the steel bucket crash on top of his skull resulting in an ear being nearly torn off, a fractured skull, a twisted leg and a broken jaw, and twelve days in the hospital, means nothing to twenty-six year old Jerry McComb, former Belleville boy who is now in the city staying with friends, after completing the erection of the huge five hundred foot chimney stack at the International Nickel Company's ore refinery in Port Colborne.

"Shucks" said this youngster with the iron nerve, or one bright at night with no nerve at all. "It is just like working on the ground. I don't mind it in the least and feel a lot safer up there with the wind blowing in my face than I would be in lots of jobs on the ground."

"In my job," he said, "and I belong to what we call the Top Cement gang, that is we pour the cement in the forms before the brick and steel is placed in position, hang over the side of the chimney with nothing between us and the ground but a few hangers and one eight inch plank, from which we do all our work. There are ten of us in our gang while another outfit works from the inside of the chimney."

Questioned regarding the erection of the stack in Port Colborne, pictures of which appeared in Toronto daily newspaper a few days ago, he said the stack was sixty feet in diameter at the base tapering to forty five feet at the top. The cement structure of the chimney was approximately twenty four inches thick with the addition of the brick and steel bringing it to thirty three inches. "And if you think that cement won't stand the racket" he added, "just remember this, that it is tested for twenty eight days with a pressure of twenty four hundred pounds to the square inch."

Twenty six years is a young age for a job like that, isn't it? he was asked. "I should say not" he laughed, "I am one of the oldest of the gang. The older fellows are ascend to such heights. Our foreman is a man of forty five years comes up occasionally to inspect the work, but he doesn't linger longer than necessary."

A jagged scar in his skull, an ear which bears the mark of the surgeon's needle where it was sewn on in practically the right place, a slightly misshapen jaw a result of a severe fracture, together with a twisted leg bear witness to a close call to a escape from death. In his modest unassuming manner, Mr. McComb in simple terms related his brush with the Grim Reaper.

"We were on three hundred foot mark" he said, "I stepped into the cage to warm myself, I slipped and fell between it and the side of the forms. I went a distance of twelve feet. I managed to grab at my footing when the cage fell down and crashed on top of my head. I remembered nothing for a half hour, when I woke up in the Welland Hospital. My ear was nearly torn off, I had a fractured skull, my jaw was broken and my leg twisted. In twelve days I was back on the job, when I should have stayed in the hospital for a couple of months."

"Did it affect your nerve" he was asked. "Not a bit" he smiled. I went back to work as if nothing had happened."

"On another occasion" he said, "five of the boys were descending in the cage when the brakes failed to hold and they crashed one hundred feet to the bottom of the shaft. Nearly all of them had broken ankles while one had a fracture of the jaw birwn in for good measure."

Prior to his work on the stack at Port Colborne Mr. McComb assisted in the erection of the stack at Point Anne. In the spring he expects to assume his precarious job at Copperclife, Ont. Mr. McComb is a nephew of Mrs. Durland Young of Foster Avenue.

FRANKFORD

Mission Groups Present Concert

Will Attend Entertainment Held in Community Hall

Frankford—A well attended concert sponsored by the Frankford Mission Circle and the Helping Hand Mission Band was held in the Community Hall on Wednesday night Dec. 16th. Rev. J. F. Lees acted as chairman. Several playlets, recitations, and Christmas carols were contributed by the Mission Band under the leadership of Mrs. W. H. Landon. Two Christmas numbers were given by the United Church choir and Miss Mildred Mayhew played overture with her vocal solos. A play, the Mission Circle part of the program, was very successful, the audience shouting laughs as well as causing tears to be brushed aside by many of the audience when the sad parts were brought out so poignantly.

The idea of the play was "Christmas at the Stebbin's". The cast was as follows:

Mr. Raymond—Gerald Snider.
Mrs. Raymond—Mrs. Rodgers.
Mr. Stebbins—Roy Pollard
Mrs. Stebbins—Mrs Chas. Bennett.
Grandma—Miss G. Tryce.
Dressmaker-Author Harvett.
Tom—Thos. Johnson.
Joe—Donald Tripp.
Hired Man—Mr. Arnold Stickle.
Hettie—Pearl Powell
The concert closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The Frankford Village Council met in the Council Chambers on Friday night, Dec. 11th. Reeve D. R. Ketchabaw and all councillors were present. The minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed as read. The last day for the payment of taxes was advanced to Dec. 16th. Accounts amounting to $4,238.30 were ordered paid. Included in the accounts were the County Requisition amounting to $4,862.25 and the Sinking Fund Requisition of $2,500.00. Council adjourned to meet on Dec. 15th for the last meeting of the year.

WOOLER

Mr. Fowlds of Hastings called on friends in this vicinity on Thursday.

Mrs. George Rowe

Mrs. George Rowe and family of Alvarista Hennessy Rowe received from the late residence on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. A. Poulter. The deceased was born as Lena Hennessy homestead in the year 1863 within one mile of her late home. In 1878 she was united in marriage to George Rowe and settled on the farm where she lived until death in 1918 and his widow resided in the house until her death. She leaves one son, Lewis Hubert of Wooler and one daughter, Mrs. Nellie Sprung, who came from Toronto and nursed her mother through her long illness.

The deceased was a devoted christian member of the United Church of Wooler. She was a charter member of the Woman's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid. The beautiful floral tributes from children and relatives, church organisations and the neighborhood showed the high esteem in which she was held. The pall-bearers were —Percy Gooding, Elgin McMasters, W. J. Lawson, C. R. McMasters, Arthur Down and Clinton Terrill. Interment in McFall Cemetery. Funeral director Mr. Cobley of Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Terrill spent Thursday at Peterboro with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. English.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Kirk of Toronto, are guests of their parents Mr. and Mrs. Sam Palmer.

Earl Terrill is spending a week in Toronto.

Bert Wilkins of Belleville spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Charpe.

Mrs. A. Poulter entertained twenty-five ladies at the parsonage on Tuesday afternoon to a tea. Knitting seemed to be the popular feature for the ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sprung of Toronto attended the funeral of their grandmother, Mrs. Rowe.

Mrs. Gussie Richardson of Toronto, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Rowe.

The Misses Milligans were in Belleville on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Terrill, James and Mrs. M. Sharpe spent a few days in Lindsay.

Ordinary bifocals have reading segments with curved tops, confusing vision at the arch with annoying "jump."

In the new UNIVIS Bifocals, the arch, confusion and jump are "eliminated"—the segment top is perfectly straight.

EDUCATION BOARD COMPLETES WORK FOR CURRENT YEAR

Principal of Collegiate Urges Reports be Issued in Paper

ACCOUNTS PASSED

New Board Will Meet on Third Friday in January

Following a mild debate regarding the proposed reduction of the members of the board from the present quota to a smaller one and that the solution be left to the nomination meeting at which the new board will be elected featured the final 1936 meeting of the Board of Education held in the board room at the Belleville Collegiate Institute last night.

The end of the 1936 session of the board was devoid of any fiery debates, the members contenting themselves with settling the year's business and other routine in the least possible time.

With chairman George Ostrom in the chair a quorum of members went into session shortly after eight o'clock.

The motion that Miss Jean Catcher and Mr. Arnold Anderson be added to the list of supply teachers first called, and Mrs. Ragsdale and Mrs. Clinton MacDonald also be added to the list to be called only when single teachers are not available, was carried. The resignation of Miss Mildred Bertram and the appointment of Miss Beatrice Wallbridge in her place also met the approval of the board. The subcommittee of a new property which was suggested by Mr. MacLaurin was referred to the School Management Committee with instructions to secure information regarding the cost and to report same to the incoming committee.

Engage Pianist

A mild debate ensued regarding the engagement of a pianist for the school. There had been none since last spring argued one member and in view of the forthcoming musical festival it was felt that one should be engaged.

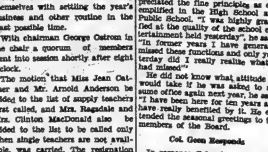
It was finally decided that a pianist be engaged for three or four months of the new term and that the Chairman and Secretary arrange for suitable remuneration.

An important phase of the report of Principal MacLaurin was that the Fall examinations ah been completed and the returns had been handed to the pupils. Principal MacLaurin felt that if this fact was given space in the press, parents would be on the lookout for these reports and would thereby prevent few pupils from keeping their reports from their parents.

Following the reading of a communication from the Department of Education in Toronto that a return be filed regarding the appointment of an attendance officer, the Board received the message, that last year's appointee be re-appointed at the same salary. An amendment to this motion, that the matter be left to the new Board was carried.

Chairman Ostrom regretted the inability of Colonel W. F. Ponton to be present and appointed Wm. Harris to fill the gap and the board went into Committee on the whole. The Finance Committee report was brief and consisted of the passing of a number of minor accounts.

In his final address as the 1936 Board, President George Ostrom voiced his appreciation of the services rendered by the Board and felt that the Board as a whole appreciated the fine principles as exemplified in the High School and Public School. It was highly gratified at the quality of the school entertainment held yesterday", he said, "in former years it has generally missed these functions and only yesterday did I really realize what I had missed"



Ald. Ostrom not know what attitude he would take if he was asked to assume office again next year, he said "I have been here for ten years and have really benefited by it. He extended the season's greetings to the members of the Board.

Col. Geon Responds

In response Colonel R. A. Geon said that he believe the Board has appreciated all the work which has done for it, and would regret severing his official capacity. "I don't always agree," continued the Colonel "but for all that it has been a very successful year."

Following a debate regarding the reduction of the personnel of members of the Board is was proposed by Mr. Harris that the matter be left to the regular nomination meeting on Monday, of the 1936 Board was to the effect, that the inaugural meeting of the new Board be held on the third Friday in January.

The list of the School Trustees whose two year term expires Dec. 31st, 1936 are—High School Trustees, Col. W. N. Ponton, G. F. Calnan; Public School Trustees—Ward, F. M. Bird; Samson Ward, R. Moncrief; Dickson Ward, W. F. Graves; Baldwin Ward, H. J. Allen; Bleecker Ward, G. F. Lent; Coleman Ward, W. J. Harrison; Murney Ward, Col. R. A. Geon.

WEALTH FROM A WILDERNESS

A Brief Outline of Activity in Canada's Gold-fields

With the close of 1936 Canada's gold mining industry is rounding out another year of rapid and dramatic development. This year's gold production, it is estimated, will be in the neighborhood of $130,000,000 and represents an increase of $15,000,000 over that of 1935. Twenty-five years ago the total value of the gold produced in Canada was only $10,000,000 and by 1939 it had grown to only 43.4 millions. Thus by far the most rapid strides were made during the years of depression. Six years ago Canada had 19 commercial gold mines in production. Today there are 122 engaged in milling operations while by the end of 1937 it is estimated that there will be 145 producing gold mines, with scores more in their development stages.

Directly or indirectly every Canadian factory and farm, every Canadian citizen, has felt the tremendous impetus given by this vigorous industry. Yet because it is remote from the familiar commercial and industrial centres, advancing into the hinterland ahead of railroads and highways, the gold mining industry is to the average Canadian little more than a list of names on the investment board. To get a true realisation of the part mining is playing in the Canadian scene it is necessary to keep ever before one the realization that in mining growth means the out-lay of expenditures for the winning of new wealth.

Mining in the gold mining industry is the evidence of heavy investment. There are the 540 head frames jutting above the trees and the roofs of the towns, and nearby the 540 mills housing the long rows of roaring machinery for crushing the ore and extracting the new mineral wealth. There are the throbbing compressors feeding the pulsating drills and the shafts sunk into the rich veins hundreds and thousands of feet. There are the deep underground are the rumbling ore trains carrying their precious loads to the surface. There are the magazines in which are stored thousands of pounds of dispensable explosives for blasting the way inch heads, and finally the country is the silvery network of transmission lines carrying the power of northern falls and rapids direct to the mining centres. Out in the bush are the tent villages and shack-drills probing the ground to observe the subterranean structure of the formations, while high up over the forest, or nesting on the myriad lakes, the planes soon speed a million pounds of freight a month across the vast northland.

The quest for gold today is no less stirring or less romantic than it was in the days of '49. Klondike of '49. Canada's gold is embedded in quartz veins, and the mine must be followed far underground, in some cases nearly a mile below the earth's surface. Even before the mine has been wrested from the depths the search is by no means ended. Geologists must diagnose its nature and by the most skilful method the gold is to be extracted.

Next in importance to the skill and knowledge of experienced men the winning of the new wealth is transportation. One of the most important discoveries since the primitive days of canoe and portage was the airplane. Without gyrations many a mine is now found-would be impossible and nearly all would be more difficult. Many would remain hidden in the ground.

Since the earliest drilling the next step in the development of a mine is the sinking of a shaft. On all levels cross-cuts are driven at right to intercept the veins and then the drifts run along the veins. Subsequently the drifts will be connected by deep raises, thus blocking out the ore reserves for the stopes. Later in production the ore is stoped out between these drifts and, as the stopes increase in size, they form the huge underground excavations which have to be supported by timber and finally filled in with sand or waste rock to prevent the collapse of the mine. From the stopes the ore is tumbled down through ore chutes from which it is loaded into the waiting cars. Shafts and cross-cuts, drifts and raises, stopes and ore chutes, every piece of rock or ore removed must be blasted out with explosives.

Some of Canada's mines have reached enormous proportions. At Kirkland Lake, where the miners are blasting into what has been called the richest four square miles in the world, are some of the world's great gold factories—Lakeshore, Wright-Hargreaves, Sylvanite, Teck-Hughes, Macassa and Kirkland Lake. These famous concerns produce up to a million dollars worth of gold a month and employ thousands of people. Around these properties and neighboring mines has been built the thriving town of Kirkland Lake with its population of seventeen thousand. Underneath the town is a network of levels and scores of miles of tunnels reached by numerous shafts, some running down as far as six thousand feet —over a mile deep. All blasting is done at the change of shift and in Canadian mines about fifty tons of rock and blasts are fired every day.

WELL BABY CLINIC PARTY

SANTA Claus entered the Well Baby Clinic last yesterday by way of the fire escape. Two hundred children gave him a hearty welcome at the Y.O.W. Baby Clinic. Their ages varied from 6 to 18 months to five years and there was a present for every one of them on a beautifully decorated tree on the stage. The gifts were provided by the Kiwanis Club, the Girl Guides, the Red Cross, members of the Y.O.W. Committee, and personal friends of the nurses.

A programme was provided by the pupils of Queen Alexandra School. Miss McPherson's class presented Woodland Serenade. The ABC drill followed consisting of members of Miss Lockhart's and Miss Smith's classes. The final number on the delightful programme was the Mad Hatter Party featuring the members of Miss Lillian Arnaud for by Miss Bonter.

Santa Claus entered at this point presumably having lighted up from the fire escape on the aeroplane, and was greeted with shrieks of delight. Santa called out the names of the children present and one by one they came forward to receive their presents. Santa's visit and the entertainment were arranged for by Miss Bonter and Miss Webster, Victorian Order Nurses.

CHRIST CHURCH JUNIOR S. S.

A jolly evening was enjoyed by the children of the Junior Department of Christ Church S.S. The School last evening when over fifty assembled at 6:30 p.m. for the annual Christmas concert and supper and entertainment.

The superintendent Mr. Everett Smith, was in charge of the programme and introduced the delicious supper was served by the teachers of the department Mrs. Weese, Miss L. Card, Miss Margaret Mackey, Miss Phyllis Wright, Miss Marion Staples, Miss Dorothy Croft, Miss M. Adams, Miss D. Redner, and the Misses Bonter and Sprague. The children thoroughly enjoyed the appetizing meal.

During the banquet the children sang carols and songs for half an hour, after the meal, gathered in a bee of candy and for the remainder of the evening a musical programme was presented. The very interesting evening came to a close about 8.30.

ALLIANCE TABERNACLE

CHRISTMAS TREE ALLIANCE Tabernacle last evening, was a delight to every child in the city, with every available seat occupied and standing room filled to capacity. The splendid programme presented in Annual Christmas service.

The Tabernacle, which was decorated beautifully decorated, was much in keeping with the season of the year, and lent a very favorable background to the entire service.

The programme, which was well planned and so minutely prepared was received by a most attentive audience and by the entire congregation. The children, from the tiny tots to the teens, under the supervision of the Senior Young People's department, all did exceptionally well as evidenced by the hearty round of applause.

Solos and appropriate numbers, played by the Orchestra were interspersed throughout the programme as were also other Sacred Solos and duets on the various instruments. The piano was played throughout the evening in a most pleasing manner by Miss Dorothy Mitchell.

An item of special interest was The Christmas Story in music and pictures, a series of beautifully colored pictures depicting the birth and childhood of Jesus with appropriate readings.

The Sunday School Superintendent, Mr. R. S. Smith took the chairmanship of the meeting in a most commendable manner. Immediately after the program was completed the Sunday Scholars were given their annual treat of candies and oranges. The following received prizes for regular attendance: Linton and Lena Beers, Willis and Thickler Emsley, Margaret and Rebecca Aitken, Mr. Irvine, Mrs. Miss Dreisha Lloyd and Mr. J. Sopher.

The program follows:—

Hymn, "Angels From the Realms of Glory", Lanten, Congregation.

Prayer, Mr. Irvine.

Exercise, Gifts for Jesus' Birthday, Primary Class.

Recitation "Little Mother's Story" Lynn Benn.

Mandolin solo "Large" Mr. Hardstone.

Exercise, Christmas Joy", Harlan Bargear, Dan Cleary, Milton Fraser.

Chorus "Joy For You Joy For Me" Sunday School.

Recitation "The Christmas Tree Sunday School Boy" Frank Miller.

Offering, The Collection.

Exercise, "A Christmas Cross", Ten Boys.

Selections on Concertina, Mr. R. H. Smith.

Song, "Christ of the Manger", Mrs. Henderson's Class.

Dialogue, "Mother's Christmas Story", Mrs. Lloyd and Bessie Veley.

Exercise, "No Heart Peace", Twelve Girls.

Recitation, "What Can I Do", Ross Hall.

Hymn, "Away in a Manger", Entire Congregation.

Christmas Story in Picture and Music.

Recitation, "Good Night", Ralph Alyea.

Presentation of awards for Sunday School Attendance, Mr. Sloner.

Benediction.

Treats!

God Save The King.

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

ARIONETTES entertained with a Christmas entertainment in the form of a play yesterday afternoon and evening in the auditorium of Queen Mary School. The auditorium was crowded to capacity both afternoon and evening and the performance was enjoyed by all. The concert was presented in connection with the training of prizes for scholarship and report honors given when a pupil the outstanding scholars of the past year.

Mary Kenneth Woodley acted as master of ceremonies and took his duties in connection introducing each number in a clear voice. A three part song, "Christmas Bells" was the first number and showed the careful vocal training being given in the school.

The Mad Tea Party, one of the main features of the program and was splendidly given. This delicious set of Alice in Wonderland nonsense was an instant hit with the many members of the audience as well as the older folk.

Presentation of Prizes

Yesterday's program was the occasion for the presentation of school prizes by Mr. Ellis, who is also Board of Education medal for obtaining the highest marks in the city. The presentation of this medal was presented the medal by Mr. Ellis, chairman of the Board of Education.

Col. Berragge presented his prizes for obtaining the highest marks in Queen Mary School Entrance Exam. Miss Betty Greatrix for making the greatest progress in the Entrance Class.

Prizes for matriculation were then given as follows:

The Marsh Trophy, won by Cadet Sgt. Major Ralph Bowerman, was presented by Mr. Barragar. The cadet corps includes: Wilfred Mills, James Bryant, Bruce Bedford, Ross Bedford and Jack Lundberg, Charles Sherry, Douglas Bowerman.

The Merchants' Trophy was presented by Mr. Barragar. The Merchants' Trophy was won by Howard Booth, Harold Burtholder, Bill Boynton, Kenneth Bowerman, Jack Mills, Douglas Palmer, Stewart Hibbard.

The Citizens' Trophy, which was presented by Mr. H. B. Fetherly, member of the Board of Education, is awarded to the winners in the matriculation prizes won by seven members of the Board. The Lent, member of the Board. The following were the winners: Bill Boynton, Bruce Bedford, Bruce Cronk, Douglas Doolittle, Wilfred Mills, Charles Sherry and Jack Lundberg, and the officers of Cadet Corps No. 3, Captain Doolittle, Lieut. Bill Boynton, Lieutenant Bill Gordon, Bruce Cronk and Howard Booth.

The W.C.T.U. Prizes were presented by Mrs. H. N. Baker as follows:

Gr. IV—Reference Book—Ruth Edmondson.

Jr. IV—Essay—Anna Hogle.

Sr. III—Health Book—Ethel, Jack Liddle; Second, Nadine Hall.

Jr. III—Poster—Second, Betty Sheldon.

Sr. III—Poster—Second, Barbara Fisher.

Returning to the entertainment side of the program, the operetta, "Through Fairyland" was a charmingly arranged number. Beautifully costumed children presented the sad picture of fairyland with its fairy princess under the spell of a witch, and a fairy prince in a similar distress. But the Queen of the Fairies rescued matters, even relieving the witch of her spell. The music was very prettily sung by the children. Those taking part were:

Queen of Fairies—Anna Hogle.

Misses G. Burley and R. Lowery played a piano duet in the style.

The puppet show, "The Enchanted Garden" was a novelty in the program. The puppets were made by the pupils who were taught to operate the dolls and thus the dolls parts of the characters. The "stage" was artistically designed and the puppets told a delightful fairy story. The characters were taken by Betty Jose, Bob McCoy, Patricia Thurston, Anna Corr and Winnifred Edwards, the puppeteers being George Hilarby, Earl Woodley, Audrey Stewart, Harry Goslin and Grayden Ackermann.

Fledging themselves to spread the Christmas message of peace, the characters of "The Christmas Pledge" gave a splendid interpretation to this number. The scene was in the clubhouse of the neighborhood children and the members trooped in to sing Christmas carols with the members and add their names to the "peace" pledge, the principal characters being Teddy McCormick, Susan—Mary Wright; Mary—Evelyn Ogg and Carol—Joan Doherty.

Jubilant of the scene at Bethlehem was a fitting close for the program. The children fervently took the parts of Joseph, Mary, the Shepherds and Angels with a chorus of Christmas hymns.

As the conclusion of the program Mr. Ostrom congratulated the pupils, staff and scholars for the splendid entertainment.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

(Copyright: 1936 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

On their way South already are many lovely frocks. A charming evening dress is of white triple sheer with three rows of rhinestone trim on the bodice. The skirt has insets of pleats at either side of the centre.

The train is in again on several very grand evening frocks. A dress of black metallic silver cloth dotted with pink has a fish-tail train developing from the rippling tunic.

A winner in the color race is brown, which is seen everywhere. A grand ensemble has a frock of beige sheer wool with belt and lacings of dark leather and other shoulder. With it is worn a cape in the dark tone with collar and double full-length stole of same fox.

The Russian Ballet girls are delighted that the full-skirted ballerina line is so popular for coats and frocks. One dancer purchased a lovely coat, black woollen model with tightly fitted waist and very full skirt. It has an upstanding leopard collar which fastens in crossed tabs in front, and there are four ends of fur on the cuffs and belt. The coat is worn with black suede shoes having leopard bands for cuffs.

CHRISTMAS BOOKS

A delightful little book worthy of Christmas is "Uncle Toby's Christmas Book". Illustrated by Julian Ashton, she authoress has written just as all its varied forms. The stories are gathered together from many books and many lands, both poems and stories. It contains the best for the very small well-known carols, followed by suggestions for games, also autumn leaf-and Christmas parties. Even the Christmas tree is not forgotten and recipes for soups, sauces, roasts, vegetables, desserts, and beverages are included. Next we find the favourite Christmas stories for children and two plays. The real meaning of Christmas is interpreted in three distinguished sermons, one by Cardinal Newman and one by Henry Van Dyke. The story of Christmas as told in the gospels concludes the volume. "Uncle Toby" is by Julian Ashton Van Dyke, a memorial edition of his book. "The Story of the Other Wise Man" has been issued in Braille and a fourth Wise Man who did not reach Bethlehem and the story of Christ has been translated into many languages. The present edition is from Harper and Brothers published by the Australian artist, J. R. Flanagan.

IN THE DR. CHASE PARADOL CONTEST
So Easy Everybody Can Compete

The object of this contest is to decide for what purpose Dr. Chase's Paradol is most generally used and why most people prefer it to other treatments used for the relief of pains and aches. This contest is very easy. There are only three things to do.

1. Fill in on the coupon, one extra use for Paradol.
2. Number the uses of Paradol in what you consider the most important order.
3. State why you prefer Dr. Chase's Paradol.

RULES

1. Fill in the coupon appearing below. Be sure to number the uses in order as you consider most important. This is an essential part of the contest. Mere statements that you like Paradol will not win a prize. Your letter must be original, and must be written by you and you alone.
2. There is no limit to the number of entries a person may send in, but each entry must be accompanied by the main panel of the box in which the Paradol was purchased, or a facsimile thereof, as evidence of purchase.
3. This contest is open to people living in Canada, the British West Indies, Bermuda and Newfoundland only, and all entries must be in these offices not later than February 15th, 1937.
4. All entries will be judged by Dr. Chase's Medicine Co. Limited or The Dixon Advertising Agency or their Families.
5. The contest is being conducted in fairness to all concerned, and the decision of the Board of Judges is final.
6. This contest is based on a way that Dr. Chase's Paradol quickly relieves headaches and other aches, checks colds promptly, soothes irritated nerves and encourages sleep.

Savior-Wife of Their Son

By BROWNLEY JONES

(Copyright)

"If only you had one saving imperfection!" Dorothy said plaintively with her most fetching glance. Her sole auditor, J. Ruhner King, Esq., accepted the tribute at face value, though he made a pretense of depreciation with, "That's just your awfully too-kindness."

"Impossible," said Miss Dorothy, with accent deserving italics. "I've watched and studied you ever since you came, trying to pick a flaw. Tell me—is there anything—anything at all—you 'really can't' do?"

"That remains to be seen," J. Ruhner answered with a significant look. Dorothy dropped her eyes, murmuring delicately: "When you see—won't you please tell me?"

"If you promise not to sympathize," from J. R. essaying the subtle. She clapped her hands crying joyously: "Instead I shall be merciful. It must be dreadfully lonesome—this being in a class by himself."

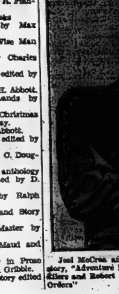
She was, you perceive, wholly devoid of conscience—at least where the male of her species, costing fatness, conceit and wealth was concerned. Miss Dorothy was truly a perfect specimen of the gentleman strictly hand made as to form, manner and make. Fallow ground corners of each social grace, as ever admired himself in the finest French plate glass mirrors. He was indeed the supreme achievement of his doting parents—plus the millions thriftily accumulated in the cloak and suit trade. They had died early, married late—after the money began rolling up, came this crowning glory, the son to inherit it. So nothing had been spared, much less wanted, toward his perfecting. He spoke well for his native then.

Dorothy, in the fullness of youth, did not see that the superplush masked a real man. His conceit offended her, she sensed her-self felt it rather the part of womanly duty to abate it. Furthermore she played wit o' the wisp, letting him approach within arm's length, then dancing gladsome beyond reach of comprehension. Now and then unwittingly, she teased herself to flattering him to the top of his bent. He purred under it so naively as he was worth while. Besides she truly owed him something for the cordials, motor parties, candy and so on wherewith he had strewed her path since he dawned upon the scene.

She knew later Dorothy came to realize that someone she never forgot. She bent to hear a feeble voice say from swathing bandages: "Please carry me! At once—they will come too late—I want to leave them—something in my place."

It was the first time that He had saved a child from death under a hansoming motor truck and been crushed in doing it—fatally crushed said the surgeons. Struggling back to consciousness he had asked for her—his people were a thousand miles away. During hours of His remained to him by the word of wisdom. Dorothy alone dared to gainsay Him. He caught his one free hand in both her own, saying clearly: "Listen! I will have hardened to live than die—but better worth while. You must not talk of marriage—nor think of dying. I shall stay here to prevent it. A hero does not die—he lives inspiring—"

"You—you mean you won't be my wife!" the weak voice half sobbed.



"Not now. Weed's wouldn't in the least become me," he gasped faintly back. "Get well. Give your whole mind to it. I can't let you think so ill of me as that. I would make a death-bed bargain."

"Will you promise." King began. She cut him short with: "Only to stay with you until I can call your mother you are going to live—to be the man she has given the world. You have no right to die, because you are suffering tortures. Fighting is a man-size job. I know you can, do it—and you must."

The nurse tried to check her, the surgeon looked grave—censored, But his young assistant murmured half under breath: "Good work!"

Which was true. Dorothy concerned, there seemed to him a halo about her golden head. He believe she'll keep him there until the old folks come," he whispered to the surgeon and other than the room. "If she does it will be a miracle," was the reply of the latter.

Miracles are still possible. King lived. Dorothy kept her word, distinctly better. Throughout the hours Dorothy had sat holding his hand, sometimes fanning him. The result, the contrition of her impetuous soul, to make him one—the wife of her son, for whom all the world was not sufficient reward. But he was himself had learned wisdom—he had seen the faces of Dorothy and the young doctor answer each other across his sick bed. She had given him back life—and was going to her happiness. So at last, pale but illumined of face, he joined their hands and blessed them. He recalled as them: "You are to let me play fairy godfather for being a good patient."

LICENSES ONLY FOR INDIVIDUAL

Ontario Government Will Curtail Permits For Stock Selling

TORONTO (CP)—Licenses to sell stock will no longer be issued to brokerage houses or limited companies by the Ontario Securities Commission, Commissioner J. M. Godfrey announces. In future licenses will be issued only to individuals and these individuals will be required to fyle the names of sleeping partners, financial backers or others connected with their sales organizations.

The change is intended to eliminate the "front man" who is often used to give standing to a racketeer organization. It has been found that some brokerage organizations are actually headed by men with records for fraudulent stock selling who are able to operate by keeping in the background.

The January conference of all provincial securities commissioners will, it is expected, provide the first move in setting up Dominion-wide machinery to deal with this and other forms of fraudulent stock selling. If the good work for Commissioner Godfrey is reached at the conference it will lead to uniform securities and company legislation which, automatically, will remove present obstacles in the sale of the Toronto and Ontario situation.

Telephone sales to the United States have already been controlled by the reciprocal pact with Washington, concluded by Mr. Godfrey after the border boiler room dickerers a few months ago. No stock can be sold in the United States from Ontario unless registered with the Securities Exchange Commission.

SENATOR WHITE DEAD

Death took one of Canada's outstanding newspapermen and political figures when Senator Richard Scouton White, publisher of the Montreal Gazette died at his home in Montreal. Senator White, who was 71, had been reared in the newspaper industry, both his father and uncle having owned Canadian publications. His death was caused by a chill contracted six weeks before.

AT THE BELLE

"Without Orders"

A flyer who thinks of his own safety more than that of his passengers should not be allowed to pilot a commercial plane.

Developing this theme in exciting detail RKO Radio has evolved a stirring and vivid drama in "Without Orders," from the popular story by Peter B. Kyne, with Robert Armstrong, Sally Eilers, Vinton Haworth and Frances Sage heading the cast.

The story, with its locale the air routes between Portland, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, sharply contrasts the present-day policy of "Safety First" in operating passenger planes with the older school of reckless chance taking that dates back to the barnstorming era of aviation.

Armstrong, as an experienced flyer, is persuaded to accept Haworth as a co-pilot, although knowing Haworth hasn't the cautious temperament necessary to become a commercial aviator. Subsequently Haworth recklessly flies a transport ship across the mountains on one engine instead of landing for repairs, but his innate irresponsibility later makes him turn "yellow" in a crisis that builds into a thrilling climax.

"Adventure in Manhattan"

Jean Arthur's captivating charm, so much in evidence as "Mr. Deeds" opposite Gary Cooper, and Edmund Stradford," will sparkle anew on the Belle screen today and Monday matinee daily when she literally "goes to town" with Joel McCrea in "Adventure in Manhattan".

Jean and Joel, both at the peak of their respective careers, promise one of the most engaging screen teams since the Gable-Colbert romps that happened one night. Their diverting adventures run the range of high comedy and gripping melo-drama with an engaging romance deftly entwined in the surprise-packed plot.

"Adventure in Manhattan" relates the exciting escapades of a prominent detective story author who presumes to predict the theft of various rare and jewel treasures. Furthermore, he is assigned by a newspaper to write about the crimes-to-be in a series of special articles. It is then that he meets Jean Arthur, star of a play still in production, and launches the adventures that carry the two through every conceivable romantic and melodramatic complication that two young lovers on Broadway could possibly get into.

McCrea appears in the redoubtable young mystery author with Stephen Horsley as the suave criminal genius who poses as Miss Arthur's theatrical producer in order to camouflage his carefully planned thefts. Also seen in the particularly strong cast are Herman Bing, Thomas Mitchell, Victor Killian and John Qelzdell.

The Belle Isle World News events will be exhibited on the same program.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 the last complete show beginning at 8.30. "Without Orders" begins at 3.45, 7.20 and 9.50. "Adventure in Manhatten," begins at 2.40 and 9.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Follow Your Heart"

Marion Talley, the coloratura soprano who made her singing bow at the Metropolitan Opera House at the age of nineteen, will prove even more popular in her screen debut—the leading feminine role in Republic's "Follow Your Heart", which opens Monday at the Capitol.

No alone was left unturned by the Republic studio to provide for the petite diva a fitting vehicle equal to any she had during her skyrocket stage career. She was surrounded by a cast that reads like a "who book" of the stage and screen with a co-star of great charm and singing ability, Michael Bartlett, tenor of Paris, Rome, New York and Hollywood.

Of especial interest is the mixed chorus of dancers assembled and directed by Larry Ceballos, screen impresario. They appear in several numbers in support of Talley and Bartlett.

Just to lend atmosphere to the story which is laid in the old south, the studio brought from New York the widely known Hall Johnson Negro chorus—who won undying fame as the singers in "Green Pastures," Gotham stage hit.

Aubrey Scotto, an opera singer of note, directed the musical masterpiece with a fine feeling for melody and photography.

In the supporting cast are Nigel Bruce, Henrietta Crosman, Vivienne Osborne, Margaret Irving, Lois Alberni, Josephine Whittell, Walter Catlett and others.

Added Hits.

A Charlie Chase comedy that will make you forget your Christmas shopping, "On the Wrong Trek"—and a novelty subject, "Tin Backmiston Rackets".

Starts Tuesday.

John Wayne is seen in a sure fire Western hit, "The Oregon Trail". Also extra swell list of short will be shown with this picture headed by a Sherry Hall production, a Musical Comedy, Novelty Vaudeville Short, "Rose and Caviar".

LIVESTOCK IS SAVED

Stratford, Ont., Dec. 13—(CP)—A large bank barn containing implements, hay and a large number of chickens was destroyed by fire Friday morning on the farm of Lloyd Coulthard, St. Mary's highway, neighbors were successful in saving all the livestock.

The fire is said to have started from the explosion of a lantern which Mr. Coulthard had hung in the barn just before doing the chores.

THREATENS TO LEAVE

Threat to leave Canada unless Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck of Ontario halts plans to divide the sequest to claimants under the Miller will among several Toronto mothers, was voiced by Mrs. Martin Kenny, self styled winner of the "baby marathon", Mrs. Kenny denies that other mothers are tied with her in the number of children they have borne in ten years since the death of eccentric Charles Miller, making them eligible for part of the $778,000 heritage left in his will.

QUEENS DEFEAT PRINCETON 6-1 IN COLLEGE LOOP

Finnigan And Recruit Jarvis Assigned to Task

CANADIENS PLAY TWO

Amerks And Rangers Also Have a Busy Week-end

Canada's representatives in the newly-formed International Intercollegiate Hockey League are doing all right by themselves in the early season schmaunging. So far the dominion's state is clean in international games.

Queen's University of Kingston scored the second successive Canadian triumph over Princeton Tigers by a 6-1 count in the Inverted Mercy Gill Redmen trounced University of Montreal 6-0. University of Toronto whitewashed the Tigers 10-0 Thursday night. The newly formed college circuit, which opened with the Toronto-Princeton game, hasn't an other clash scheduled until Jan. 8. Then, however, the Canadian universities begin their below-the-border invasion.

As against Toronto, Tigers did their best work last night when they moved into Queen's defensive zone. Then lack of experience coupled with poor shooting and backchecking, allowed the Tri-color to break away on the unprotected flank in goal.

Score Three In Period.

Hold scoreless for one period by their city rivals, McGill slapped home three goals in the last half of the second period and another three in the last ten minutes of the third, in perfect contrast, following weeks of play in the tough Montreal senior group, the Redmen outclassed U. of M. with their speed and intricate passing plays.

Gord Cruickshield started the scoring parade on a three-way movement with Roland Lamb and Bing Crosby, then Gord Middleton and Omar Dickison blasted home goal unassisted. Maurice Barakon in the U. of M. goal.

Crosby scored two in the third and with less than a minute to play Paul Heagle banged the sixth. The Frenchmen gave Ash Emerson, former Harvard goalie, little to do at the McGill end.

Covey opened the scoring for Princeton just two minutes after the game opened but Queen's quickly got back and Bob Gardiner, Johnny Munro, and held a 3-1 lead at the end of the period. Munro potted another goal in the third.

Brilliant work by the defenceman Bissell kept the tri-color away from the Tiger goal in the second period. Paupore scored a pair and Catlin the second during the final 20 minutes.

'DIZ' IS 'IF' MAN OF CARDS

Dean Says Salary Should Be at Least 130 G's

Bradenton, Fla., Dec. 19 (AP).—A satisfied grin that no human had a good word for the St. Louis Cardinals' front office and promotion of surprise that Branch Rickey could call him the team's "if."

The Cardinals' general manager was quoted as saying "if" Dizzy were satisfied after the team should win the pennant next year what with Lon Warneke and other pitchers winning 20 games, his salary based on the supposition Dizzy would pitch 20 games.

The Dean said he never was aware he was discussed by such Cardinals, and added he certainly is for "if."

"The record of my work shows I gave everything I had at all times for the Cardinals and Gas House Gang," he said. "And I'll tell you and the world I'd rather be in St. Louis than anywhere else."

Ole Diz then launched into the reason he'd like to remain with the team's head man in Daytona Beach by train, with the rest of the team but would work out in Bradenton.

He's changed his mind slightly now. If salary arrangements are right, he said, he will report to Bradenton. He has quoted $100,000 as the right salary arrangement for next season.

Gordon Richards, England's premier jockey of the present age, is well on his way to perhaps overshadow the record established by the late Fred Archer who died at the age of 29 years. In his 17 years of riding Archer booked home 2,- 775 winners out of 8,084 mounts. Richards ran 1,000 mounts this season, thereby setting a record, that is likely to stand for some time. During his career Richards has ridden 2,011 winners, just 64 less than Archer, who is recognized as the greatest jockey of all times.

The afternoon at the Quinte Hotel S. S. "Sandy" Hunter, convener of junior and intermediate O.H.A. groups No. 3 respectively, will enter the proverbial lion's cage of local hockey circles and try to settle or patch-up the differences that has arisen between the clubs composing the intermediate section which includes Trenton, Belleville, Peterboro and the K.C.A.F. clubs. The club delegates meeting will have received definite instructions regarding what procedure to take and how to cast their votes prior to the drafting of the schedule. The only club in the loop to register dissatisfaction with their lot is the Peterborough Hockey Club while K.C.A.F., Belleville and Trenton delegates are pleased with their individual groupings as issued by the parent body.

Albert "Toots" Holway, local professional hockey player, received a telegram from Frank Foyston, manager of the Seattle Seattles yesterday. Foyston offered Holway a tempting contract with transportation both ways included, providing he would be in Seattle on Tuesday. "Toots" replied he could not leave Belleville before Dec. 26th. "I haven't been home yet my family on a Christmas day too often of late years and am going to stay put this year. I'll be in Seattles my services a couple of days should not make any difference," added Toots today. In his wire Foyston agreed to supply transportation by air from Chicago to Seattle. Toots is now awaiting a possible (?) reply by wire.

If there is any person in or around this district has a sedan in good working order and would like to have all expenses paid for a trip to Florida during the next little thing is within the grasp of any interested person. While the grand of a Hudson sedan which recently a resident of Toronto appreciated to the extent of purchasing a Canadian 200 mile motorcycle champion, and himself Monday he would pay all expenses, if Geoffe would provide an automobile, to enable him to be the United States national motorcycle meet next February. "If you can drive from here to Toronto, I'll pay all expenses down, to Florida and return," the Toronto man in question. Now all Georgie is looking for is some person who would like to take a trip for free off, with all expenses paid, and enjoy a trip to the "sunny south." Sounds like a cheap outing for some lucky person.

Herbie Mitchell, who rifled pucks into the opposition goal from along the right boards at the old Arena in the days of the N.H.A. not any too well with his Hersey Bears this far this season. The Mitchell coached Bears have been a potent power in the United States American League for a couple years, but last year winning the league with ease. On Boxing Day Hersey Bears opened their new $1,000,000 arena in Hersey, Pa., with a capacity crowd. For the first nine games of this year's schedule the champion Bears failed to win a game in the column, but expect to fare much better now they have a home ice. Hersey, Pa., is only a city of some 15 or 18 thousand population, but boasts of one of the finest artificial ice rinks on the continent. Mitchell, who possessed a powerful shot back in the good old days of hockey, is now coaching as the balance of his schedule is concerned.

The newly organized Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association held a meeting in Hamilton last evening. The up-and-coming organization seems to be to be the one and only medium through which to replenish the ever-fading hockey material in the smaller centres. Minor hockey takes in all players 18 years and under, they further when playing should be under the guidance and account for the victory. Although the intermediates carried an advantage in weight, the juniors battled back gamely, Dickens and Robinson played good ball for the losers while Gordon, Edwards and Atkins looked the best for the winners. Gordon led the scorers of the night with four clean baskets. Tobe and Dickens rank two fine shoots for the juniors also.

DAVID SCHRINER TO BE WATCHED CLOSELY TONIGHT

McGill University Also Wins Over Montreal U. by 6-0

CATLIN GETS TWO

Former Kingston Junior Star Makes Good in Fast Company

Mr. David Schriner will be accorded a rousing welcome when he steps on the ice at the Arena tonight with the Toronto tonight for a National Hockey League engagement with Maple Leafs.

In other words, Sweeny is going to let the wonder boy, in a big way, of course. No one is going to wind a stick around his neck or anything of the order and that. The idea is to hobble the high-scoring Amerk, not to cripple him.

Veteran Frankie Finnigan and Bud Jarvis, recruited from the disbanded Buffalo Bisons, did the job so nicely in New York Thursday when Leafs won 4-1. They have been given the assignment again. They have the job of trying to prevent, not to park on the high-scoring Amerk's heels and see that he doesn't shake loose on a scoring spree.

Americans face a tough task tonight. Not only has Leafs have the psychological advantage of the Thursday night victory because they have a team that conserve their energy for another game with Chicago on Saturday.

There is Play Two Games.

They, therefore, will be playing all play two games on the week-end while Toronto, Chicago, Boston and Montreal will play but one.

The Habitants, leaders of the Canadian division, play Montreal Maroons tonight and then move on to New York for a game with Rangers on Patrick's team tomorrow night. Boston meet Red Wings of Detroit Saturday in the fifth game of the week-end. Montreal Maroons are at Chicago.

With Canadiens and Amerks both playing twice the loop may be in for some interesting games at stake. Habitants now lead by three points but Amerks could go on and shake loose in the see-saw struggle by taking two, while Canadiens and Rangers broke even. The American division is almost certain to be shuffled around as the Chicago Blackhawks are in first place and Boston trail them by only two points. Detroit is in the cellar scoreless wonders from Chicago setting anywhere near the leaders for some time. They are still bogged down nine points behind Boston and have scored only 12 goals in 13 games.

NEW BOXING CONTENDER SEEN

Bob Pastor, Former Amateur K. O.'s Impellitteree to Win State Title

New York, Dec. 19 (AP) — Bob Pastor, the former New York University heavyweight who was amazing what heller known as an amateur boxer than he is as a pro, is beginning to look like a better fighter than the fans thought he was.

That is the opinion some less important notices, however, when he knocked out Tony Impellitteri in the seventh round of their ten round bout before 2,500 fans at Madison Square Garden last night.

The only visible rewards for that victory are a New York State heavyweight title and first call on a possible bout with Joe Louis or Max Schmeling, as it increased Pastor's prestige enormously.

"The Imp", the biggest fighter now in action, has been touted for years as a coming champion.

Pastor, giving away 54% pounds and eight inches in height, hit Tony time during the 2:58 pounder down in his own size.

Basket Ball Season Opens With Fast Exhibition Tilt

Displaying a splendid system of defence the Deacon A.C. Juniors defeated the Intermediates in relates to a close score in an exhibition game played at the Collegiate gymnasium last evening when the juniors finally emerged victorious. Intermediates staged a last minute rally to win by the score of 8 to 6. The game was fast and even with a superior type of defensive play featuring the first half marked especially shown throughout the initial half, when the intermediates led by the score of 5 to 2. The game was played as an exhibition tilt for the purpose of pre-season basketball experience, both squads flooring all available aspiring players.

Coach Joe Faulkner trotted out two complete teams for his Deacon A.C. juniors and used the surplus players to apply the pressure against the veteran intermediates in the latter stages of the game. The early stages of the tilt found the juniors playing a purely defensive game and no scoring was registered until Art Wickerson successfully tossed two free shots in succession to put the Deacons in immediate advantage of two points. The juniors displayed a fine brand of passing game, but seemingly could not locate the basket for the first half, while the experienced intermediates bided their time and eventually worked their way into a scoring position. Neither squad could successfully penetrate their opponents' defence owing to prompt open shots on baskets during a close checking period. Failure on the part of the juniors to break rapidly cost them potential scoring possibilities.

The game developed during the progress of the second half, however, as the Faulkner-coached juniors pressed their alternates into action to set a dizzy pace. Fast basket ball and the score knotted at 6-6 with but a few minutes left to play, when suddenly "Red" Gordon, of the "I" Intermediates, broke loose to score two rapid baskets

"Dear OLD Santa"

—here we've been married half a year and now it's Christmas and for the life of me I don't know what to get the little girl! I think she'd like a lamp for the living room—but then again she might prefer an electric cleaner. Golly, Santa, as one old married man to another can't you help me out?

Anxiously,
JOE

Dear Joe:
Well, young fellow, it shouldn't be hard to decide. Does this young lady do her own housework, or has she a maid? With someone in to make the beds and wash the dishes, I'd say buy her a lamp . . . but otherwise, well, for gosh sakes, help her out with the vacuum cleaner! But — whichever it is — buy her something personal, too! A compact, a bag, lingerie, stockings. What it is doesn't matter just so long as it's all for her and you bought it!

Sincerely,
SANTA

P. S. Now If THIS Leaves You Up in the Air, Just Look at the Ads in the Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

DEAR SANTA: My husband has a million ties and the worst of it is he wants more. He's crazy on the subject of neckwear but doesn't trust my taste, What will I do?

Frantically yours,
MARY

DEAR MARY:
Buy him a couple of ties, of course! But before you visit his favorite store, wrap up half a dozen of his pet cravats and take them along. Show them to the sales person. Don't duplicate just what he's wearing, but get something similar. And here's a big word of caution: Don't try to set a new style for him! Buy him the kind of pattern he's been wearing. Remember—you can change his brand of coffe on him, but his neckties—never!

Love from
SANTA

P. S. Where to Buy 'em? Look in the Daily Ontario Intelligencer

DEAR SANTA CLAUS: Don't faint—I want to buy a present for my mother-in-law. Yeh, I really like the old girl 'cause she lives out-of-town— though she does insist that her grandchildren look like her. What will I give her, Santy, huh?

Dear Art:
Where are your brains, old fellow? You could have answered your own question. Send her a nice lounge chair and a nice Merry Christmas letter to boot! After she's tried the chair, she may even admit she likes you better than you think.

Sincerely,
SANTA CLAUS

HOW JOAN LOVED THRU

—by—

ANNE FORESTER

The easy ease of her name swept gracefully from the pride that lived in that slight body! She wouldn't appeal to her family—how we lived, however, only knew. I was raised with little—but material ease; but with unconfessed the will, it made a fighter out of me.""

Hayens was speaking softly, as though to himself. The girl's eyes were, instinctively, on the bowl fastened on his face, her lips were parted, he scarcely breathed lest though she feared to break some spell.

"The poverty—and the rigid pride which was worse than the poverty, the pride which drove me to the very inch of the way, that was the pride which gave me the added incentive to succeed. Pride—pride—pride! Pride which made her older than her years, filled to the gape of the man's recital. She could see mouth-ing things against against a world which only too often must have appeared as a hungry mouth to her. She could see the heavy, back-ling burdens too great for his slender strength, gently determined to lift the burden from the frail shoulders. Bitter times they must have been, when merely to be dry was a luxury!

What strange impulse had urged Mark Havens to give her this glimpse of his heart? Joan knew him well enough to realise how unlike him this was.

And again, as though he read her thoughts Havens sufged in that disturbing manner. "Strange... I haven't spoken to others of this ... you are inspiring."

She was startled to have him say that. He turned his head from the wheel and lay it warmly over hers for a moment as it lay in her lap. Somehow were less lonely, some lonely quality in us both... reaching out, groping, seeking against that all about. I need your friendship, Joan . . ."

Chapter 28.
Strange. Confidences

Mark Havens' car was at the curb, a small expensive coupe, which its whole surface with mud, its top gleaming like wet black satin. As the man handed the girl in to the warm, blood in Joan rose to the adventure. She responded to the soft luxury of the cushions, to the fact that she was no longer riding in the swaying seat of the car emphasized the fact of this snug warmth.

The man seemed to read her thoughts, for he turned to her in a conscious sigh of content he smiled while he stepped on the starter.

The last time I was here when I was a youngster and crept into a dry corner to keep out of the pouring down on the roof. It seemed a long period of time ago—to be in shelter while the rest of the world was drenched!" Joan's voice was dreamy. Suddenly was a little twist of bitterness to the words which betrayed the girl's grim to his face in wonder. Somehow she had always taken it for granted that Mark Havens had led the sheltered and effortless existence of a rich man's son. But that ambitious remark....to think it luxury merely to be out of the rain that hinted of poverty.

Joan looked up to see her companion from beneath her lashes, trying to read his face. Clean-cut arrogant nose, lips, spoke of breeding, fine sweep of the brow shaded by thick hair, the firm chin brim of his soft hat...the curve of his mouth was tender. It was then she had always fancied it—and there was a whimsical twist to at one side that was almost tender...

It was disconcerting to have his eyes suddenly turn on hers, a little of amusement in their depths.

"Puzzle you, don't I Joan?"

The girl flushed in amusement herself. "Why, no. It wasn't in the picture I'd drawn for myself of your background. I'm curious."

"Perhaps you've misjudged me in my silence," Mark said. "I've been thinking. Since early morning—had to go down about that Bradshaw oil well project, you know. Haven't had a bite to eat since breakfast. Am I presuming if you take pity on me and come to dinner?"

Havens did not miss the instinctive proud straightening of Joan's slim body. "That's nice of you."

"I've eaten in that thought the man with a flash of tenderness. but aloud he said, his voice carefully casual, "I hate to eat alone—particularly on Thanksgiving. Please—Joan!"

Christmas Legends

The Story of Holly and Mistletoe

By Isobel M. Priestly

The holly, with its crimson berries, has long been an emblem of good cheer, but many a maid has stood palpitating beneath a sprig of mistletoe, not realizing that while berries without knowing the reason for the custom of "kissing under the mistletoe."

The ancient Romans used to send each other boughs of holly as their winter festival at Saturnalia and later it became associated with the great Christian festival of Christmas—hence its original English name of Holy Tree.

Holly was supposed to be peculiarly hateful to witches and a tree planted outside the door of a house kept the inmates free from harm. A sprig of Christmas holly used as a place which had been used in church decorations was regarded as a charm against lightning. Almost ending."

Nothing produced from precious, modern significance.

When Mark returned to the girl he found her perfectly arresting a kitten which had just wandered in. He couldn't see her face, for the hair touched to ruddy gold by the fire-glow, Joan kept her head bent, showered as she was with the kitten's affectionate attentions. Mark's heart leaped at the sight. Love, "Come to me, dear," she told the kitten, "You're growing quite impossibly vain!"

Mark had been thinking of her since yesterday. Thinking of her as a little warm glow through Joan. She was the disturbingly pungent, the mysterious "Princess" could blot her from his mind! She had his grace to tell Judy ashamed of that. "Joan, my dear," she told herself severely. "You're growing impossibly vain!"

Mark had been thinking of her since yesterday. Thinking of her as a little warm glow through Joan. She was the disturbingly pungent, the mysterious "Princess" could blot her from his mind! She had his grace to tell Judy ashamed of that. "Joan, my dear," she told herself severely. "You're growing impossibly vain!"

The winter days passed Joan's flung herself into her work with a fierce energy which swept all before it. Rather than risk of finding her unfailing good-will even Emma Hastings' arrogance had faded. Yet Joan's secret astonishment she even won a few grudging words of approval from the blue pencilled secretary.

One noontime, as Joan put on her hat in the office cloakroom she caught the reflection of the older woman behind her. The girl turned quickly, but the other motioned her back.

"Thank you, don't trouble yourself," she said in her curious, precise way, "I can wait."

Emma Hastings waiting for Joan Ormond! That was astonishing enough but more astonishing still was the barely perceptible hesitancy of the secretary when Joan started away.

"You are going to lunch—I thought she paused.

"You want me to stay?" Joan asked with perfect good humor and started to pull off her hat.

"No—I meant—if you are going with no one—perhaps you will eat with me."

By the time Joan had recovered from her surprise they had reached the small trim candy store where Emma Hastings had been a girl for years and were sharing a tiny wire-legged table. It was a pathetic little picture.

Emma Hasting's unaccustomed plunge into sociability appeared to have frightened her, but Joan had seen behind the mask at last. She put herself out to be the charming self and suddenly checking her small, repellent bites of sandwiches Miss Hastings spoke abruptly.

"You look like my sister's girl—Marjory, Same hair and eyes—"

Joan found herself strangely anxious to keep the good will of this strange woman. "Is she living in the city here—your niece?"

"The sharp blue eyes across the table went suddenly misty. Miss Hastings crumbled a piece of bread with a curiously nervous movement of her blue veined hand.

"She died last spring."

Joan's warm young hand went over to Joan one elbow on the flies of the kitten's paws. She put out to cover the cold boney one.

"Oh, poor dear!" her voice pulsed with sympathy.

Emma Hastings' hand was withdrawn but not brusquely and after that quiet harmony marked the office. Miss Hastings pleasant hours Joan even resented the intrusion of those lonely Sundays.

Yet even these were lifted. At the shortland case which she attended with Mark she met Mark Havens and with merry dark eyes. She was naturally rather impressed by Lewis—more becomingly shortened to "Donny" by all who knew her. Flirt unpretentious and brown-eyed, eloped a chronic case of hero-worship for the young engineer. Joan, She brought her home to her husband's family on Christmas night. The Lewises were a noisy happy family, everyone plain-spoken and wholesome. Donny's 9-year old Tom studying to be a dentist—Mary Ann her pet—Peggy the "baby." It was the first home contact Joan had made since she left Doreeyville and it soothed that instinctive ache which had always been there. Joan's pleasant little

But there were times—especially those times when she stayed all night and listened to Donny's chatter—times when she knew that Joan felt her heart go faintly sick at the thought of those like self-horror Donny was so young—so unmistakably—beside her Joan felt very old and guilty. Guilty—that blind love path she had walked alone she had been forced to retrace. Guilty—over the heart-breaking days in the grey house Mother Ormond—the memory of Elmer Parcher's sneers! Long after Donny had fallen asleep Joan would lie awake, her eyes staring up into the dark She wanted Donny's happiness—she couldn't—Donny the inexperienced—not Emma Hastings with her cramped outlook—Donny with his broad understand—someone like Mark.

Chapter 31
An Interrupted Talk

It was nearly closing time; Miss Hastings' typewriter was nearly covered and she was buttoning her self into her severe overcoat when Joan noticed Mark's private office door open and he finally tossed his pages at his elbow.

The short December day was ending, the windows were already black with night and the green electric lamp on Mark's desk was lighted. Joan noticed with a little tender impulse to stroke it, how the mellow glow was reflected in his sleek dark hair as he bent over an open book. As she was leaving he suddenly raised his head and smiled.

"Come back—if you aren't in a hurry, Joan. You haven't talked to me for an age."

Mark could not guess at the leap of Joan's heart as she turned to approach the desk. "Was that such a hardship?" she smiled impishly.

"Perhaps it was greater than you know!" Joan could not tell if he was serious or not; his lips smiled but the brown eyes were grave. Mark was inwardly surprised to find the part Joan had come to play in his life—Donny's and half sister half the boy-chum he had never found. He knew when he was a boy. His life had been busy and rather lonely; he was finding it with the unconscious selfishness of a man. It was pleasant to have a sympathetic companion at one's right hand.

They spoke briefly of the case on which he was working. Having helped Miss Hastings check over the data Joan was familiar with its details. The talk drifted to more personal things. Through the blue smoke rising from his briar Mark watched the girl curled up in the armchair. He was marking the little subtle changes of the past months—changes of which Joan herself was not aware, the half-uniform fullness which he had noticed at Esmee's apartment was gone. In its place was a dainty pride, a self-reliant poise; there were thoughtful depths in the grey eyes and a sweet womanly curve to the mouth which the bewildered and impulsive girl of six months before had not known.

"You're quiet—telling your own, Joan," Mark said abruptly.

Joan glanced up startling of his meaning in a swift searching look. "It makes you feel—strong— to play God with a child's life by questioning brows, "Don't you remember—how that I was a little aimless bit of driftwood knocked about by the waves—and you calling it fate. I decided to build my own fate, the way I wanted it, that is all."

"And is it the way you want it, now, Joan?"

Mark could not read the eyes which flashed briefly to his. The tenest hesitancy before she answered. "I think so....I feel—I'm building. I'm making my future."

Under-Mark's questions Joan told of Doney Lewis and her theory who had practically adopted her, of Tess, took her in the theatres and to his fraternity dances. "Tom is Donny's brother's son; eighteen—a reply to Mark's questioning look.

Mark Havens sensed a sudden twinge of jealousy. Tom Lewis in his mind's picture of Joan's life with the glamour of youth which he, Mark Havens, could not give the girl. Nothing could have been further from the truth—figured Mark—but he realized actually but Mark could not know that and he was surprised at himself. After all, she was the first of girl only an older man would properly appreciate—

Mark's eyes were fair on the very excellent line of reasoning when the file in his hand was pointed. Their startled eyes leaped to it. But it was not the girl's name that the woman who appeared on the threshold.

A startling figure to flash into a law office! A lovely, expensive creature wrapped in furs from foot in a white ermine cape. There was something in the way she held her head with a graceful pride that was almost insolent. Her eyes, strangely dark—brilliant blue her pale face—brilliant between long black lashes, were fixed on a stranger with a start and ice: she dimmed everything in her path with her cold grey glare all points of light to her exquisite self. And she was apparently very much at home in Emma Havens' private office.

The Country Boy Detective

by AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright)

"I aims to be a policeman or a detective and I'm thinking you could help me some by telling me how fair is on."

Sheriff Al Trundle looked up in surprise at the red-faced country youth who faced him.

"Detective, hey? Been reading 'Old Sleuth,' and have you a microscope, a revolver and a star?"

"You didn't think," the boy's tone was of protest, "I would come unprepared?"

Trundle gasped. Here was a kid off the stage, a figure from rural melodramas. Yet he was tremendously in earnest.

"Sorry, bub, but my detective force is full. Better go back and take care of the stock. There's no money or glory for you in rounding up cows and pigs—pickpockets are my country fair, I'll ain't so all like the Story books."

"You mean you aren't figuring on giving me a job? Say, I've got a diploma and a fine letter from the head of the school and—but the sheriff interrupted.

"Sorry, no good. Tear them up and go back, son."

"But," the boy spoke sadly. "If I can't be a detective, I can at least stay and see the fair. Dad's there and I can help him sell his cows."

Trundle took a long look at his visitor. He could let me help out a little, or maybe you would let me help out a little, or maybe you would let me see what I could do. I won't nab some body who has a reward hanging on his head."

The sheriff saw the anxiety in the country youth's face. He remembered a memory of another youth who, with a deputy sheriff's badge, had brought he was to be sheriff of the world.

Twilight not be a bad idea, Pardon me, but you're just the sort the con men would pick for a victim. You look as though you have money, you know, and sort of lead them on. Then call on me. Email ... Well?"

"Leave it to me," said the boy. "Just tig the oddsy boys off I'm-ploying them to me. I'll see if I can get a regular place on the force when I'm older."

Three days later the recruit was thoughtful.

"Sheriff," he said, "do you suppose there really is any merit in having money — and machines? The fellow just turned a crank and greenbacks came out—"

"Yes, yes," the sheriff was sitting straight, "and then he said he wouldn't while I—we—the case I've got to find out, yet, who the fellow's partner is!"

"Partner!" he chuckled. "You had me fooled, kid. Thought you were just a boy. Now I'm an old pal game in the business. Now I'll tell you what. I'll have a man near you and you follow him. Then we'll get him, we'll make the pinch. These green goods men carry records."

The sheriff, himself, watched the lad, saw him engaged in serious conversation with a stranger and marked the man as the crook Still the boy gave no sign.

"It's bigger than you think," the farm had whispered when he got him alone. "They're a big gang working all sorts of tricks, and we'll need more help. Get ready for tomorrow night. I'm on the inside now." And he swilled his chest and looked magnificently important.

—Reports of bunko games which Trundle's men worried the sheriff were dismissed how in the knowledge the gang would be caught. The kid had no report.

"The stout man I was talking to. Orab him there," he said, "and grounds tomorrow afternoon near the bearded lady show. Right near, and in disguise I'll be waiting. Then we can get the rest."

"Good," said the sheriff, kicking out his hand. I guess you will head a job all right."

They grabbed the stout man next day and led him protesting to the Jail.

"It's bad enough to be bunkoed by a red-faced farmer kid," he fussed. "But when he's arrested is worse. You'll have to let me go when my attorney hears of this."

"A red-faced farmer kid? Say, where's that kick detective?"

But the boy who had asked for a job was gone. Afforded protection by the sheriff and his men, pretending he is a cops, he had had his own way for two weeks and that was enough.

"Gosh," said the sheriff, and I thought he was a boob! I guess I'm getting old."

DAILY SHORT STORY

CAREER

By Karin Asbrand

Madame, yawning behind a fat and shapely hand thought that never had she had a pupil with such lack of feeling as little Jacqueline Prescott. Yet somehow she must make a singer out of the child because Maurice Prescott insisted on it so.

Today Jacqueline seemed worse than usual. Poor little Dumont, who accompanied Madames embryo musical prodigies was partly to blame, for, though Pixie had technique at the tips of her fingers there was no music in her soul.

To Pixie, in her own words, Jacqueline was a much pickled tripe.

Madame said, "Next month you shall have your chance on the stage, Jacqueline. You shall show what you can do."

Jacqueline's little pansy face blanched. "No, ma," she pleaded. "I don't want to sing before a whole lot of people. I am not ready."

"She'll never be a singer," ventured Pixie, after the girl had gone, her mass of blonde curls framing her face like a golden nimbus, her fur coat fastened snugly over her throat to protect the precious throat there.

Madame shrugged her shoulders. "Sometimes you are tiresome, dearie," said she. "Her poppa was the great tenor. She has the voice. She needs the grand' passion. It will come. She is young. You are jealous, Pixie. Why don't you like Jacqueline?"

Two days later, when Jacqueline came for her lesson, the star pupil was thanking God for a garden, with all the fervor of a religious fanatic. Jacqueline sat down to listen raptly behind the velvet portieres. When the star pupil lamched into "The Rosary", Jacqueline's inner self reverently kissed the cross with him and promised eternal devotion to what she rather knew not herself.

When her turn came, she faced madame with a new light in her eyes. Madame sensed a change.

Pixie lightly began a balleriffy lyric, and the girl trilled it through. The star pupil, sorting his music in the outer studio, peered from behind the draperies suddenly, and smiled at her. Jacqueline's voice soared clear as a crystal spirit. The notes of her "Ave Maria" died into a breathless sob, and the girl sank into a chair and buried her face in her hands. Madame's plump hands caressed the gleam of her fair hair.

"Um," she murmured. "Has somebody been kissing into you a soul my little Jacqueline? You have found the grand passion. I must call your mamma."

"Bumph," grunted Pixie. "She wanted to show off before Phillip Wendell. That's her way of making Miss notice her. He's never looked at a woman before. All he sees is music. It is he hears. And if she would but shut up, pa, I suppose I could."

And Pixie followed them three nights before madame's big stage presentation. She would have found them outside the French restriction from gale beating hands. It was a tense moment, and precious forever in the heart of Jacqueline, as she ran through with it," she whispered to him.

"Then don't," he begged. "I sail for Italy tomorrow. You know that. Come with me. Marry me, Jacqueline, and come with me."

The future loomed bright with happiness. But then she thought of madame's row. She shook her head, even as Phillip drew her closer. "I couldn't," said she. "I'm on the program. Madame counts on me to make good. Just a little matter of hours you know."

"I'm proud of you," whispered Phillip Wendell. "I only wish that I could stay to hear you. You see, I'm counting on you, too. But, remember this, Jacqueline, you shall always be with you in spirit, if not in person. Hearing. And when the performance is over, you shall come to me in Italy."

It was very real. Phillip left on the Conte di Racconti, and Jacqueline prepared to face the footlights.

Two hours before the performance the news of the sinking of the Conte di Racconti came over the radio. Fire at sea. Flames of terror searing cold hearts. And through pandemonium where it was needed most. Names strolled furrowed on the lists of brave men. Among them was Philip Wendell, who was among the martyred dead.

Jacqueline faced the footlights and the sea of faces before her with a heart whose ache had frozen within her.

"Are you listening, Phillip?" her fiancé Jacqueline's heart. "Because I am singing to you."

And she sang as she had never sung before.

She slipped away from the shattering applause, past the medley of glittering outstretched hands and madame's tear-dimmed eyes, into the dressing room.

"You will make the name of Prescott famous," applauded her mother, trailing after her.

"If there's any name that will be made famous, it will be Wendell," she said, "Phillip and I were married before he sailed."

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

When dawn poured over the forest, the fugitives let themselves down from their treetop refuge and resumed their journey. Of Timer made no reference to the fact that the girl had sobbed the name of "Jerry" in her sleep; but he was jealous of this mysterious rival.

Was Jerry her husband, her fiance? Old Timer was afraid to ask, and the girl volunteered no information. There was a certain grim remoteness about her, as if her mind were set on some distant, all-absorbing objective from which no earthly force could swerve her.

She showed keen interest, however, in the miracle by which they had escaped from the pygmies. It was their unseen rescuer who had halted their enemies with swift arrows and opened their way to flight? Where was he now? Would he abandon them in the jungle?

That's was reason enough why Tarzan did not come to their aid now. He was helpless. Intrinsic the great apes had carried him to a secret glade, and there they had worked for hours, but their big fingers were powerless to remove the wire which bound him.

Oshawa Stocks Break on Robot Move

The precipitate break in Rubber from 40 to 10 and the announcement that the core had been "sailed" which in my day I was told was somewhat suspected brought considerable liquidation in all Oshawa stocks, by disgusted speculators. That such selling occurred on Thursday market was to be expected yesterday but there appears to be no reason why the whole affair should have serious repercussions on the general list. Probably the heaviest aspect of the Rubber scandal is to be taken from the statement of Mr. Campbell who stated, in referring to directors, officials and promoters of the company, "I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that I do not believe any of these men know of this condition."

The chief topic of conversation yesterday centred around the stocks in the Oshawa District of Northern Quebec that of course by unfortunate developments surrounding one company in that district. It is reported that such a situation had to arise, as it is almost inherent in so many mines that are making an honest effort to develop into successful producers.

Market Comment

Economic conditions continue to present a reassuring background for the market, state Gairdner Havard & Co. in their Mid-Week Review. The tempo of recovery in both Canada and the U.S. is quickening. Industrial expansion in North America is catching up with the increase in world production, and next year will witness the beginning of the boom stage in our business cycle. Indeed, we are facing a cycle for such a development, and a boom in the market places is often followed by corresponding activity in business.

However favourable the background may be for higher stock prices, speculative excesses will breed fresses which will result in a readjustment of prices. To judge the danger of the present situation is difficult. The foundation of the market has been so sound that it has been able to withstand the shock of many abuses. Nevertheless, even conservative investors should be very alert for signs that warranted optimism may have developed into unwarranted enthusiasm—not in individual issues but throughout the list.

Several brokers in New York are blaming the margin rules for the present popularity of low priced shares. The expense of carrying stocks on thinly traded issues has driven the public into stocks which derive all their support from the fact are selling at a low price for the time being. The chief objection is that the margin regulation is merely another piece of legislation that has hurt the little fellow. In spite of warnings of an official and unofficial nature and in spite of the irregular action of several recent speculative favorites, the demand for low priced issues continues strong. Reduced railroad earnings have attained considerable popularity and are selling around their best levels of the year, despite the strength of considerable public buying.

Power Corporation

Power Corporation touched a new high yesterday, and the Street is wondering whether this calls for possibility of another dividend on the common. One placing the stock on a regular dividend basis or distributes the profits the company is reported to have made in some of its mining investments. The stock continues to act impressively.

Welch, W. Va., Dec. 19 (AP)—C. J. Staley, landed a true bass for saving his life.

His companion—with him in a rowboat 150 feet down a mountainside to land in a tree—capsized.

For an hour the car hung there with Staley bleeding the bare to attract aid. Three miners rescued him, uninjured.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 19 (CP)—Irregularity highlighted trading ruled on the industrial board of Toronto exchange with rumover in comparatively small volume.

A few new highs for the year were posted, among them Orange Crush common and pfd. and Canadian Vickers.

British American Oil eased Friday's loss of ¾ and the close was up for Imperial, International Petroleum and Prairie Oils.

Brewers and Distillers had a mingle gain while Walkers common was off about a half. Molsons and Breweries held steady and Brazilian was up a minor fraction.

Action in Base Metals again stood out in the utilities. It held a half point gain into the close as 7%, Montreal Power was stronger and Winnipeg Electric A added the minimum fraction.

In the miscellaneous group better prices ruled for Bathurst Power A, Moore Corporation, Simpson pfd. and Russell pfd.

Hamilton Bridge pfd. and Malartic Gold Fee dropped a point each and Building Products was down the same amount. Steel Company of Canada, Dominion Bridge, Canadian Car common and the Preferred were up fractions. In the bank group new high prices for the year were posted for Commerce and Royal.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 19 (CP)—The ills held the leadership in the trade on the mining section today and the price range was upwards while the metals had some air pockets along with a few gains.

Foothills features the oils with a jump of 60 cents to 2.26 while Home Oil advanced 25 cents, Calgary-Edmonton 10 to 2.80, Dalhousie about 20 to 1.90.

In the golds O'Brien held the day's interest, rising more than a point to around 13 3-4.

Next to O'Brien, volume bulked in Wright Hargreaves with the price slightly heavy at 7.80. Kirkland Lake returned to the spotlight with a price rise of about 1 to 72 and Macassa was up 40 to 7.50, Stadacona advanced to a new high at 96, up 8 for the day.

Dome was steady at 48 3-4, McIntyre off 1-4 to 39 and Lake Shore unchanged at 46. Pickle Crow weakened 10 to 7.30 and Little Long Lac at 7.15 was off .15.

Pend Oreille was a strong spot in the base metals, rising to a new high at 3.35, up 20 cents for the day. Aldermac, Granada and Venday all did a little better. Eldorado was steady at 2.17.

FOUR PROJECTS TO BE APPROVED

Trip of Cordell Hull to Pan-American Conference Brings Results

Buenos Aires, Dec. 19 (AP)—The chief objectives of the 6,000-mile trip of Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, to South America were slated for realization today.

A plenary session of the inter-American peace conference was expected—among a score of other conventions and resolutions—to approve four projects which are drafted by the head of the United States delegation.

They were designed to insure the western world against conflict by bettering cultural and commercial relations among American nations and by establishing safeguards for neutrality in the event of war anywhere in the world.

Favourable action was taken for granted after the projects received unanimous committee endorsement. Beside the neutrality convention, they included resolutions proposing trade equality among American states and reduction of tariff barriers.

The neutrality resolution, revised after long and secret debate, does not go as far as the United States recommended in the original draft. Members of the delegation were quoted as pleased, however. They were said to believe approval by the 21 republics represented at the parley would enhance the principle of consultation and, in an emergency, would lead to common action in keeping the Americas out of other people's wars.

Sianfu Rebellion is Reported to be Spreading to Hill Country

CONFERENCE CALLED

Japanese Ambassador Says Japan is Greatly Concerned

Nanking, Dec. 21 (AP)—China called for swift military action today to rescue Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in the face of reports the Sianfu rebellion had spread to the mountainous Kansu province.

General Ho Ying-Chung, chairman of the Kansu provincial government, staged a sudden coup at the provincial capital, Lanchow, unconfirmed reports reaching Shanghai said, and declared in favor of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang.

Dr. T. V. Soong, brother-in-law of the generalissimo, returned to Nanking today and immediately began a conference of the Soong and Chiang families.

Dr. Soong was understood to have been at Sian-Fu, conferring informally with the rebellious marshal on terms to free Chiang.

Make Chang Sue Reason.

Nanking officialdom interpreted the development as a bid to make Marshal Chang was "ready to see reason."

Troops of General Yu, former henchman of the rebellious Marshal Chang, the latter's wife, Madame Chiang, Director of Public Safety, discussed police and ransacked the headquarters of the Provincial Pacification Commissioner.

Adding to the fears that Lanchow might be in rebellion was the fact no reports had been received from foreign missionaries there. Foreigners in the other western provinces, including Shensi seat of the uprisings, had reported their safety.

Japan Concerned.

Shigeru Kawagoe, the Japanese ambassador, arrived from Shanghai to be in touch to the crisis at government during the crisis.

The request he carried word from his government Japan was deeply concerned over any terms of settlement that might be reached and if they were detrimental to Japanese interests, Tokyo would be compelled to act.

Troops of the Nanking government pressed their attack on Sianfu to within 25 miles of Marshal Chang's headquarters, captured two mutinous battalions.

The military, convinced by Chiang's ignoring of the central government's ultimatum to free the generalissimo that it was time to "quit talking" and use force, were pushing the retreating rebels back on Sianfu.

Milk Prices Advance In Western Ontario

Toronto, Dec. 21 (CP) — Retail price of milk will advance one cent per quart in six western Ontario districts Tuesday, J. E. Hoock, chairman of the Ontario Milk Control Board, announced today. The increase is to be passed on to the consumer-producer, is the result of an agreement reached at a conference in London between producers and distributors and approved by the Board.

Under the agreement, farmers will be paid $1.82 per hundred for their product. Quart prices rise from 10 to 11 cents, while wholesale rates remain unchanged at six cents. The districts covered are London, Woodstock, St. Thomas, Sarnia, Stratford and Chatham.

Hope to Trace Burglar By Girl's Photograph

Detroit, Dec. 21 (CP)—Through a close store photograph of an attractive girl, found in the hand of a dead loot by a prowler after he had shot and seriously wounded an elderly Sunday night, police hope to trace the burglar.

Patrolman Richard L. McCarthy, 36, was shot four times when he cornered the prowler in a bedroom of a home.

After exchanging shots with McCarthy's partner, Patrolman John K. Smith, the burglar dived through a window, landed on a porch roof and dropped to the ground. He is believed to have been wounded.

A dark-blue felt hat was found in the bedroom. The picture in the husband, dead of a girl in her 20's.

MAY BE NEXT POPE

With His Holiness Pope Pius XI growing weaker speculation is rife in Vatican City as to who will succeed the Holy Father in the event of his early death. Eugenio, Cardinal Pacelli (above) Papal secretary of state, has taken over the executive duties usually transferred to the Pontiff. He is considered a possible successor.

FATHER AND SON MAULED BY DOGS

Sleigh Dogs Attack Child When He Falls Near Them

Cochrane, Ont., Dec. 21 (CP)—Lorne Daigle and a four-year-old son, Bobby were in the hospital today with wounds inflicted by four sleigh dogs at Island Falls, about 40 miles north of here, Saturday.

Both underwent operations yesterday, the father for injuries to his arms and legs, and the little boy for a mangled arm. Daigle's condition was more serious than his son's and a new operation may be necessary.

Daigle was bitten while trying to save the child who was attacked near his cabin at the Island Falls station, when he slipped and fell near the tethered dogs, owned by another resident of the little settlement.

He was attracted by the boy's cries and threw himself over him after futile efforts to pull the dogs away. Trainmen came to the rescue and rushed the wounded pair to hospital here by track motor car after administering first aid. There are no medical facilities at Island Falls.

CLAIM EMPLOYEES THREATENED

Waldsor, Ont., Dec. 21.—(CP)—Management of L.A. Young Industries of Canada, Limited, here, told police today of threats made their employees over the week-end. A squad of police was despatched to the plant but there was no sign of activity, workers operating the factory without being molested.

John D. Hayes Presents Gifts to 5 City Schools

Former Belleville Resident Gives Five Sets of Courses in Character-Building — Each Set Consists of 24 Lessons in Water Color

Through the generosity of John D. Hayes, 15 Hillmorne Rd., Toronto, five sets of valuable courses in character building, one set for St. Michael's Separate School and one for each of the four Public Schools. The sets for the Public Schools have been received by Inspector H. J. Clark for distribution.

Each set consists of 24 lessons in water colors with a complete outfit-time and a permanent container to preserve the pictures when not in use. The course is being widely used in the schools of Canada and is highly recommended by school teachers.

Mr. Hayes was for years a resident of Belleville, where he grew up. He is the son of the well-known citizen and friend of Belleville, Mr. Patrick Hayes, Catherine Street.

On the inside of each container is the inscription, "Character Building Course presented to ——— School by John D. Hayes," of Toronto, a native, and for many years a citizen of Belleville. For the welfare of the boys and girls, the future leaders of a finer and a nobler citizenship."

$20,000 is Paid To Arab Sultan Report States

London, Dec. 21 (CP-Havas)—The Manchester Guardian reported today Italy has obtained a concession at the Port of Assadi El Fayal in Hadramaut, Southern Arabia, and is under British protection.

The Guardian said a delegation from Italian Somaliland arrived recently in Hadramaut and was received by the Sultan of Shihr and Mukalla, Seyyid Saleh bin Ghalib Alkaf. Southern Arabia are all linked to Great Britain by treaties forbidding them to cede territories or foreign powers.

Hadramaut is a mountainous region extending along the Gulf of Aden and the Arabian Sea.

Austrian Flier Admits Dropping Flags on Duke

Enzsfeld, Austria, Dec. 21 (AP) Julius Arigi, Austrian Great War flier, confessed today it was he who piloted the plane which flew over the Duke of Windsor Friday and dropped flags all about the grounds of the castle of Baron Eugene De Rothschild.

"I dropped Austria, British and the Rothschild flags," he said in token of a soldier's affection for this sympathetic ruler," and the aviator added the police had persuaded him from his plan to drop a great wreath so that the Duke as possible.

The aviateh might hit the Duke, Arigi said the police pointed out.

800 PLANS HOLIDAY

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 21.—Barring a last minute reversal, a majority of Sault merchants have announced they will close Christmas Day, Boxing Day. Opinion at a meeting of merchants a month ago was unanimous in favor of remaining open.

Mrs. W. Simpson Not to Meet Duke of Windsor Till April

First Press Conference Since Arrival is Given

IN GRACIOUS MOOD

Cannes, France, Dec. 21 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson cleared away the mystery surrounding her immediate future today with a plain statement that she would not see the man who gave up the throne of an empire for her until her divorce is absolute.

The statement that Mrs. Simpson was remaining at her retreat in Cannes for "several months", and that "there is absolutely no possibility" she will see Edward of Windsor until spring, was made by Herman Rogers, her Riviera host, as Mrs. Simpson and the Duke of Windsor continued their first time in her life.

In the end it was decided to be more of a social reception than an interview. Audibly Mrs. Simpson discussed the beauty of the Riviera, the weather and the dangers of driving over mountain roads.

With a gracious, happy air she joined in the general conversation in the beautiful gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Rogers' Villa Lou Viei yesterday afternoon but she left it to her host and spokesman to answer the two questions all the world was asking:

Answers Both Questions.

When would she see the Duke of Windsor?

When would they be wed?

The answer to the first was not "for several months" and to the second silence.

Rogers declined to discuss any indications she would not see the man who gave up the throne of an empire for her until her divorce is absolute.

Under the brilliant Mediterranean sunshine the talk turned to Christmas and Christmas trees.

Cannes, Mrs. Simpson learned, has been assisting her hostess in preparing for the week-end festivities, pelting up wreaths of holly and mistletoe.

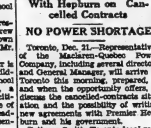
No tree was planned for the small party tonight at the Rogers, Mrs. Simpson and Mrs. D. R. Merryman, Baltimore hostess, will have a quiet family Christmas party.

Mrs. Simpson, composed and seemingly in excellent spirits, seemed amused at some of the reports of her coming and going and when the group broke up, teasingly announced:

"Perhaps you would be interested to know—that I shall go for a drive this afternoon."

BUCK IS BLINDED BY HUNTER'S GUN

X-Ray Taken And Veterinary Will Try to Lift Pressure



Seneca Falls, N.Y., Dec. 21 (AP)—A full grown blind buck deer monstrosity contentedly ate hay and apples tonight while doctors studied X-ray pictures that are to determine whether he is to live or die.

The deer, blinded by a hunter's bullet through the head, was captured by farmers last week near Locke. It had been wandering around aimlessly for nearly a month.

With a crowd of curious sightseers on the block, the deer was led through downtown streets today to the office of a dentist for X-ray examination.

Dr. William F. Clark, veterinarian, said he believed the bullet is pressing on an optic nerve. If the deer's sight can be restored, it will be freed when the wound heals.

POWER COMPANY DIRECTORS ARRIVE FOR CONFERENCE

Hope to Get Appointment With Hepburn on Cancelled Contracts

NO POWER SHORTAGE

Toronto, Dec. 21.—Representatives of the Aluminum-Canada Power Company, including several directors and General Manager, will arrive in Toronto this morning, prepared, if and when the opportunity offers, to discuss the cancelled contracts situation and the possibility of writing a new agreement with Premier Hepburn and his government.

Rethuns Smith, Toronto legal representative of the concern, will see Mr. Hepburn at noon and ascertain when he may, in any event, it is hardly likely that the company and the cabinet can get together until after Christmas.

We are not trying to embarrass the government in any way," declared Mr. Smith last night. "In coming to Toronto it is the intention of the Maclaren representatives to get down to work on the situation. They simply want to be closed-up hand to that they can handle things over with Mr. Hepburn if he wants to see them."

The Prime Minister had nothing to add, over the week-end, to his previous statements on the power issue, except that a brief denial of one rumor that the government had the cancelled contracts in mind to take over from Beauharnois and the Ottawa Valley Power Company.

"The government," he said, "has made no overtures to Beauharnois, and Beauharnois has made no overtures to pany. We've said we're open to discuss all things and that's how we have pointed out that we have no need for more power, and I don't think we'll need it until 1941 if we did purchase more. Further, we haven't enough power lines for transmitting the power from the Quebec province. To take it, more power would mean that we would have to build a second transmission line, which would cost the province $25,000,000."

$100,000 FIRE IN CHAPLEAU HOTEL

None Injured Although Narrow Escapes Numerous

Chapleau, Ont., Dec. 21 (CP)—George Buccilli and Son's hotel, retail store, apartments and beverages room were smouldering ruins today after fire swept the large building. The loss estimated at $100,000 was not covered by insurance.

None was injured although escapes were numerous as firemen and volunteers fought the fire throughout Sunday. Persons belonging to the furniture of the apartment occupants and guests at the hotel were destroyed, but most of the goods left intact was taken from the burning building.

It was the most spectacular fire seen in this northern district's community. Its origin is unknown, burning been burning some time before being discovered by Mr. Fraser, a hotel guest. A general alarm was given and all occupants of the building escaped.

Buccilelli, who had a large Christmas stock, came from Italy and started a grocery store here in a fair condition. The hotel was expanding until he attained the threestorey building swept by the fire two years ago, on New Year's Day, his branch grocery store was destroyed by fire.

O.C. of German Fleet Ordered Retired Jan. 1

The Admiral lowered his flag a few hours after the order became known. The retirement was decreed despite the fact Foerster is only 57, eight years short of the usual retirement age.

Rear Admiral Carls, who has been commanding German naval units in Spanish waters, succeeds Foerster. Carls, 54, declined immediate comment on reasons for the retirement of Foerster, who became Fleet Commander in 1933.

THREATENS IMPEACHMENT

Impeachment of President Miguel Bariano Gomez, president of Cuba, was threatened by parliamentary supporters of Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuban's "strongman" following the president's veto of Batista's controversial sugar tax bill after passage through the Cuban parliament. Batista has the army behind his fascistic rule.

ABSOLUTE QUIET ORDERED FOR POPE

Suffered a Fainting Spell While Lying in Bed Sunday

Vatican City, Dec. 21—(AP)—Pope Pius announced his intention to broadcast Christmas Eve his message to the world Thursday to "prove we are still alive."

The broadcast will be made at 1130 p.m. (6.30 a.m. EST) on a wave length of 19.84 meters through a microphone set up in the Pope's study adjoining his bedroom where he has been confined with chronic laryngitis and fever.

The Pontiff will be carried to his desk and placed in an armchair in front of the microphone.

He summoned Father Socorrel, director of the Vatican radio station, to discuss technical arrangements for the radio address.

The action is contrary to medical orders for absolute quiet after the Pontiff suffered a fainting spell as he lay in bed yesterday.

Yesterday he called Senator Nicola Pende, professor of medicine at the University of Rome and widely known European authority on endocrinology and constitutional diseases, to check the Pope's condition.

Pontiff of Changeless Faith Never Hesitates as Modern

Pope Pius' Reign Will Rank as One of Greatest in History

POPE AND COMMON MAN

Vatican City, Dec. 21 (AP)—In a changing world, Pope Pius XI, the Pontiff revered as a champion of faith, never has hesitated to be "modern."

During his comparatively long reign, reputed to rank as one of the most important in the church's history of nineteen centuries, innovation has followed innovation. He was the last of the "princess of the Vatican," for under his rule reconciliation was effected with the Italian government, an epochal event, but only one of many in his career.

And though he is "the Bishop of Rome and Vicar of Jesus Christ," "Primate of Italy" and "Patriarch of the West," Pius XI will be by the fateful on a special throne into the basilica of St. Peter's, he has remained in constant touch with the aspirations of common men.

His encyclicals have upheld the church's right to education of Catholic children after a series of attacks by totalitarian states; condemned co-education, reaffirmed the sanctity of marriage and the family, assured birth-control and sterilization, and championed labor unions. He has been actively interested in the cause of international peace.

The reconciliation he signed with the government of Italy and the condemnation of the Vatican may stand out as his most history-making achievements. His first blessing given after his election became, in 1922, was from the outside, by way of St. Peter's to the assembled multitude in the square. It was, as historic occasions became, the first Pope to give this blessing since 1870 when the Pontiffs became "prisoners of the Vatican."

Quebec Body Sticks With Union Officials

Montreal, Dec. 21.—(CP)—Interest centred divided Quebec Amateur Hockey Association—was sticking with the Union in its stand against the C.A.H.A.'s "four points" over the amateur-pro controversy. The annual Senior Hockey group, biggest league in the Q.A.H.A., was likely with the C.A.H.A.

Teams represented at yesterday's group meeting voted in unison to back the Q.A.H.A. when it moved out of the A.A.U. Jan. 15 in accordance with a notice it has given. McGill University did not vote.

How long Quebec's dor-side division might last was a question. The provincial association was to meet again tonight to give further thought to its stand. There was speculation as to whether a new vote might be prompted by the C.A.H.A.'s apparent power to keep hold of the Allan Cup.

In any event, the Senior group will not be represented at the meeting in Montreal Dec. 29 when the A.A.U. is inaugurated, such sole of piracy on the high seas."

At Moscow the official Tass (Soviet) News Agency at Geneva said Komsomol was set afire and sunk by Nationalist bombers after the fate of the crew unknown.

GENERAL STAFF AGAINST ACTION SAYS BRITISHER

Five Divisions of German Troops Would Mean 62,500 Men

GERMANY NOT READY

Soviet State Concerned Over Sinking of Russian Motor Ship

London, Dec. 21 (CP-Havas)—The diplomatic editor of the News-Chronicle said today Chancellor Hitler plans to send five divisions of German troops to Spain despite the opposition of the German general staff.

The army command is afraid such action might offend the western powers at a time when Germany is not yet ready for war," the writer said.

France Grows Unpopular.

"I understand that some three weeks ago the German diplomatic mission to the Spanish rebels unanimously reported to Berlin that France (General Francisco Franco, insurgent commander) was too unpopular in Spain to win the confidence of Spain's people and that reinforcements ," the diplomatic editor wrote.

He also pointed out that even in the event of victory these troops would have to remain in Spain since the France government would be unable to exist without them."

Mysterious Incident Hints.

The alleged sinking of the Soviet motorship Komsomol by an insurgent naval unit off the Spanish coast last Monday is one of the gravest international incidents yet to arise from the civil strife, especially since the ship was not bound for any Spanish port, its diplomatic editor of the Daily Herald wrote today.

The ship carried a cargo of machine guns and was headed for Belgium, it was claimed.

"It was suggested last night that the ship was carrying arms to the future may send warships into the Mediterranean to convoy merchant-men and that may call for a decision by the British and French governments to aid her in suppressing such sole of piracy on the high seas."

At Moscow the official Tass (Soviet) News Agency at Geneva said Komsomol was set afire and sunk by Nationalist bombers after the fate of the crew unknown.

LITTLE DAMAGE IN CHIMNEY FIRE

Fire originating in masonry chimney nearly spoiled the Christmas festivities at a house on Bleecker Avenue in Belleville late last night. The prompt arrival of the fire squad, following the alarm, prevented any damage being done, and all is well in the home once more.

MUCH-NEEDED WORK FOR UNEMPLOYED

The somewhat heavy snowfall of Saturday afternoon, which turned into a slight mess at the temperature rose, provided city unemployed with some much-needed work over the week-end. All-day Sunday, and far into the night, large gang of men labored shovelling the slushy snow into trucks. City snowplough likewise did its share, near the curbs forcing the snow into windrows, from where it was removed by the trucks. This morning another gang of men took to clearing up the last of the weatherman's week-end donation.

SCHOLARS WANT SNOW TO REMAIN

Wait Eagerly Closing of Schools For Christmas Holidays

"Gee, I hope this snow lasts until Wednesday," exclaimed a youngster on Saturday afternoon as he and a group of his schoolmates were out in the white flakes which fell on the city.

"Why Wednesday?" he was asked. "Gee, don't you know?" he said, "School closes on Tuesday and we get about two weeks' holidays."

He was right. On Tuesday afternoon the doors of the city schools will close for the Christmas holiday season, and the youth of the city and countryside will let loose from the restraint of authority for the glorious day ahead. Not only is the greatest of holidays but a week in front of them, but also two weeks of joyous freedom in the great outdoors with no thought of the morrow and the dreaded homework to worry them.

The week following Christmas will be all pondering over the greatest activity on the part of the youngsters, for the inevitable sleighing, skating and numerous other sports paraphernalia which fond parents, uncles and brothers have for Christmas will get their first opportunity.

Outlying hills of the city will resound to the joyous cries of Belleville's youthful citizenry, as they troop in droves to the Moira River, while the Victoria Park Memorial Cenotaph and Jacksons with numerous sleighters making merry with their toboggans and handsleds.

But on January 4th another story will be written, for then the city schools will again open. Bells will sound, and modern youth will adjust itself once more to the daily grind. In the meantime that date is far off which schedules the fun and play away, and right now school boys and girls are occupied only with the glorious days immediately ahead.

Obituary

THOMPSON P. ROBINSON

Thompson P. Robinson, late residence, 79 West Bridge Street, who died suddenly at Belleville on Sunday, Dec. 20th., was born at Plymouth, Ont., 63 years ago, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson. For some time he resided at Brighton, where he was associated with the Ontario Provincial Police of which organization he was a member for 15 years. Six months ago he was transferred to the Division Office of the force at Belleville. He was a competent officer and popular with his associates on the force and with many friends in this city and at Brockville. His sudden passing in middle life is received by all who knew him and sincere sympathy will be extended to the family in their bereavement.

The late Mr. Robinson was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and Sherwood Lodge No. 7 associated with the Masonic Order and the Independent Order of Oddfellows at Glasgow Falls, Ont.

During the Great War he enlisted with the 155th Battalion at Perth Bay, Ont., and served overseas.

Surviving him are his widow, whose maiden name was Miss Alice McIntosh; one son, Acie Robinson, at home; six brothers, Messrs. Joseph Robinson, Picton; William Robinson, Englehart, Ont.; Charles Robinson, Edmonton, Alberta; Samuel Robinson, Coe Hill, Ont.; Robert Robinson, Rossmore, Ont.; Philander Robinson, Picton, Ont.; three sisters, Mrs. William Hubbard, Lake esters Falls, Ont.; Mrs. W. Milne, Trenton, Ont.; and Mrs. H. Woods of Madoc, Ont.

LATE MRS. J. McPHERSON (Fresno, Alberta)

The funeral of the late Mrs. J. W. McPherson, of Fresno, Alberta, was held Wednesday, Dec. 9th. Service was conducted before noon in the United Church by Rev. Mr. Villars with a large gathering of mourners present, and Rev. Thos. Hart officiating. Immediately afterwards the remains of deceased were taken accompanied the remains to Metlakow, where another service was held and the body laid to rest. After which interment was made in the Metlakow cemetery.

The pall bearers were R. McKay, Jno. Bringhurst, Wm. Canning, R. A. Varty, Archie Thompson and A. Nelson.

Mrs. McPerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McKenna, was born at Belleville, Ont., April 20, 1893. She was married at Bedcroft to Mr. McPherson, and went west in 1910, to Willow Glen, where she was the eldest white woman to settle. During the homesteading period she taught school at Bloomington Valley, Bedcroft and later at Dolcy. The family moved to Metlakow in 1921, coming to Provost ten years later.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, one son Douglas, in Hadley, B.C., and two daughters, Joyce and Frances at home. Mrs. D. M. Farrell, Belleville, Ont., and Mrs. W. McEachern, Toronto, Ont.; Mrs. R. McCurdy, Cosmos, Ont.; Mrs. G. Price Mt. Albert, Ont., and Mrs. W. E. Clapp Syracuse, N.Y. are sisters; Wm. McKenna, St. Catharines, Ont.; John McKenna, Trenton, Ont.; Jas. McKenna, Syracuse, N.Y.; and Douglas McKenna, Vancouver are brothers.

BENJAMIN HERBERT MORTON

A lifelong resident of Moira, Hastings County, Benjamin Herbert Morton, died in the Belleville General Hospital at noon today after a short illness. He was born at Moira, 63 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Morton and has resided in that community all his life, where he was highly respected and well-known and his demise will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle of friends. The deceased was a progressive farmer and very prosperous in his community. He was at one time president of the Moira Cheese Company and always held a deep interest in the dairy industry. In politics he was a Conservative. The deceased was a member of Moira Church and leaves to mourn his loss a widow, two sons, Henry Morton, of Thomasburg, Cameron Morton at home, two daughters, Miss Lena Morton at home, Mrs. Alton Sine of Bridge Township and one sister, Mrs. W. H. Sayers of Tweed. The funeral will be held on Wednesday.

ROADS SLIPPERY IN THIS DISTRICT

Two Employees at Airport | Injured When Car is Ditched

Two members of the R.C.A.F. base at Trenton were injured and taken to the Belleville General Hospital last evening suffering from shock and bruises when their car skidded on roads in which they were riding skidded into the ditch at the eastern entrance to the town of Trenton, where it turned completely over, coming to rest on its top. The car was badly damaged, however.

Another minor accident, in which no person was injured happened late Saturday afternoon on Highway No. 14 one mile north of the city limits on the Foxboro Road. Motorcycle Constable Ray Perdue investigated and reported a car driven by Mrs. Lloyd Campbellford, was proceeding south, and while passing a parked automobile, was struck by another motor car, being driven northward by H. Coffey, Head. At the time of the accident, a blinding snow storm was in progress, causing poor visibility. No charges were laid. Damage to both automobiles and lights of Mr. Coffey's car were badly damaged, while the rear of Mr. Black's car was also damaged to some extent.

SPLENDID SUM FOR THE FUND

Concert in Capitol Theatre Much Appreciated by Audience

That the general public still has the interest of the people, who are their friends, at heart was borne out by the splendid audience present in the Capitol theatre, Saturday night, when a crowded house greeted the concert given by Lieut. Fred Jobson and the members of the Belleville Municipal Band, individual artists also being given and recruited from the public schools of the city.

Whole-hearted applause greeted the efforts of the various entertainers, while the choir under the direction of Lieut. Jobson gave a performance which left nothing more to be desired. The band quickly itself in the appreciation of the musical characteristic of the collective and individual ability of this aggregation of fine musicians.

Not only did the large audience show its appreciation of the splendid program through the medium of applause, but also by contributing liberally in a tangible way, when it placed the grand sum of $100 in the collection plate. The money will be used for the purchase of toys and groceries for the many privileged children and needy families by the Belleville Social Service Welfare Department.

It was a splendid response" Fire Chief William Lynch, of the department said this morning, "and it was just what was needed. In our present financial condition we shall be able to look after over one hundred families with baskets of groceries, and six hundred children will get filled stockings through the generosity of the public. Please let the public know that we greatly appreciate the assistance given us in this fine work."

ANNUAL WHITE GIFT SERVICE

Impressive Symbolic Service of Worship at Tabernacle Church

Tabernacle United Church held its annual "White-Gifts-for-the-King" service on Sunday morning, with the Sunday School joining the congregation in this symbolic service of worship. All of the classes came forward and presented their gifts to the Altar, and these were received by the appointed Elders.

Rev. I. B. Naylor, in a short address, spoke on "The Spirit of Christmas". "The great trouble," he said, "with most of us is that we have always regarded Christmas as a day rather than as a spirit. We grasp the visible fact and miss the spiritual truth. Christmas comes whenever the spirit of Christmas is born in a frost-bitten heart; where charity displaces intolerance; wherever Wise Men and sheep-herders bow down to worship at the same shrine; wherever old enemies forgive one another; wherever kindliness takes the place of ill-will. Christmas is not a date on the calendar—it is a spirit."

The choir, under the direction of Mrs. J. F. Bradley, with Mrs. M. F. Duff at the organ, rendered the following Christmas music:

Morning: Anthem, "God From on High Hath Heard," Turner. Address: "And the Glory," Handel. Carol: "Good King Wenceslas".

Evening: Anthem: "Behold I Bring You Good Tidings," Church. Solo: Anthem: "For Unto Us A Child is Born," Handel. Carol: "The First Nowell."

Said Benedict: "Just because I've never seen Santa Claus is no reason I should up and declare he's a fake. I never saw Abe Lincoln either but I voted for him."

And he really wants in that stocking, said the aged man, is "about a ton of pipe tobacco."

CANDLES BURN AT IMPRESSIVE CAROL SERVICE

Large Congregation Hears Christmas Music Sung at Bridge St. Church

Light being a symbol of Christ as the Light of the World and candles for many ages the only means of light before the era of invention, Christmastide is a season when candles play a great part in the observance. On Sunday evening at Bridge street United Church the first candle-light carol service in its history was held with a congregation of about two hundred persons attending.

Into the dim church the worshippers were ushered, only red and white candles and trimmed electric lights shedding light and casting shadows on the congregation gathering for service. At the windows burned candles according to ancient custom, and other counties while in the choir loft there were hung festoons of colored bulbs and a dozen or more tall candles rested back of the organ console.

While the congregation was assembling, Mr. Vincent P. Hunt, organist and choir leader, who had charge of the music, played organ selections, including the music for the occasion, played "The Adeste Fidelis" of the French composer Masseret.

Then was heard the hymn "Silent Night! Holy Night!" sung by the choirs as from afar, a fitting prelude to the carol service. In the gallery Mr. James D. Bankier, tenor soloist of the church, sang the recitative "Comfort Ye" from Handel's "The Messiah".

Choirs Carry Candles

The side doors of the church flung wide, the choirs filed marched into the aisles leading to the choir loft, the two choirs, junior and senior of the church organizations. The sight was most impressive as the white robed children filed in, the adult choir gowned in black, at once caught up the lead and sang "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing", the congregation joining. Each of the choristers carried a lighted white candle for the processional, and as the choirs filed left the candles still lighted, were carried in their hands by members throughout service until they were taken up again by the choristers as they filed out. Another favorite was "O Come All Ye Faithful". During the service, Mrs. Gordon Bell, Mrs. James Semple, Th.D., offered the prayer, and Rev. Hart the Gospel story of the birth of Jesus. After prayer the congregation led by the choirs sang "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night".

Carols Sung

The choirs' carol service began at this point. "Let All Men Sing God's Praises", an old Welsh air with words written by the church choir. The junior choir sang "Whence, O Ancient Cradle Land", the old French Canadian carol sung in the Canadian West. The senior choir then gave an old English setting of the carol "Shepherds Shake Off Your Drowsy Sleep" with the carden of another Bohemian carol, "The Angels and the Shepherds". The junior choir joined to sing "Good Christian Men, Rejoice", an old German song. The congregation joined in "First Noel".

Master Douglas Browning sang with sweetness and fine sense of the Spirit of "O Holy Night" by request with the choir as chorus. An old French piece of Christmas music was then sung by the choir, "Sailing Home, Make Haste Isabella". The carol "I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In" an old English carol, with descant, closed the service.

The singing was of a high choir standard, the rendering of the appealing music being marked with a thoughtfulness and devotion, fine and careful study and instruction. Mr. Hunt has developed his choirs till he can achieve the desired result and these the combined choirs certainly did in their rendering. There is a sense of freedom, an abandon, a feeling that something is being done in achieving which the voices of boys and girls, men and women, receive the greatest credit for undertaking and carrying to success.

of long ago when the long-since-dead ancestors of those who were shipped together last night celebrated Christmas in the ancient way.

Rev. Dr. Semple spoke on the subject "Roses Will Bloom Again", and told an imaginary story of an approaching Christmas season with the fall of sickness which fell from a strong son of nature. His doctor after long trial was able to tell the man "Sig Bill" as he was called that he must cheer up as roses will bloom again. This thought cheered the patient, it inspired his nurse, it touched the minister, who then called on the senator, who was so touched as by a live wire as he said "when he heard the words 'Roses Will Blooch Again', I had forgotten that; yet it is the first principle in successful politics". There was a strike, and the manufacturer, who was disappointed, was touched by the doctor's words delivered by the minister to the business man. The James Semple, Th.D., offered the prayer, and Rev. Hart the Gospel story of the birth of Jesus. After prayer the congregation led by the choirs sang "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night".

FOG BRINGS ON MASS FAINTING

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — One of the most amazing examples of mass suggestion occurred in this city. Fourteen girls at a biscuit factory collapsed, one after another in a swoon, while men laborers continuous fog.

More than 100 women and girls work in the workroom when one complained of feeling ill. Another girl showed a tendency to faint and in a short time a dozen girls became hysterical. One by one they were carried and were taken to hospital.

Medical men believed the vitality of the girls was lowered by a long period of fog (300 hours), making them easy victims for hysterics. They probably thought they was a leakage of gas and that the fumes of two failed the others were affected by the power of suggestion. So far no other illness could be detected.

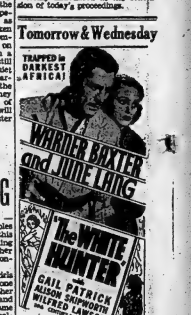
POLICE COURT

A true exemplification of the Christmas spirit was shown in today's local police court, when reformed Jones was given a chance by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in order, that Jones might spend Christmas at their respective homes.

Mrs. Jones, who gave his home address as Trenton, appeared charged with intoxication, to which she pleaded guilty. To have been in jail since Friday and if you could give me a chance, your honor," instead of the customary fine and date that from the time of my arrest, I would get out on Thursday and then could be home for Christmas," pleaded Jones.

After considering the matter His Worship granted the request and sentenced the accused to seven days, dating from the time of his arrest.

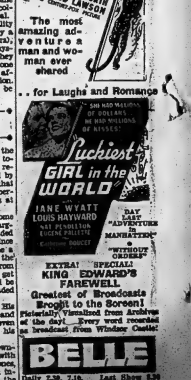
Everett Jones, Wollaston Township farmer, appeared charged with taking a child, Barbara June Jones, under the age of 14 years, with intent to deprive the mother of the possession of the said child. Jones was asked to plead, his case being adjourned for one week. Jones, the father of the child in question, took the girl from the home of the mother, with whom he did not reside as the husband of the house, Provincial Constable Wm. H. McBride said today.



Charged with theft George Stapley, of this city, asked to be permitted his liberty on his own bail. After his case had been enlarged for a week for this young man a fe home, he'll come back I believe," added Chief Sidd.

A matter involving the alleged non-payment of wages by an unlicensed barber, Mr. A. R. Cameron, local barrister, appeared for the defendent and through whom the matter was finally settled.

Inspector T. D. Ruston tendered papers before the court to have a coon-song boy made a ward of the Children's Aid Society.



Friday next being Christmas Day the semi-weekly police court will be held on Thursday this week, His Worship announced at the conclusion of today's proceedings.

Geo. Ketcheson Chairman

After business was completed, Mr. Geo. Ketcheson, Past President, most ably acted as chairman for the evening and called the gathering to order by asking the Front Row boys for a musical selection and were encored. The secretary of each association was asked to read the business of the evening. Mrs. Endean, Mr. J. Reynolds and Mrs. F. Mitchell were asked to take seats on the platform and were heartily applauded.

Mrs. (Dr.) Welsh, Mrs. Welsh, Sr., Mrs. R. Turnson and Mrs. H. Rollins were asked to stand and were heartily welcomed. All made suitable replies. Miss Marjorie Ball gave a reading. Messrs. Gray, Mitchell, Rollins, Reid and Turnson gave short addresses.

Mr. Harry Carter and son tendered several musical selections and were heartily encored.

Musical Program

Dr. Welsh gave an interesting address in which he thanked everyone who in any way helped him in the recent campaign. Mrs. R. Harrison was asked to speak and gave a very humorous reading entitled "Mom and Shoes" which caused much laughter. Mr. J. Reynolds, new president, spoke briefly. Mrs. Fred Mitchell as the new president was asked to read an address to Mrs. (Dr.) Welsh and little Marion Chambers presented Mrs. Welsh with a beautiful bouquet of roses to which Mrs. Welsh made a suitable reply. Mr. Carter and son, and the Front Road boys gave several selections which were enjoyed while the ladies were serving lunch. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

FARM HAS CREDIT FOR YULE SPIRIT

Agriculture Has Much to do With Christmas, Department Says

OTTAWA (CP)—From the beginning the connection between Christmas and agriculture has been definite and intimate, the Department of Agriculture says and goes on to suggest the 1936 celebration of the day should see a revival of the ancient feast "Christmas Eve in the Farm; the Farm and Food."

"The word farm means food and was so known in the days when all the tenant was required to provide the landlord with food by way of rent," the department's authority relates. "Today this definition has been considerably extended in that the farm still provides us with food, and without food, without the feeding of the multitude, it is not given to human beings to be able to properly express that spirit of universal Kindness and peace and good will evoked by the teachings of the Christ at the celebration of the festival of Christmas."

It was to shepherds watching their flocks by night that the words "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy" were addressed. In a lowly stable attached to a "khan-khan" Jesus Christ was born, and on the back of the humble farm animals, the ass, He was taken to Egypt in safety a few days later.

It is pointed out it was mainly from the agricultural population Christianity drew its early adherents and many years later it was over the farms and orchards in the vicinity of Rome that they scoured the country in search of holy branches to decorate churches and dwellings.

WORK FOR WOMEN IS BIG PROBLEM

Member of Employment Commission Tells Some Factors of Task.

WINNIPEG (CP)—One of the five women members of the Women's Advisory Committee to the National Employment Commission, Mrs. W. J. Lindal in an interview told of what she saw and heard while away on "her job." "We realized the enormity of the problem that confronted us," she said.

"Every region had its story to tell involved in the conditions governing the employment of women were such questions as trade, employment of men, availability of adequate training for potential work, and guidance in pointing the way to young people eager to train themselves for the thing they were best fitted." Since it would be foolhardy to advise without first being informed themselves, the women of the new committee returned to their study more and more keen.

Domestic employment, one of Mrs. Lindal's special interests—she is one of the women back of Winnipeg's School for Household Assistants — was found a vital question in Eastern Canada. "In Montreal alone were 879 vacancies for household workers with only 80 qualified persons," she consulted a little notebook.

In Montreal the same situation existed. She advised making domestic work as much like other work as training household workers to regard their job as a profession.

TREND IS HIGHER IN MEAT EXPORTS

Canada's Cattle And Bacon Outgo to Britain And U. S. Increases

OTTAWA (C.P.)—A sharp upward trend in the year's totals of exports of cattle and bacon to both the United Kingdom and the United States—with a phenomenal rise in cattle exports to the United States is indicated in a preliminary summary issued by the marketing service of the Department of Agriculture.

Under the tariff reductions provided for in the reciprocal trade agreement with the United States which came into effect the first of this year, Canada shipped 178,-923 cattle (or 95,995 calves) in the first ten months. At the present rate of export, these totals will be increased to another 8,000 head each by December 31.

That compares with the total of 102,000 cattle and 20,000 calves exported to the United States in 1935 when the drought boosted American prices so high that Canadian shippers were able to hurdle the then still-high tariff barrier. Before that, the average ranged from 5,-000 to 10,000 head a year.

The sudden shift to the American market in 1935 let beef exports to Britain drop to less than 7,000 although there had been a steady increase from 1922 to a high of 54,000 in 1934. This year exports to Britain have swung up again, despite a simultaneous increase to the United States and in the first ten months 33,714 were shipped to Britain. Shipments will continue nominal to the year end, it is expected.

Bacon exports to Britain are expected to reach a total of around to 9,000,000 in ten months of 1936 from 125,000,000 pounds for the year. The total for ten months was 121,461,00 This is part of a sharp continue increase since 1932, when the tot was 30,893,000, then rising to 71 534,000 in 1933, to 119,709,000 in 19 and 124,327,000 for 1935.

United States bacon imports fro Canada for ten months in 1936 we 1,750,000, compared to 317,700 in t same part of 1935. Shipments pork to the United States increas from 3,564,200 in ten months of 19

ONTARIO TRAFFIC NEARLY TIED-UP

Wet, Wintry Weather Over Province But Accidents Few

(By The Canadian Press)

Streets made glassy by ice and roads piled high with snow combined today to slow Ontario traffic to a snail's pace following a week-end of wet, wintry weather. Prospects for a "white Christmas" brightened.

Only one fatal accident occurred but minor mishaps were frequent. Mrs. Hibbert Spencer was killed at Windsor Saturday night when the car she was driving skidded on an pavement and struck a hydro pole.

In Western Ontario, where Saturday's heavy wet snow was followed by rain at night and lower temperatures Sunday, accidents were numerous. Rarely, in most cases were bumped fenders and, in a few, injuries that required only a little medical treatment.

Northern Ontario reported heavy snows but in Central and Eastern Ontario cities streets and walks were slushy all day Sunday.

There was a sharp contrast between depths of snow at North Bay and Sudbury. North Bay reported a foot-deep blanket following the season's worst storm. At Sudbury there was only a half-inch of snow.

Across Southern Ontario the snowfall varied from five to eight inches.

Unemployed in many communities welcomed the storm, too. They were earning Christmas money today by clearing snow from streets and sidewalks.

HEAVY PURCHASING

Christmas trading which reached a high point on Saturday despite the snowfall, which made shopping by buyers difficult, is just what was expected this year because of the improved condition of business. These last few days before Christmas with two market days thrown in to help business will, it is anticipated, continue the steady flow of purchasing which has been so marked.

Query in shops and stores Saturday night indicated that this improvement was generally extended over all forms of business, as would prove beyond peradventure of a doubt that Christmas trading this year is of the kind to restore confidence in business.

Merchants who go to much trouble many months ahead to make Christmas season pleasant for buyers are finding that for the homes in the district at Christmastide which the owners would desire for much of the enjoyment of the season comes through gifts and in the offering these shopkeepers serve the public faithfully. Never have Belleville stores looked more attractive nor have they ever handled larger and better lines than they do today at prices which suit the pocketbook.

The optimistic view which the dealers have held for the business of the closing month of the year has been fully justified.

This indicates increasing health in economic conditions, and is the herald of still better times to come.

THE OTHER

This is the season when a wave of interest in others is manifested. Churches and social organizations find this the busiest time of their year with the social problem. The unfortunate cannot let these institutions rest at ease while they realise that some human beings are not having something of that cheering influence which means so much at this season. A Christmas in an un-remembered family must be the depth of pain. While there are extremes of giving at this season, it is better so, as long as everyone gets something which shows that in his fellow man and woman he has a brother and a sister who remembers. Through a spirit of self-abnegation some persons succeed fairly well in covering difficulties and putting on a very brave face indeed. Fortunately societies are able to learn the plight of many and are able to do a little to bring cheer into the home where otherwise it might not be, not through any fault of their own, but through circumstance.

The young today are getting a training in thinking of others. The many activities that they will go through the church channels to the needy not only in the church but wherever they are to be found in the community. Such training is an interest to their children and leave abiding impressions on the young minds which will perhaps lead them when they are adult to do what they can to remove as far as is humanly possible the causes of social conditions which hamper the free spirit and possibilities of man.

Church and various organizations are always in touch with the situation but of course through individuals. These individuals and other individuals also take endless pains to find out the "neediest cases", as for example in the home where there is sickness, or lack of work, in the home where the inmate needs guidance, the home in which the child has just lost his best pal, his father or his mother, or his sister or brother, the home where there are those who seem to draw trouble upon themselves with misadventures or accidents or so on. The human picture is endless, its canvas as wide and long as a great share of the human race. Every city, every town has its cases. These fortunately some one knows and the burden of these someone is trying to lighten.

The impelling force which came from the First Christmas in faraway Palestine is the impelling force which is making hands and minds busy these last days in countless cities and towns and in the vast countryside.

SNOW CLEARANCE

Removal of the snow from the business section street and ploughing out of many other streets after the heavy snow was a thoughtful act on the part of the public works department, the traffic would have been greatly hampered and anger of accidents increased many times, because of the freezing which followed the snowfall and melting of snow.

While every possible regard is paid to Sunday, such public service as was performed yesterday was a necessity, like the work of the private citizen in clearing his own walk for the benefit of the pedestrians.

A stalk is a boy's refuge where
His footsteps turn when anything goes wrong.
A twisted ego can be mended there,
A broken toy or hearts that have no song.
And always when the one-time little boy
Seeks solace from a cancled hunt or pain,
Or wants to revel in some secret joy,
He hurries to his old retreat again.

When Joseph sought a shelter for his own
Beneath a stable's roof, perhaps he knew
Sometimes I think he surely must have known
A part of all it means to me and you.
We feel a kinship with the new-born King
Through having known and loved each common thing.

CITY MANAGER PLAN FINDS FAVOR

That the city manager plan is equally well adapted for the small city of ten thousand and the metropolis, is claimed by Richard S. Child of New York, chairman of the Council of the National Municipal League in commenting on the verdict of American cities which have recently voted to try the council-manager type of government. Mr. Childs approves the adoption of the city manager plan by New York City.

"Washington Courthouse, Ohio," he said, "is a small community of about 8,500 population. In Clifton, New Jersey, where the city manager plan was adopted last fall, the population is approximately 15,000. Schenectady, N.Y., which is to have a city manager beginning with next year has a population of 95,000, and Toledo, Ohio, is a city of 290,000.

"All of these places expect the manager plan to work successfully and experience gives them a right to expect it. From the time this plan was first tried—more than twenty years ago—it has been utilized in cities with wide differences in size. About one in five cities having between 10,000 and 50,000 population have city manager plans, about one in four in cities in the 50,000-100,000 class, and one in five in cities over 100,000. That is, the same proportion of large cities are finding the plan useful as small cities.

"There are council-manager cities in 36 states. In some states only cities of a certain size are permitted to adopt the plan under the State Home Rule Act. In some, a separate charter must be obtained from the Legislature. Of all cities, having over 25,000 population that can adopt the plan, one in three has done so. Michigan, Texas, Florida, California and Virginia are now leading in the number of cities that have adopted the city manager plan. A petition signed by 60 per cent of the qualified electors of Belleville, has been filed, requiring adoption of the manager plan in line with 429 United States municipalities. Also there are 13 cities in Canada, three in Ireland and one in Puerto Rico with managers.

"Government is one of the largest business in the United States, measured by the number of employees hired and money handled, and having observed the success with which managership functions in other large scale enterprises, a group of practical minded individuals determined to try it out in local government," said Mr. Childs. The idea of having a small group of elected representatives on a policy-determining council appoint a manager who alone bears the responsibility for administration of city affairs is the key to making government both responsible to the will of the people and efficient."

ABSENT-MINDED PEOPLE CAUSE CONSIDERABLE TROUBLE IN BIG CITIES and are often more or less of a trial in smaller centres also. Six thousand umbrellas were left behind in the New York subway in a single year, showing that the absent-minded beggar is abroad and in motion. Forty pair of false teeth were also found in the subway, coughed up or laid aside to rest till called for, and forgotten. A set price of four dollars per set is obtained for stray false teeth. Another curious article to find its way to the Lost and Found department of the New York subway was a goat. Who the heck took a goat on the subway and then, apparently, forgot him. Other odd articles found included three big bass drums, one skeleton.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS

Little Betty was going to have a party in honor of her sixth birthday.

"Now, Betty dear," said her mother, "I want you to ask anyone you like."

Betty looked thoughtful. "Then I'll ask Uncle Dick, Uncle Fred, Grandpa, Auntie Freda, and—"

"Wait a minute Betty," she said. "They are all elderly people."

"I know," said the child, "but they have the most money."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 31st, 1914

Capt. G. H. Hudson, M.D., and his wife are here to spend Christmas with his mother, Mrs. Hudson, William Street. Capt. Hudson is home from England on furlough.

Mr. Robt. Empson made a large shipment of hogs from here to Montreal today. The price paid was $13 per hundred weight.

There were a few sailors at the market this morning offering dressed poultry for sale. Prevailing prices for turkeys were 23 cents and 25 cents per pound, geese sold at 20 cents per pound and chickens at about 20 cents per pound.

Although December 22nd, will be nomination day for aldermen, aldermen and school trustees, there appears to be very little interest being taken in the matter.

Letters to the Editor

VOTING ON BY-LAWS

To The Editor Ontario Intelligencer

Sir,—I notice in an advertisement in the newspaper a number of questions to be submitted to the electors on at the coming Municipal election on the 4th of January next.

It is stated that only electors qualified to vote on money by-laws are to vote on the question for the grant to the band, but the question as to the City Manager is to be voted on by all electors. Why this difference? Next year, council will have to pay the city manager's salary as well as the band grant, and will also have to pay the salary of the City Manager each year unless he works for nothing. This is just as much a money by-law as the band grant, to be paid in future years. Why shouldn't this by-law also require to be voted on by electors who vote on money by-laws?

Give the tax payer a break.

Andrew M. Kennedy,
332 Charles St.,
Belleville.

WHO MAY VOTE?

To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—

As there appears to be considerable confusion amongst property owners as to what classification have the right to vote upon the several by-laws submitted at the next municipal civic municipal election, would you be kind enough to answer the following questions. What bylaws can property owners who are required to vote on the bylaws on which the electors generally can exercise their franchise? An answer will relieve the minds of many of your readers.

AN ELECTOR.

Editor's Note—In response to the above and to a number of inquiries which have reached The Ontario Intelligencer office regarding the voting powers of tax payers and ratepayers in the forthcoming elections, an inquiry at the office of the City Clerk this morning elicited the following information:

Ratepayers and electors alike will vote on all bylaws as usual with the exception of the bylaw authorizing the grant given the Belleville Municipal Band. This will be voted upon only by the property owners of the city, a special voters' list of which has been compiled.

Regarding the Band grant by-law, property owners of the city are entitled to one vote in every ward in which they own property. In other words if a ratepayer owns property in three different wards he will be eligible to cast three votes, one in each of these wards, but if he owns three pieces of property in one ward he will be able to cast one vote only.

The privilege of voting in this manner applies only to the Band by-law, and not to any of the remaining ones.

WHITE GIFTS ARE PRESENTED

Impressive Service is Held on Sunday Morning at Bridge Street

Members of the Sunday School and of the congregation brought white gifts to the altar of Bridge Street United Church. Adults left their gifts at the chancel rail of the church, the members of the Sunday School entered the church bearing their gifts to the front of the church singing "As With Gladness."

The service was impressive; the music was of Christmastide, the junior choir, under the leadership of Mrs. James Semple, minister, spoke on "The House of the World", which was filled with Christmas spirit, so that the walls have to be broken through to let in the light, the walls being those of selfishness, of greed, of poverty and of discontent.

The decorations and other Christmas decorations helped to create the impressive atmosphere of the service.

Superintendent Joseph Sherit of the Sunday School related the story of the White Gifts.

The "White Gifts" will be distributed to the needy cases in the city.

Pageant in Afternoon

The beautiful pageant "The Glory of the Star" was presented by scholars of the Bridge Street Sunday School to an audience of members and friends which filled the S. S. room. The presentation of the story introduced many of the Christmas Carols and hymns. The chief characters were:

Teacher—Miss Helen Bilsson.
Story—Miss Jean Dickens.
Joseph—J. E. Shortt.
Wise Men—Elmer Dixon; Noon Sandwich, Bobby Dickens.
Shepherds—Merle Mawer; Wesley Semple; Allen Dickens; Glen Clare.

Class, a group of primary children.

Mr. C. W. Burr, chairman of the committee supervised the play.

The meaning was given with the grouping of shepherds, wise men and Herald Angels was very effective.

T. P. ROBINSON IS FOUND DEAD

Member of O.P.P. Force And Resident in Belleville For Year

Provincial Constable Thomas P. Robinson, 45, of the Belleville headquarters in District No. 8 O.P.P., was found dead in his room at the Hotel Quinte early Sunday morning by William Mawer, caretaker of the building in which the Provincial Police officers are located. A 32 calibre service revolver was found lying nearby with one shell empty. Provincial Police authorities stated.

The officer was seen on the streets of Belleville by a city police officer shortly before 1.00 a.m. Sunday morning and was in apparent good health. The deceased is survived by his widow and one son.

An inquest was opened on Sunday before Chief Coroner Dr. J. G. Wallbridge, preliminary evidence and identification being taken before B. C. Donnan K.C., County Crown Attorney requested an adjournment. The inquest will continue on Tuesday night. Following the preliminary investigation, the body was given into the custody of R. S. McKenzie, undertaker, who had charge of all other officers.

Inspector Frank Gardner said today that death was an excellent official.

The coroner's jury empanelled by Sergeant Booth consisted of the following: Foreman, Harold Bateman, M. W. Barlow, Fred Marshall, N. Wilbur, J. W. Barlow, H. Hitchcroft, and Mr. Fairgrar, Inspector Gardner of the O.P.P. identified the deceased.

HOLIDAY BUYING SHOWS INCREASE

Merchants of City Generally Report Business in Healthy State

Whether it was the sudden appearance of the sunshine after the storm gave the city a Christmas appearance, or the sudden realization, that the holiday was only a few days away, Mr. and Mrs. John Public burst forth from their homes in a buying reticence, which has marked Christmas shopping in the past few weeks and indulged in an orgy of holiday buying, which according to many of the prominent merchants of the city equalled, and in some instances, exceeded the rush of the end of a year ago.

Front street was jammed with a laughing jostling crowd of holiday shoppers at an early hour in the afternoon. Many, which had heavily cloaked the city in a blanket of white and added to the Christmas touch. Stores were filled to capacity with city and rural shoppers. Parking spaces were at a premium.

Departmental shops grocery stores, tobacco stores and other places of business rang with the tramp of the store covered feet.

"We did a fine business in the afternoon", stated one department store manager, "and if the weather had been a little easier on us, the business at night would have put our sales higher than we have had them at this time of the year for many a season."

People Buying More

"People are buying more this year", said the proprietor of a grocery and meat store. "We sold a lot of poultry on Saturday and had the snow not come we would have sold more. Our grocery sales were much higher than that of the corresponding week of a year ago, and as we have what you might call another week end, next Wednesday and Thursday, our sales will in all probability exceed those of a year ago."

A prominent gentlemen's furnishing store proprietor stated that the public while buying more than usual is also showing a marked tendency to the better class of merchandise. "People are buying more dollar ties", he said, "than ever before. They are not looking at the cheaper grades of merchandise, but are going for quality rather than the price tags".

Tobacco stocks will curl around the family hearths in an increasing volume and added to the Christmas cheer by the tobacco stores on Saturday is any criterion. Christmas packages of fine cigars, cigarettes and tobacco found ready favor in the eyes of the shoppers, while accessories also found a ready market.

The general consensus of opinion of the merchants in Belleville is showing a marked increase and that the general public is once more beginning to find the old-fashioned Christmas buying ideas, which characterized it before the days of the depression.

100 Rondeau Park Deer to be Killed

Chatham, Dec. 31.—People who like venison don't have to go north to get it. Supplies can be had from R. J. McLaren, Superintendent of Rondeau Provincial Park, who, with members of his staff, are killing off a number of deer in the Government preserve.

To date 35 deer have been shot, and if the demand for venison is as great as last year it is expected that 100 altogether will be killed. The deer are not being killed merely to supply venison, but because they are getting too numerous in the park.

"I estimate there are about 400 deer in the park, which is really too many for the natural feed available," said Mr. McLaren. "Last year we sold 96 deer carcasses, and even after depleting the deer population by that number the feed was sufficient. It required about eight tons of feed to supplement the natural

SAN VICENTE IN SAN SALVADOR IS RAZED BY QUAKE

At Least 200 Killed And Injured Mount to Thousands

REFUGEES FLEE CITY

Reports State Volcano of Santa Rita Erupting

San Salvador, Salvador, Dec. 21 (AP)—Officials watched a mounting death toll today in the earthquake which razed almost all San Vicente and killed at least 200 persons over the week-end.

Persons arriving in San Salvador from the stricken provincial capital told stories of wholesale ruin, of shattered buildings and homes and of rescuers digging out some 200 bodies in the first few hours after the quake.

How high the death figure would rise no one could estimate but government officials dispatched all relief available to the area.

Accurate reports were increasingly difficult to obtain because of the disrupted communications between the quake area and the capital today. Telephone and telegraph lines were ripped down by the quakes and information could be had only from those, who fled inland.

The quake, which first struck the sleeping city of San Vicente Saturday night, crushed the buildings and shook the earth in villages nearby, eyewitnesses said.

Refugees Flee City

Refugees with their families and household belongings fled along rural roads trying to reach safety from the ever-threatening volcano Santa Rita, southeast of San Vicente, which some reports said was erupting.

Adding to the fears of molten lava pouring from the volcano over the wrecked city was the spectre of epidemics. Much of San Vicente's supply of drinking water was poisoned by sulphur apparently resulting from the smoking volcano after the quake.

Government officials returning last night from the scene of the disaster said the widespread wreckage was impeding rescue work and making virtually impossible any accurate estimate of the loss of life and property.

Among the neighboring villages damaged, according to radio reports last night, were Vera Paz, Guadalupe, Apastepeque, Feltan, San Sebastian, San Lorenzo and Tecoluca.

A special Red Cross train, with rescuers and medical equipment, was sent from San Salvador to San Vicente. Those returning from the scene said the quake leveled about one of the city's main buildings.

Left Fatal Saturday

Left standing, they said, was the tower in Central Park with the hands of its clock stopped at 10 minutes to 10.

The President of Salvador, Geo Maximiliano Hernandez Martinez, entrained for the scene to supervise personal direction of the rescue work. Accompanying him was Minister of the Interior Calderon. Army and navy physicians and nurses also were aboard into the devastated area.

The first shocks of the earthquake were felt at about 10 p.m. Saturday; they diminished, resurged said, but began again Sunday afternoon. Residents who fled San Vicente said the Volcano had been active of late and tremors had increased among the inhabitants of the city last it erupt.

The casualties were feared to be numerous because of the construction of the city's dwellings, some of which, however, had been built to be "earthquake proof."

Most of the houses are one or two stories and built with thick walls which, when crushed inward by the quake, would have buried occupants under their debris.

The town, founded three centuries ago, is about 10 miles from the Pacific Ocean and about 40 miles from San Salvador.

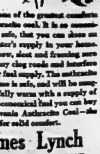
Obituary

JAMES ALBERT CLAPPER

After being in failing health for some time James Albert Clapper, 21 Church Street, Belleville, died at the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday, December 20th. He was born at Bellecroft and had reached an advanced age. The parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. George Clapper. All his life was passed in Belleville.

Surviving him are three sisters, Mrs. Frank Wilson, Mrs. R. A. Sanford and Mrs. R. Hinds, all of Belleville; one brother Fred Clapper, of Belleville.

The funeral will take place Tuesday morning, December 22nd, at 10.30 o'clock from the residence of his sister, Mrs. R. Hinds, 31 Station Street, Belleville.



FRANCIS GRAHAM (Big Island)

On Saturday, December 19th, Francis Graham passed away at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Norman Mills, at Big Island, Prince Edward County. He had been in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Graham had reached an advanced age, being in his 94th year. He was born at Thomasburg, Ontario, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Graham. For many years he was engaged in farming and he was very successful in that vocation. He was well-known and most highly esteemed by many residents of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties. For ten years he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Nelson Schryver, Alexander St., Belleville, and of late years he had resided with his daughter, Mrs. Sherman Mills, at Big Island. In religion he was a member of the United Church and was a man of fine character.

Surviving him are four daughters, Mrs. Nelson Schryver, Belleville; Mrs. Levi Graham, Belleville; Mrs. Sherman Mills, Big Island, Prince Edward County, and Mrs. Stuart Ferguson, St. Thomas, Ont.

The body of the late Mr. Graham is resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell street. The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this paper. (Picton papers please copy).

GAME WARDENS BATTLE INDIANS NEAR LINDSAY

Albert Taylor, 20, Lodged in Jail on Charge of Spearing Muskrats

BROTHER ESCAPES

Shots Fired Failed to Stop Men From Trying to Escape

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 21.—(CP)—His Albert Taylor 20-year-old Indian from the Curved Lake Reserve, failed in jail here today for court appearance on a charge of spearing muskrat. Game Wardens prepared to don snowshoes and trek through deep snow in the bush around Simpson Lake in search of his brother, Noah, wanted on the same charge.

Russell Rutherford, Deputy Game Warden, captured Albert Saturday after a battle with the two Indians on the ice near Sir Joseph Flavelle's summer home. The battle raged also in the bush. Spears were used, fists and shoes shattered the winter stillness. Noah eluded the Wardens.

Rutherford said he felled Albert Taylor when he "smashed" the Indian over the head with a shotgun butt after Albert removed a glove and hit him a "terrific wallop."

With Stanley Curtiss, his assistant, Rutherford chased the Taylors after he saw two Indians skating down the lake, carrying spears and knapsacks.

When the Taylors left the lake for the bush, Rutherford got near enough to show his badge and order them to stop. When they did not, he said he fired two shots at their heels.

Second Clash

Later the Indians stopped long enough for Rutherford to place his hand on Noah's shoulder and put him under arrest. Wriggling free, the Indians made a break for the lake. Shots failed to stop them.

This was the second clash between Reserve Indians and Game Wardens in the Kawarha Lake district in three weeks. Charles Taylor, brother of Albert and Noah, is in jail here, convicted of being one of those implicated in the former fight. Charles Taylor's bail was witnessed by Ellsworth Flavelle and a party skating on the summer home.

When the Taylors escaped then to the bush, they reached the lake. Rutherford and Curtiss, in their automobile, caught up with the Indians.

"I jumped out of the car before it stopped and dragged Albert, the youngest brother of the lot," Rutherford said. "He got up and pulled up his glove and hit me a terrific punch. I smashed him over the head with the shot gun inflicting a deep gash. I had hoped to knock him down and chase Noah, who was speeding away, not heeding his brother's call for help.

"He got up again, however, and grabbed for the loaded gun. I called for Curtiss who was in the car; "For God's sake grab that gun," Curtiss grabbed the gun and by this time the Flavelle skating party all swarmed around but I didn't need any assistance. I flopped the Indian on the ice again, and, taking some rope from his knapsack, bound him hand and foot, and placed in jail.

Rutherford took the prisoner to Sturgeon Point, washed the head wound and awaited till Game Overseer Jay C. Windsor arrived from Toronto. While Albert Taylor 20-year-old Indian, is in Lindsay, given medical attention.

For Future Sister-in-Law

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My brother is to be married very soon.

I would like to do something for future sister-in-law, but I don't know just what. She is at least ten years younger than I am, and I do not know any of her friends, and she has never met any of my friends. Two showers are being planned for her. Do you think it necessary for me to have anything in her honor, and if so, please suggest something simple and not too expensive.

O.

Under these circumstances, the perfect kind of party for you to plan for your prospective sister-in-law is a tea party. For the minimum outlay of cash and effort, you can invite your group of friends to meet her, and ask your guest of honor for the list of friends whom she would like to have you invite.

If you have visiting-cards, you might write your invitations on them, like this:

In honor of
Miss Mary Morris
Miss Jane Elizabeth Clark
Tea
Friday, January third
Four to seven
Four Hall Street

Answer Required

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received a letter recently from a young man whom I knew slightly about five years ago in High School. His sister, who nodded me on the street, and, lacking the courage to speak about it, wrote me a letter from his letter, wrote me a letter from his sister, wrote me a letter from his sister, wrote me a letter from his sister

TRENTON YOUTHS HELD FOR THEFT

Alleged Shoplifters Found in Possession of Identified Goods

Three Trenton youths, who police say are Clifford Staples, Arthur Brownlee and Alexander Reid, were arrested in that town at noon today on charges of theft and shop-lifting in Belleville. The theft of a valuable camera from a local drug store on Saturday night led to the arrest of the trio. Plainclothes Officer Fred Baird, who investigated, stated shortly after 2.00 p.m. today.

On Saturday night a local druggist reported the theft of a camera, giving the police a complete description of three youths who were in the store just prior to the camera having been missed. Police investigations led Constable Baird to Trenton, where accompanied by Chief Bain, it was disclosed by Trenton residents, that one of the above named trio had sold the alleged stolen camera in that town over the week-end.

Charges of the theft of two valuable razors from another Belleville store and other articles are also pending. Chief Kidd stated after the trio was apprehended today. The three youths were held in custody at the Trenton police station pending investigations of three unsolved robberies that have taken place in that town on a recent date. The three Trenton youths charged will appear in the local police court later this week facing charges of theft and shop-lifting.

QUEEN'S STUDENT RHODES SCHOLAR

J. G. Davourd of Kingston Eligible For Course at Oxford

Toronto, Dec. 21 (CP)—Winners of one of the richest prizes in the scholastic world, J. G. Davoud of Queen's University and J. Macalister Macalister of the University of Toronto will be Ontario's 1937 Rhodes Scholars at Oxford University in England.

With 400 pounds sterling (about $2,000) provided by the estate of the late Cecil Rhodes, South African diamond magnate, they will attend Oxford for two years with the opportunity for a third year.

Award of the scholarships was announced last night. Davourd, son of Mrs. V. Y. Davoud of Kingston, is in his last year in the chemistry and physics course at Queen's Macalister, son of A. M. Macalister, editor of the Guelph Daily Mercury, is in the law course at University of Toronto.

Davoud has been one of the most brilliant students at Queen's and starred with the Queen's junior O. R. F. U. rugby team. In a game with Royal Military College last season he scored two touchdowns in two minutes.

Macalister, prominent in Intercollegiate football and undergraduate activities, won every prize and scholarship available to a student in his course.

The Guelph collegiate graduate who won the award spent his summers on the Mercury.

"It's a lot more fun interviewing people than being interviewed yourself," he said last night.

Arms Embargo Act is Upheld

Washington, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The 1934 Arms Embargo Act which authorized President Roosevelt to forbid the sale of munitions in this country for use in the recent Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay was held constitutional today by the Supreme Court.

The Government had contended in addition by the Southern New York Federal District Court that the measure constituted an invalid delegation of legislative authority to the president would "operate to nullify in large part" legislation "to preserve American neutrality".

This ruling was reversed by the Supreme Court in a 7 to 1 opinion delivered by Justice Sutherland.

Justice McReynolds was the lone dissenter. He held that "the court below reached the right conclusion and its judgment ought to be affirmed."

That was the only statement made in explanation of his position. There was no written dissenting opinion. Justice Stone, ill, did not participate.

Recently enacted legislation provides "whenever the President shall find that there exists a state of war "between two or more countries he "shall proclaim such fact" and thereafter it would be unlawful to export munitions to those countries.

This resolution expires May 1. Congress is expected to enact substitute legislation at the January session. The present measure applied only to the Chaco war. The embargo was lifted when hostilities ceased.

PUTTING PAPER OVERCOATS ON TENDER PLANTS

This machine, which looks like a cultivator, is the invention of Alfred Pfeiffer, San Antonio, Tex., shoe salesman, and is expected to save truck farmers thousands of dollars yearly. It puts paper overcoats on garden produce to protect it from frost. Pfeiffer claims the farmer had to cover the produce with earth at the cost of twenty to thirty dollars an acre. Pfeiffer claims paper, which will serve the purpose better will cost less than ten dollars an acre.

SOVIET WARSHIPS TO PROTECT SHIPPING AGAINST SPANISH REBELS

Unconfirmed reports of the seizures and burning of a Russian freighter in Spanish waters by rebel warships loyal to the cause of Franco General Franco, have centred Soviet attention again in the Mediterranean. Numerous Russian warships are reported within striking distance of Spanish ports, should the Soviet elect to seek armed protection for Russian merchant shipping. The aft gun batteries of Soviet warship Marat, one of the ships in or near Spanish waters, are shown.

HOW JOAN LOVED THRU

by

ANNE FORESTER

CHAPTER 22

JOAN READS HER HEART

The woman by the door recovered her poise first. She gave a little tinkling laugh, high and clear, like a broken toy. Her voice was gay and cold—and it pointedly ignored Joan.

"I ran up to surprise you, Mark. Auntie and I are driving out to Gwyn's for dinner—dance—for you know. Auntie's downstairs in the car. As there was no one in the office I came in. I knocked—you were probably so engrossed you didn't hear me." Joan was touched with the frost of that; a frost which stung and burned.

Mark had risen, and he spoke with an assumption of ease. "It was charming of you to do that, Princess. I never dreamed of seeing you—"

A strange ingrished moment when the lights, the rug and that wistful white figure ran in a mad swirl before Joan's eyes. Princess! Hugh Sewell's wife! The cruel subtleties of it hurt when she had thought herself recovered from that old wound! Then the dizzy moment passed and she was bowing with perfect composure, murmuring the other's name with soft pride.

Thelma Sewell's fine-arched brows lifted so lightly that it would have been quite courteous to have made no reply at all and allow the others to think she had not heard. Her manner said that stenographers; patrician party guests who indiscreetly remained talking to their employers after hours—were not in her province.

Joan had no recollection afterwards of the next few moments. She found herself in a street daze. The night air was grateful to her hot, flushed face. She left the lighted thoroughfares and made her way along the darkened and more deserted side streets to her apartment. She was barely conscious of the route. Her weary feet her thoughts.

Why was she so upset over this meeting? asked her heart sharply. Where was her boasted recovery, if the sight of Hugh Sewell's wife could turn her spirit sick within her after this?

Then out of the jumble of her confused emotions came a sharper pain. Long ere this she should not be deluded. It was not the thought of Hugh Sewell as a husband that made her life by the sight of this cloistered Thelma. It was to discover that Thelma was the mysterious "Princess" to whom Mark had phoned on Thanksgiving Day. Was he in love with Thelma Sewell?

A gentle voice was wrung out of Joan's soul. "Oh no—no—please, God no!"

It swept from her mind the flimsy assumption of friendship which she had flung over their relationship since Mark Havens. With a sudden defiant mental gesture, Joan faced the truth in its many words. She was falling in love with Mark—falling in love, too for the first time in her life. For now she knew that affair with Hugh to have been a delirium of extreme youth—a restlessness born of dissatisfaction at home and romantic summer moonlight. She had been in love with love—in love with the thought of her own power over a man.
